Soviets Offer Way Out

'APOLOGY' BY U.S. CRISIS SOLUTION

On-Spot Fleet Adds Ships

From LAT, AP, UPI

An admission of guilt, sincere or not, and the willingness to give up some prisoners may be enough to free the United States from its dilemma with North Korea.

Source of this narrow beam of hope in a week of nervous gloom, caused by last Tuesday's grab of a U.S. navy spy ship and its 83-man crew in the Sea of Japan by North Koreans, was the Russian delegation visiting India.

Well-placed informants in New Delhi Saturday said the USS Pueblo and its crew would be freed if the U.S. acknowledged that it violated North Korean territorial waters — an acknowledgement that could be accompanied by a fine — and returned the survivors of last Sunday's abortive assassination attempt of South Korean President Park Chung Hee. Twenty-four of the 31 assassins were killed.

Engineer of the exchange would be the Russian delegation. Its members have been in contact with North Korea and are said to be willing to entertain a delegation from the U.S.

Soviet Premier Kosygin, speaking with India's Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, however, said the U.S. and North Korea should settle the differences themselves. He is reported to have told Mrs. Gandhi that it was possible there had been "a genuine mistake" in the incident.

HE WOULD PAY

The admission-of-guilt ploy had support in Washington. It came from Montana Senator Mike Mansfield who said that if the price for release of the Pueblo is a false admission of guilt, he would pay it rather than resort to force.

"I am satisfied that the Pueblo was in international waters, where it had a right to be. But if we could avoid a new war by a concession of this kind on the record, I would do it," said Mansfield.

Two other developments in the Korean crisis were these:

● The anti-submarine aircraft carrier USS Yorkton and her protective screen of destroyers, sailing westward to the South China Sea for Vietnam duty, were rerouted to the Sea of Japan where it will join the carrier Enterprise. This will beef up the U.S. naval force in the

Pueblo Blunders Building Storm

Tonkin Spy Ships Crossed Viet Line

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)— Already faced with a charge the Johnson administration is bracing for a storm of questions from the United States Congress over its handling of the Pueblo crisis.

The key question shaping up: By whose decision was the intelligence ship, with its potentially dangerous mission and highly secret equipment, stationed directly off the North Korean coast?

Administration officials say the operation was approved at high levels of the government—but the question remains whether specific moves of the ship were handled routinely by officials in the Central Intelligence Agency or some other intelligence agency or controlled from day to day by officials with broad policy responsibilities.

RUSSIA ON SPOT

Some authorities here think an initial blunder may have made the situation difficult to deal with. The defence department announced at the outset that the U.S. was asking the Soviet government to intervene with North Korea for release of the ship and its 83-man crew. This official public disclosure apparently put the Russians on the spot.

Soviet officials twice rebuffed requests by Ambassador Llewellyn E. Thompson, on Washington's instruction, for help with the North Korean government.

TOO MUCH DAMAGE

Administration officials feel, however, that despite this outward pose of indifference the Russians, who can profit by American embarrassment, will try to bring the incident to a peaceful conclusion since they too operate spy ships along the shores of many countries, including the U.S.

But frustrated officials here acknowledge that so much damage has already been done that no solution now possible can

SEARCY, Ark. (AP) — U.S. destroyers attacked in 1964 by Communist patrol boats in the Gulf of Tonkin were on a spy mission at times in North Vietnam's territorial waters, Senator J. William Fulbright said here Friday night.

Fulbright said that the destroyer Maddox "had been" in North Vietnamese waters prior to the attack. He said that by this he meant that the Maddox had been within the 12-mile territorial limit claimed by the North Vietnamese and not necessarily within the three-mile limit recognized by the United States.

Fulbright said he did not argue that the ships were outside North Vietnamese waters at the time of the attack and he added, "if indeed, they were attacked."

Fulbright's senate foreign relations committee has been conducting hearings into the Gulf of Tonkin incident since last year.

It is a Senate resolution passed within a day or two of the Tonkin Gulf incident that President Johnson has cited as the proof of congressional support for his Vietnam policies.

Quebec Grits' Lever?

Anti-Royal Motion Passes in Breeze

'Star' Trudeau

By RON COLLISTER, Ottawa Bureau

MONTREAL — The Quebec federal Liberals Saturday night voted 4-1 to abolish the monarchy and replace it with a president chosen every seven years.

It was a stunning development, opposed by several French-speaking ministers in the federal cabinet on the ground that it lacked urgency. (See also Page 16.)

Forestry Minister Maurice Sauve stood up and opposed it, but his protest was swamped.

Manpower Minister Jean Marchand, the Quebec federal leader, was present, but abstained in the vote.

Justice Minister Pierre-Elliot Trudeau was not present. But, later, he expressed no concern about the decision.

President of Canada

A workshop had passed the motion earlier in the day. It was expected to be defeated in the plenary session, but it sailed through after a fiery debate.

The resolution urges that the actual functions and duties of the governor general and of the monarch of Canada should be assigned to only one person who would become the president of the Republic of Canada.

The president would be elected for seven years by a two-thirds majority of both the Senate and the Commons.

In choosing him, the "principle of the linguistic alternation would be followed."

There was much speculation here about why the leaders of the Quebec party had allowed the vote to result in such a massive victory.

The answer is made that the Quebec Liberals are getting into a position to deal with English-speaking Canada in the next round of constitutional talks.

Their argument may be that: "We don't want the monarchy, but we'll go along with it as a concession to you. Now what will you do for us?"

Most of the candidates are here, but they are campaigning in the backrooms, not allowed to speak to the rally.

Trudeau is the star, dominating the whole affair. Friday, he was the most active non-candidate or candidate in the place. And Saturday he spent most of

15 Dead

Europe Swamped By Slides

GENEVA (AP) — Millions of tons of wet, heavy snow unexpectedly broke off steep slopes of Swiss mountain peaks Friday night and Saturday morning, bringing death and disaster to an area 120 miles wide in the heart of central Europe.

At least 15 Swiss died, and at least 13 others were missing after hundreds of nocturnal snow slides.

Information from the hardest-hit areas was scant and unreliable. There was fear the toll might be much higher.

With access routes blocked nearly everywhere in the mountains an estimated 15,000 to 20,000 Swiss and foreign tourists were temporarily isolated in Davos and the other major Swiss ski resorts.

Rain storms and blizzards continued throughout the mountains, already suffocating in deep snow.

The Swiss Avalanche Centre issued a new alert and authorities began evacuating villages and resorts in eastern Switzerland.

If Cork Pops... Coming fight for Khe Sanh most crucial of war

By ROBERT D. OHMAN

KHE SANH, Vietnam (AP) — "This is the cork right here," the major said. He kicked a shell fragment in the red dust and added: "If they get past us, they can tear up the countryside way over to the coast."

And in Washington, the highest policy makers believe that the fight for Khe Sanh will be the most crucial battle of the war so far in Vietnam. The battle is expected to begin this week. (See also Page 3).

Holding the cork in place are 5,000 U.S. Marines, either within the barbed wire that encircles the Khe Sanh combat base and its air strip o along a ridgeline that points like an arrow toward the base from the northwest.

Manoeuvering against them are some 4,000 North Vietnamese regulars, forward elements of two Hanoi divisions that perhaps total up to 20,000 men. A half dozen fights developed last week in what Marine officers considered the prelude to a major enemy offensive.

If the North Vietnamese could blast the Marines out of their stronghold here on a red clay bluff in the northwest corner of South Vietnam, the broad Quang Tri and Cam Lo river valleys would lie ahead of them.

A 30-mile march would take them to Quang Tri, the capital of South Vietnam's northernmost province. Ten miles farther and they would be at the South China Sea and well in the rear of the bulk of the Korean area to 30 front-line warships.

● The United Nations Security Council adjourned for the weekend after a heated two-hour debate Saturday between the U.S. and Russian delegates. All countries in the 15-nation council were urged to follow a Canadian suggestion to spend the weekend in private meetings to seek a solution to the main problem connected with Korea.

The nuclear-powered attack carrier Enterprise has a complement of 80 to 100 airplanes. The smaller, 31,000-ton Yorktown normally carries 28 airplanes and 12 helicopters—none of them attack planes but rather those designed for submarine detection and destruction.

SURVEILLANCE SCREEN

Presumably, the Yorktown would help establish a protective surveillance screen around the Enterprise task force if combat operations were ordered.

In other action related to communist seizure of the Pueblo, the Navy Saturday froze all requests for discharge by members of naval reserve drill units.

FIRST DAY

Six naval aviation squadrons in a drill status were among air force and navy reserve units ordered to active duty Thursday by President Johnson. The units began their first full day on active duty Saturday after a reporting deadline of Friday midnight. Altogether, 372 airplanes and 14,787 men were mobilized.

In its announcement, the navy said that applications for discharge from a drill-paid unit (the ready reserve) which had not been processed by last Wednesday will be held up until further notice. There was no indication if reserve components of the other services plan to follow suit.

Altogether, the navy has 133,000 reserves in a drill status. In addition to aviation and shore-installation units, navy reservists man 38 destroyers and destroyer escorts at U.S. ports for weekend training operations.

Canadian Ambassador George Ignatieff proposed the UN Security Council adjourn until Monday afternoon to explore possible ways to resolve the crisis. Ignatieff said Friday the council should "arrange for an intermediary" to try to effect a solution to the crisis.

Another suggestion was put forward by Endalkachc Makonnen of Ethiopia that the council invite North Korea to come to the United Nations and participate in a full investigation of the incident.

North Korea is not a member of the United Nations.

Soviet delegate Platon Morozov recalled the 1960 U2 incident in which U.S. pilot Francis Gary Powers was shot down in his spy plane over the Soviet Union. Morozov said Washington published false coordinates on where the U2 plane was in that case.

SPY CHARGE

U.S. ambassador Arthur Goldberg renewed his charge that the Soviet Union was operating spy ships and said the Soviet ship Gidrolog was now trailing the Enterprise off the Korean coast.

"Such ships of the Soviet navy in the Sea of Japan frequently sail much closer than 12 miles to the shores of neighboring states in the area," Goldberg said.

In action along the frontier between North and South Korea, North Korean infiltrators attempted to penetrate the American defence sector of the demilitarized zone and touched off two firefights in the area Friday night and Saturday. There were no reports of casualties on either side.

U.S. and South Korean troops also hunted down remnants of the "suicide squad" which invaded Seoul last weekend. One more North Korean was killed, bringing the total casualties among the terrorist band to 24 dead and one captured.

Six of the North Korean guerrillas were still at large. South Korean losses in clashes with the terrorists stood at 34 soldiers police, and civilians killed and 40 injured.

Anti-Royal Motion

the day preparing a major speech on the constitution for delivery today.

Trudeau is an architect of the government's plans for submission to the federal-provincial conference on the constitution starting Feb. 5.

Since the rally began, Marchand has rejected separatism as the road to Quebec's eventual extinction.

He said if he did not run, he would support Trudeau ... if he ran.

COMICAL OVERTONES

The meeting has rich comical overtones ... as the candidates try to campaign under a threat by Marchand that they will be rapped if they turn the policy session into a leadership convention.

Marchand has called on delegates here to resist the temptation to neglect this meeting by giving too much attention to the April leadership convention.

The next two months would provide all the time needed to worry about the leadership convention.

"This is why we have asked the leadership candidates to abstain from using this convention for electoral purposes," he said.

Marchand's speech Friday showed that he is pressing for major constitional reform.

REMOVE EVERYTHING

"We should remove from our statues and from our constitution everything that smacks of the colonial status under which we have lived," he said.

"Canada must not only be free, autonomous and sovereign, but she must display the outward signs of these qualities.

"It is especially important that we don't create new links of a colonial nature at a time when we are making serious efforts to Canadianize our institutions."

After a hundred years of federalism, there was "nothing scandalous" about reviewing the constitution and important institutions."

Cross-Town Bus Makes One Cuss

BILL THOMAS' NOTEBOOK — Sunday

BUS STOP: No wonder nobody wants to ride the bus. Anybody who anticipates making a transfer is forced to pack a lunch. Take the case of D. H. Gray, for example.

Mr. Gray left Kiwanis Village on a bus to wend his way home to jolly old Oak Bay. He boarded the bus at 9:55 p.m. and the bus went to the Cedar Hill terminus. There, it was ahead of schedule so it waited for 15 minutes. It got to town at 10:31 p.m.

Here comes the rub: Mr. Gray then had to wait 44 minutes before the next bus came to take him to Oak Bay. He got off near his home at 11:35 p.m.

An hour and 40 minutes to ride just a few miles on public transportation and then somebody up there wonders why people don't want to take the bus.

It would be faster to walk or go by camel train but then we don't have a camel train. Then again we don't have a bus service.

GREAT STUFF: It may be just a coincidence but the Royal Theatre is running the comedy hit the Flim-Flam Man at the same time the legislature is in session. The antics of the rural card sharp and confidence trickster are an object lesson in practical grass roots politics.

The old card sharp who cons his way into a grub stake with the vintage three card find-the-lady game is played by George C. Scott and he does it to perfection. Sue Lyon comes up roses, or magnolias, as a southern belle who wins over the con man's young partner. It's a bit of fluff but a winner if you are looking for a laugh.

THE BIG SHEW: Bass guitar player Doug Edwards will be on the Ed Sullivan Show tonight. He is backing up Fifth Dimension along with Vancouver drummer Terry Clark.

Both men have been with Fifth Dimension for the past three months and before that were featured on CBC's Let's Go Show out of Vancouver.

Doug Edwards is probably remembered from his Golden Slipper days in Victoria.

BREAK AN EGG: After my recent efforts at bringing fine cooking into the home, I have had a number of calls from cooks who said there was not enough wine in the coq au vin.

That was two weeks ago, so perhaps we had better resolve the problem of which came first the chicken in wine or the egg in the omelette.

Omelettes are easy to make and sure fire success if simple rules are followed. The trouble is it's hard to dig up two people who can agree on the method.

Restaurateur Madame Rose-Marie Cardot follows the French method at her Le Coq au Vin restaurant in Bastion Square. This involves just whipping a couple of eggs and frying in butter.

For a really fluffy creation that will dissolve in the mouth try it this way. Separate the yolks and whites of two eggs.

Beat the two whites with two tablespoons of medium sherry until they are really stiff like meringue. Add the yolks and beat again.

If you like, add a couple of heaping spoons of grated Parmesian cheese. Smear a large skillet with butter and fry a clove of crushed garlic. Toss out the garlic and put the egg mixture in the pan. When it is evenly distributed, turn on the high heat and as soon as the eggs start to firm up slip the pan under the broiler for a few minutes. Then back to the top of the stove for the final stage.

The omelette may be folded from each side to the centre or simply folded in half. After the folding it should rise quickly.

At this precise moment, it should be slipped onto a hot plate and served immediately. A glass of chilled white goes very well with an omelette. Try a Chablis or a medium Sauterne.

For a change, spread diluted jam or honey into the middle of the omelette just before folding.

There are endless varieties of filling that are restricted only by the imagination of the cook.

TOUGH CHORE: Rudolf Hess is still in Spandau jail. He is sick and some doctors have said almost senile. The Allies want to let him out on compassionate grounds but the word is that the Russians won't go along with the deal.

It's not hard to see why. Conservative estimates say the Russians lost 20,000,000 men, women and children during the war with Germany. Another 12,000,000, mostly civilians, died in the horror camps. It's hard to have compassion and a good memory at the same time.

CBS Likes Winners Yankees Aren't—Yet

NEW YORK (Special)—The Columbia Broadcasting System, No. 1 television network in the U.S., likes winners. CBS owns the New York Yankees. The Yankees are not winners. CBS is doing something about it.

An announcement from the Yankee front office this past week didn't put it that way, but there can be no doubt the highest echelons at CBS have taken over in an attempt to regain the ratings lead from the Mets, if not the American League lead from the Red Sox.

Here's the new TV look of the Yankees:

● Joe Garagiola, who concentrated on words, is out as chief broadcaster and will be replaced by Baltimore Orioles voice Frank Messer, who lets the action take command. Former Yankees Gerry Coleman and Phil Rizzuto remain as relief and color men.

● Perry Smith, producer of the Yankee home telecasts since the days before CBS ownership, is out. The new man is Chuck Milton, a CBS staff man.

● Numerous camera changes, including an end to the ban on coverage of crowd rhubarbs and also an end to the Yankee reluctance to use such standard gimmicks as replays, isolated shots and superimposition of averages for each batter.

● Introduction of new directional microphones which the Yankee brass hope may even eavesdrop on those mound meetings.

The Yankees didn't say if the ban on showing empty seats remains, but they did join with CBS to deny persistent rumors that the club is up for sale.

CBS may stop denying it if the Yankees don't win soon.

really be considered satisfactory.

There have been reports of the wounding of four crew members of the Pueblo. The ship has undoubtedly been thoroughly examined by Communist intelligence experts. The U.S. has been pictured by Communist propaganda as a violator of North Korean territory, despite vehement U.S. denials. It has been shown incapable of dealing decisively with the defiance of a far smaller and weaker hostile country.

SHOWS RESTRAINT

On the other hand, officials emphasize what they believe may be a long-range gain. This is that the United States has shown great restraint in not resorting instantly to military action with all its dangers of a new outbreak of warfare. But this patience has been exercised at the cost of sweating out diplomatic appeals for the help of foreign intermediaries and finally taking the case to debate in the United Nations.

LEVELS CHARGE

When State Secretary Dean Rusk appeared before the Senate foreign relations committee Friday, Senator Karl E. Mundt (Rep. S.D.) levelled the charge of bungling at the administration because it had sent the Pueblo to operate along the North Korean coast.

Mundt said that if the gain in information made such a risky intelligence operation necessary then the Pueblo should have had air or naval protection available.

The terrain around this base, 16 miles south of the DMZ, is not ideal for defence. A forested ridge towers 1,500 feet above it to the northeast.

Narrow jungle ravines lead south into the district town of Khe Sanh, three miles away, from which a company-size garrison withdrew last Monday after a sharp engagement.

To the west a valley broadens out as it stretches about 10 miles to the Se Pone River, the frontier line in that area between South Vietnam and the Communist-controlled Laotian territory through which the Ho Chi Minh Trail carries North Vietnamese reinforcements and war supplies.

And the northwest are Hill 881 South and North and Hill 861, where Marine detachments watch and wait. The hills rise above a second smaller valley that is also pointed toward the main base.

The Marines lost 138 men killed and 397 wounded last May in a week of bloody battles to drive entrenched North Vietnamese off the three hills.

This thwarted a drive against Khe Sanh at that time. The Marines killed 800 enemy soldiers and then dug new bunkers and settled in to wait for the Communists to make another try.

From the Marine airstrip the dome of Hill 861, a bald patch of scarred earth, is clearly visible three miles away once the morning fog has lifted. The twin 881 peaks are about two miles west of 861.

From there north, the mountains of the Annamite range stairstep up to the peaks more than 5,800 feet high, creating a virtually impenetrable block between North and South Vietnam.

To cut in, North Vietnamese troops move into Laos along the Ho Chi Minh Trail, skirt the highest mountains and turn back into South Vietnam via various valleys. Khe Sanh happens to be at the narrowest point of one of those valleys.

'Artificial Tears' May Help If Eyes Become Irritated

Your Good Health

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: I keep rubbing my eyes, and also they are so dry when I awaken in the morning. — Mrs. G.A.

You don't mention your age, but I suspect you are fairly well along in years.

There is a condition in which normal secretions of moisture are reduced or absent. This may apply to the eyes alone, or to membranes of the mouth and nose as well. This is known as Sjogren's disease.

Relief of the eye irritation is obtained by use of "artificial tears," any of several preparations which can be used to provide moisture in the eyes.

Your eye doctor can prescribe a suitable one for you — and while examining your eyes can determine whether any other problem is contributing to your troubles.

As you doubtless know, (rubbing the eyes isn't a good habit. Too much chance of irritating the eyes, or fostering some infection.

Dear Dr. Molner: I read an article stating that some doctor in a London hospital has found that hard water is better for the arteries than soft water. Would you state your opinion on this? I am most anxious because we recently installed a water softener. — J.K.

My opinion is that there hasn't been enough work on this idea to warrant any conclusions; further, that if it made any very great difference, it would have been apparent long since.

Other factors, such as keeping one's weight under control, and remaining reasonably active, are, in my opinion far more important than worrying over whether to drink hard or soft water. Besides that, there are all varieties of both hard and soft water, so if the type of water has any effect on the arteries, I want to know exactly what materials in the water — which minerals and so on — are important. Just hard or soft? I don't think there's any point in changing our usual habit until a lot more is known.

LBJ Irate At Delay On Pueblo

WASHINGTON (LAT) — President Johnson reportedly is indignant that he was not notified more speedily last Monday night as North Koreans were accosting, boarding and seizing the U.S. navy spy ship Pueblo and its 83-man crew.

The president was not advised the Pueblo had been seized until about four hours after it was accosted and about 1½ hours after it had been captured.

It is unknown if the president could have done anything to save the Pueblo had he been advised promptly when it first encountered trouble.

One possible reason for the delay in arousing him, it is understood, is that some junior administration officers who received the Pueblo's initial trouble messages were perplexed by and uncertain what to do about them.

Ship News to Them

There are indications some of those officers were unaware of the Pueblo's existence — much less its location off North Korea — and hence were understandably puzzled and given to checking the messages before relaying them to their superiors.

As assembled from official sources, the chronology of the Pueblo incident takes this sequence (all times approximate and in Eastern Standard Time):

10 p.m. Monday—Pueblo accosted by a lone North Korean boat and ordered to "heave to."

11 p.m.—Three more North Korean boats appear and Pueblo is ordered to follow one of them.

11:45 p.m.—Pueblo boarded by North Koreans and radios for help.

Midnight—Secretary of State Rusk informed.

12:10 a.m. (Tuesday)—Pueblo again ordered to follow a North Korean boat.

12:23 a.m.—Defence Secretary McNamara informed.

12:30 a.m.—Assistant Secretary of State (for East Asian and Pacific Affairs) William Bundy informed.

12:32 a.m.—Pueblo sends final message and then its radio goes silent.

Message Each Step

1 a.m. — Walt Rostow, the president's national security affairs adviser, arrived at his White House office. It is not known when he first was alerted, but presumably he was advised before or simultaneously with Rusk.

2 a.m. - President Johnson was awakened by Rostow and told of the Pueblo incident.

The Pueblo sent messages at each step of its involvement with the North Koreans, and probably other dispatches in the intervals between them.

It is not known how long it took those messages to reach Washington

Thus it is not known if Rusk, informed about midnight of the Pueblo's troubles, knew then of the ship's 11:45 p.m. message that it was being boarded by North Koreans.

Similarly, although Pueblo sent its final dispatch at 12:32 a.m. and President Johnson was not informed of the Pueblo incident until about 90 minutes later, it is not known when the 12:32 message from the ship arrived in the capital.

At any rate, the Pueblo and its crew were captives of the North Koreans when the president learned of the incident for the first time.

Policy Questioned

Spy Ship Use Reconsidered

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Johnson administration is giving serious reconsideration to its policies governing use of intelligence-gathering ships following North Korea's seizure of the USS Pueblo, it was learned Saturday.

U.S. officials said the policy review involves the state and defence departments and the Central Intelligence Agency, among others.

Sen. Karl Mundt, R-S.D., said Secretary of State Dean Rusk had promised members of the Senate foreign relations committee an administration review of use of vessels like the Pueblo in sensitive areas of the world.

PROBE SOUGHT

Mundt and a growing number of other legislators are calling for a Congressional investigation of the circumstances surrounding the Pueblo's capture Tuesday.

The South Dakota Republican said the administration had not explained "why the ship was there why it was not protected, who was responsible for sending the vessel into highly controversial waters, how high up the decision was made in the chain of command and whether it was the administration's policy to push its nose into critical areas of the world."

Several other members of the foreign relations committee were critical of the administration during Rusk's private testimony Friday, Mundt reported. He added that Rusk, in a diplomatic way, agreed that "the administration had erred."

NO DETAILS

The state department refused to give details of Rusk's testimony. But officials expressed doubt the secretary would have said the United States erred in sending the Pueblo into international waters off the North Korean coast.

Mundt said he was concerned about the "reckless manner in which this administration has been creating incidents of this kind."

"There is no justification whatever in sending a ship into a dangerous area without giving it protection from the air and sea," he added. "To put it out there as a pawn was to engage in reckless and provocative activities."

Ex-Enemies Bury Hatchet

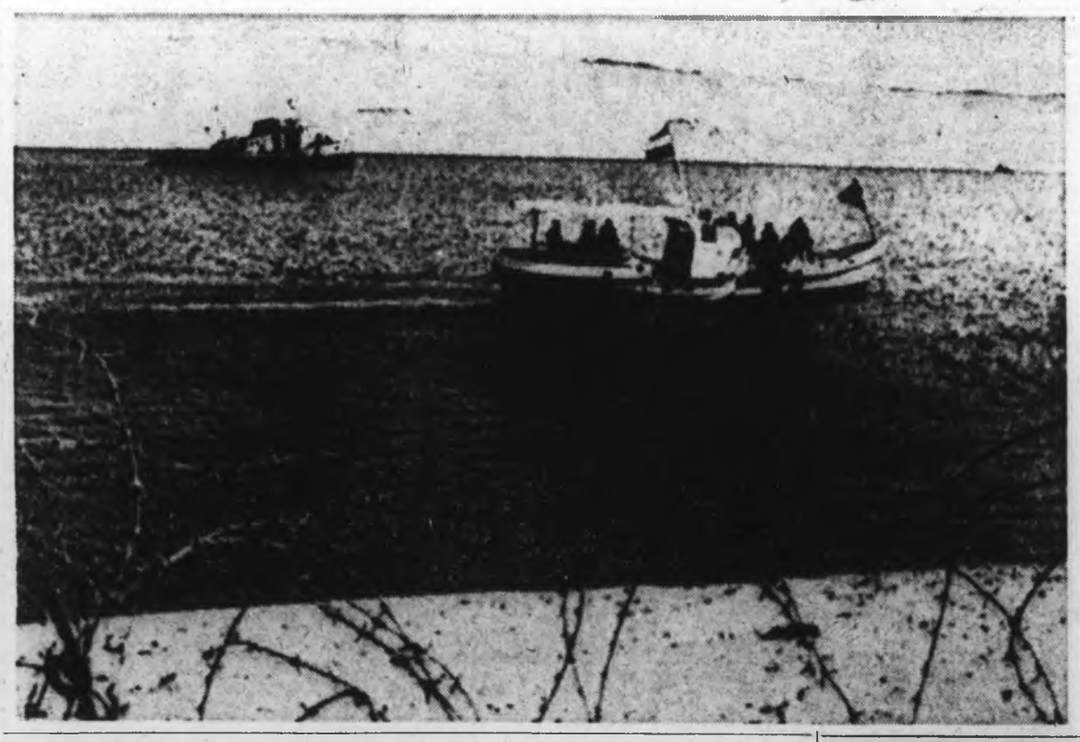

PARIS (AP) — West German and Yugoslav negotiators concluded meetings Saturday with agreement to resume diplomatic relations, an informed source said.

Formal announcement of the renewal is expected this week.

The West Germans broke relations in 1957 when Yugoslavia recognized East Germany.

REGINA (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. announced it will expand its operations in Saskatchewan. About $3,900,000 will be spent on a particleboard plant at Hudson Bay, to make it the largest plant of its kind in Canada.

Reds, U.S. Annoy Prince

I'll Resign—Sihanouk

From UPI, AP

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia — Prince Norodom Sihanouk complained Saturday his neutral regime was squeezed between pro-Peking communists who have attacked some border posts and pro-American Cambodian rebels.

The prince, who has attempted a unique balancing act between East and West in his tiny kingdom on the edge of the Vietnam war, announced he would resign unless both communists and Americans left him alone.

Sihanouk said in an official announcement that members of the pro-Peking Sangkum organization had attacked guard posts near Cambodia's border with Thailand. The Communists "killed some guards and some loyalist citizens," stole 50 rifles and drove 500 families to seek refuge in the forest.

He said the attack, the second such incident in a year, occurred in the northwestern province of Battambang.

At the same time, Sihanouk charged that 2,000 members of a Free Cambodia movement who favor a pro-American regime were "massed near the ancient temple of Preah Vihear and are ready to attack."

In New Delhi, Indian Prime Minister Mrs. Indira Gandhi has written President Johnson rejecting American requests that the International Control Commission step up its policing activities along the Cambodian-Vietnam border, informed sources said Saturday.

The sources said Mrs. Gandhi's letter told Johnson the ICC can act only on specific complaints filed by Cambodia charging its borders had been violated. Mrs. Gandhi reportedly told Johnson the commission's function was "limited" under conditions stipulated by the 1954 Geneva conference.

Three captive American pilots who the Communists say have "shown a repentant attitude" are to be freed by North Vietnam, a brief broadcast dispatch from Hanoi said Saturday.

These would be the first of some 500 U.S. airmen believed to be in North Vietnamese hands to be turned loose. Precisely who, when and where were questions unanswered in the dispatch, from Hanoi's official Vietnam News Agency. It gave no names.

Egypt Starts Work Clearing Canal

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Egyptian boats sailed the Suez Canal unhindered Saturday for the first time since the Arab-Israel June war, to begin operations to free 16 vessels blocked there for the last six months.

The waterway, normally dragged continuously, has been silted badly by sand since it was closed in June. Israeli Defence Minister Moshe Dayan said it could take "weeks, even months," before the blocked vessels would be able to leave.

A National Disgrace

THE VANCOUVER ISLAND Building and Construction Trades Council has described as "a national disgrace" the situation which has deprived Victorians of the opportunity to practise their skilled trades in the shipbuilding industry here and forced them to accept work in a Mississippi yard.

It is nothing less.

The council considers the federal departments of labor, industry and national defence jointly to blame for lack of shipyard contracts on the West Coast and the closing of the Victoria Machinery Depot shipbuilding enterprise.

And so they are. But add to them the department of transport.

Even the representatives of the American industry who came here to enlist men, jobless because of the famine in the shipbuilding trades, expressed regret that such capable journeymen were forced to seek employment far from their home, and on foreign soil at that.

A government in a two-ocean country is singularly lacking in foresight when it allows the stagnation of so vital an industry as shipbuilding on either coast. But a government is even more remiss when it adopts a policy prejudicial to the interests of one section of the country for the advantage of another. That is what the government at Ottawa has done.

In spite of protests, indignation and alarm, there is no sign of a change in government thinking.

The minister of transport, Mr. Paul Hellyer, made this very clear when he said in the House of Commons Wednesday there are no funds for the acceleration of shipbuilding on the West Coast.

He was answering a question and a warning from Mrs. Grace MacInnis (NDP-Vancouver Kingsway) over the exodus of shipyard workers from B.C.

No one is asking for the acceleration Mr. Hellyer mentions but only for a sustained program and a reasonable share of federal contracts to maintain the efficiency and solvency of B.C. shipyards.

Neither coast guard nor research ship orders are in sight for the West Coast, the minister says, and since we are deprived of any chance of success in bids for naval construction the prospect will remain bleak for a section of industry important to the economy of the province and to the security of the nation.

Tory Tactics

CONSERVATIVE LEADER Robert Stanfield's recently expressed view that his party's role at the present time is "not to govern but to prepare to govern" displays a responsible and statesmanlike attitude seldom, if ever, achieved by those who have headed the Opposition forces in the past.

Obviously Mr. Stanfield is not anxious to repeat the Liberal Party's error of courting popular support with extravagant promises which it later found impossible to honor.

"A national government," Mr. Stanfield said, "which takes office burdened by premature commitments will, almost certainly, be forced to choose between its commitments on particular measures and its competence as a partner in an effective federal system . . .

"As prime minister of Canada, I will not want a commitment to an old proposal to prevent my free consideration of a new proposal, which might also prove to be better."

Mr. Stanfield also said that he agreed with a statement made by Prime Minister Pearson when he was Opposition leader that the Opposition role was not to put forward its own legislative proposals, except in rare and emergency situations. Mr. Stanfield was courteous enough not to recall that Mr. Pearson in Opposition seldom, if ever, followed his own dictum in this regard.

Outlining his party's strategy in Opposition, Mr. Stanfield said it was unreasonable and unreal to oppose every major government measure in the Commons. "No government," he said, "can be that wrong and no Opposition can long retain its credibility if it is consistently crying 'foul'."

The Opposition, he said, would do a far more effective and efficient job if it assisted the government when it was right and only assaulted it when it was wrong.

It is to be hoped that such gentlemanly tactics are appreciated and are not misinterpreted by the general electorate as a tacit admission by the Tory party that there is nothing too much wrong with the present Liberal administration of the nation's business.

A Time to Reflect

THERE IS LITTLE doubt that a storm of anti-American feeling is sweeping much of the world today. No longer contained within communist territory it has swept into many non-aligned nations and now threatens to spread into countries traditionally favorably disposed toward the United States.

Though much of this swing to anti-Americanism is obviously the result of Kremlin-inspired propaganda, considerable blame must be attached to Washington itself whose actions and attitudes in the field of international diplomacy are at times difficult to understand.

However, before the Western nations—including Canada—allow themselves to be persuaded to join the popular "Hate the U.S." move, it would behoove them to reflect awhile on the vast benefits they have received under the post-war era of the Pax Americana.

Apart from the fact that the Hitler war could never have been won without American participation, it is unlikely that Western Europe would ever have achieved any kind of economic or political stability after 1945 had it not been for the United States' foreign aid program.

Nor can it be doubted that the American military presence in Europe has been the major factor in maintaining peace on that sub-continent.

It may also be said without fear of contradiction that millions of Asians, Africans and Europeans owe their very lives to the generosity of the American people whose government poured billions of dollars worth of food and medical supplies into their countries in their time of need and disaster.

These are the things that should be remembered at this time, particularly by those who received so much help from the United States in their moment of peril but who now seem so ready to become its enemy for some picayune political gain.

'Unification' Held Proof of Leadership As Hellyer Blows His Own Hunting Horn

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

SAY, how about that Paul Hellyer!

An operator.

Applying his own particularly personal brand of political expertise to the tricky public relations exercise of transforming what a great many people figured would be a handicap into what now could be an advantage.

He and his Liberal leadership campaign staff are striving mightily — and with some apparent success — to make a plus out of a minus.

The heart of his leadership problem was his unification of the armed forces and public reaction to it.

Ramming it down the gagging throats of the Navy, Army and Air Force and jamming it through a reluctant Parliament was an astounding feat in — well, what?

Idiot-simple mule-headedness, said the admirals, the generals and the air marshals, much of the tri-service officer corps, and who-knows-what percentage of the rank and file.

Arrogance, charged the Conservatives, and others of the parliamentary opposition.

There were other terms for it, too: dangerous stubbornness, blindness. He was called variously, by his many opponents and enemies, stupid, reckless, an egomaniac and other unflattering things, all meaning that he bulldozed it through — no matter what.

Through it all he bore these attacks in silence — or at least he didn't answer the charges — being satisfied, apparently, with the success, and success it truly was, of prevailing.

But now with his eyes on the premium political prize, the office of prime minister, he is responding to the accusations.

And managing, in his own way, to turn the debit of his remarkable single-mindedness into an asset.

Paul Hellyer and his staff claim that what so many said was arrogance actually was strength.

They contend that inflexibility really was determination.

Stubbornness was simply firmness.

And mulish, uncaring silence under attack was nothing more than intelligent respect of the right to dissent.

Now this translation of black into white, of weakness into strength, of wrong into right — depending, of course, on where you sit — could be dismissed as so much opinion.

Except that Paul Hellyer nails it down as something more substantial with the question: "And isn't the power of decision a quality for leadership?"

There it is — the alternative of future Hellyer decision to past Pearson indecision.

The switch from a man who retreats to one who stands.

The exchange of a leader who drifts with every stray breeze for one who steers a steady course through any storm.

Paul Hellyer's getting through with it to a lot of people — those who remember how Lester Pearson's self-proclaimed "sixty days of decision" five years ago somehow have emerged as sixty months of indecision.

So okay, you say, the ability to make a decision and stay with it IS a highly desirable quality in a leader . . .

. . . But on what grounds does Paul Hellyer lay personal claim to it?

On the very ground of unification.

"They said I was arrogant," he says, "because I wouldn't capitulate.

"I was inflexible because I declined to chuck it.

"I was unreasonable because I refused to say they were right and I was wrong.

"I was dangerously reckless because I persisted when I was convinced I was right."

How tough was the going?

If he hadn't been as young as he is (44) and instead been in his late 50's, if he hadn't been in top physical and emotional condition, he says he might have collapsed under the year-long, day-and-night pressure.

He is, then, he contends, a man of iron heart and iron will.

And against what long seemed impossibly insurmountable odds — the one man against defence headquarters, the united parliamentary opposition and a good segment of public opinion — he won.

A man of decision. And in a party leader and prime minister that's good.

But what if his unification decision turns out to be bad? It's the chance you take with government.

Though isn't it reassuring to find a politician, a potential leader, with the strength of his convictions?

No Excuse for Exclusion

French-Canadian Candidate Should Seek Pearson's Post

By CLAUDE RYAN, in Le Devoir, Montreal

AS the stake in the next Liberal convention becomes clearer, the possibility of a French-Canadian candidate from Quebec is stirring Liberal ranks more and more.

It's often asked in informed circles whether there should be a French-Canadian candidate from Quebec. Then it's asked whether Jean Marchand or Pierre Elliott Trudeau should stand . . .

Let's say, at the outset, that we are far from being convinced that such a candidate, at this moment, would be a good thing both for Quebec and for the Liberal party . . .

Surely there is no mathematical need requiring the entry at all costs of a Quebec French-Canadian candidate. Nevertheless, it can well be asked whether there should be such a candidate, and then the question becomes more plausible despite the over-riding grave implications.

To this question we may reply that only one reason could be allowed to exclude the possibility of a Quebec French-Canadian candidate at the start. That reason would be the presence of an English-speaking candidate who could step forward and win the attention of the whole country—French Canada included—by his competence, his vision of the present and future, his great moral authority. Before such a candidate, all considerations of race, region, religion, even of language, should be placed in the background.

But the difficulty results precisely from the absence of such a candidate on the English-speaking side. Several candidates whose names have been mentioned possess undeniable qualities. But none emerges with a real superiority transcending the others . . .

This party, to keep its place in Canadian public life, needs a profound revival, a change at least as deep as the one John Kennedy started to impart to the Democratic Party . . .

To the question: Can a Quebec French-Canadian candidate be considered? the answer must be affirmative without hesitation, in the strict context of the personal qualities of possible candidates.

The Economic Pill

Ineffective Remedy

By OTTO VON HABSBURG

PRESIDENT Johnson's austerity plan has had manifold reactions. In Europe, especially, there are bitter complaints about certain measures which, it is feared, may be detrimental to the Old World economy. Not so long ago people were alarmed over the American financial colonization. Now that foreign investments are restricted, people are unhappy that this may lead to a recession. One might really ask what the Americans ought to do in order to be approved.

Criticism nearly always misses the main point. The measures concerning foreign countries should not be a major concern. If one really believes that international financial stability depends on the solidity of the dollar — and this is hardly ever doubted—then the American decision ought to be discussed in an entirely different perspective.

The difficulties of the U.S. balance of payments do not stem primarily, as is so often said, from excessive international obligations, not even from the war in Vietnam. They have their origin in America's domestic inflation, which under the system established in Bretton Woods, especially the gold exchange standard, has the logical tendency to spill over into other countries.

Paper dollar printing makes the U.S.A. into a financial high pressure zone. Excessive liquidity of the market has a tendency to move elsewhere. Under the legal fiction of the present international financial system, the dollar is linked to gold. Inflation, therefore, can be resorted to with impunity and the other members of the International Monetary Fund have the dubious privilege of covering the deficit. America finds itself in the unique position of being able to get rid of its debts by printing additional currency.

This paper escapes abroad. What has been done now is really nothing but an effort to close the present leaks. A renowned economist called this an operation inspired by the mentality of an accountant. He wanted to say that the measures do not show a constructive economic thought, able to remedy the basic ills. A hole has simply been closed; another will open soon.

One can predict that the measures will not be effective for a long time. They are only hiding the visible signs without correcting what is really wrong. They treat cancer with aspirin. A true recovery is only conceivable if first of all the domestic inflation is ended. This, alas, seems to be asking too much in an election year.

Anglo-American Harmony Broken

By ROBERT BETTS

WHATEVER sentimental attachments still exist between the American and British people through their common language and culture, on the political level the special relationship between the two nations can be considered as dead.

Nobody can be more acutely conscious of the fact than President Lyndon Johnson and Prime Minister Harold Wilson when they meet in Washington Feb. 8.

No longer can they talk honestly about having "common aims and interests," save perhaps that both would like to see peace and order come to the world. Where they differ is in ways of achieving it.

The Anglo-American partnership was a remarkable chapter of history. It soared above all national alliances. Other nations envied the free flow of communications between the two governments and the ease and frankness with which members of each could talk together at personal meetings.

There was more to the relationship than a similar tongue and a common heritage of laws and traditions. It meant a mutual understanding, needing no treaty ratifications, that any national interest of one was atuomatically treated as a basic interest of the other.

It welled to the surface for the first time in the First World War, reached its peak in the Second World War, and was carried forward on the emotional wave of the immediate postwar years.

It began its disintegration, despite cozy cliches from statesmen on both sides of the Atlantic, as the two nations prepared themselves for directly contrasting world roles — the one as a shrinking super power, the other as an emerging super power.

While the United States faced up to the communist challenge with businesslike clarity, pursued a vigorous defence policy and left none in doubt as to its determination to hold the ring for the free world, Britain shrugged off the communist threat, hedged on her commitments and began a headlong flight from such responsibilities.

Britain's recent decision to pull its military forces out of Southeast Asia and the Persian Gulf caused "deep disappointment" in Washington, according to the official wording.

Actually the news was hardly surprising. The Southeast Asia pullout had been under discussion for some time, and Washington had begged London not to act with "precipitous haste." The shock was in the sudden updating of the timetable for the pullout — 1971 instead of 1975 — that and the peremptory cancellation of the order for 50 F-111 fighter-bombers instead of a mere cutdown of the number.

Wilson's excuse that Britain can no longer afford such a defence burden may get understanding nods from President Johnson — but the president needs no briefing to understand really where the British Labor government puts its priorities.

Since Labor came to power in 1964 the continuing debate over defence has centred around the extent to which scrapping this or that weapon or base would enable this or that social service to emerge unscathed or, at worst, only marginally reduced.

In the crises of recent years the habit has been formed of automatically sacrificing defence first, foremost and sometimes solely — priority always being given to preservation of the welfare state.

The defence budget has been a lasting provocation to social reformers, and the Labor Party has supplied the main impulse to the thinly disguised shuffling off of disagreeable responsibility. While Wilson has gone on assuring his allies, ever more unconvincingly, that "Britain intends to honor her worldwide commitments," his government has pursued a policy of scuttle and cut to appease his leftists, to whom, as one Conservative put it, "free medicine matters more than a free world."

Even the argument that pulling troops from east of Suez will let Britain concentrate on its European defence role does not hold up. To keep the troops in uniform either in Britain or Germany would cost quite a lot more than to house and feed them where they are now. Abandonment of the Indian Ocean will add nothing to Britain's military strength in Europe, bar a few small warships and obsolescent aircraft that could have little bearing on the military situation there.

The British Economist put it neatly: "If this country packs up east of Suez, it will be concentrating on its European role only in the sense that a man who has been doing two six-hour jobs a day concentrates on one of them by spending the other six hours in bed."

Other voices have been raised in protest at Britain's "shameful shirking of her duties." A member of the Conservative opposition declared: "It is quite clear that the accelerated withdrawal from the Far East is no more than a sop to the left wing . . . The real price for this 'disorderly withdrawal' is walking out on our American allies, defaulting on our SEATO (Southeast Asia Treaty Organization) commitments, leaving Australia and New Zealand in the lurch, jeopardizing about 700 million pounds ($1.7 billion) of British investments in Malaysia and Singapore and abandoning our moral responsibility to contribute to peace and stability in Asia."

But such protesters are in the minority and the government does not speak for them. Wilson represents a growing body of opinion that has been nurtured and kept primed by his own clamorous leftists. It sees Asia as a place for the Asians and no place for white men with guns. It regards the keeping of soldiers there by the big powers as a wicked attempt to perpetuate "imperialism." Even among those who don't go along with such charges, there are many who have been led into believing at least that a permanent Western military presence in Southeast Asia is likely to cause more trouble than it can cure.

The president, in contrast, speaks for a nation which has taken on ever wider responsibilities for the defence of Western ideals, has put more of its gross national product into defence than has any of its allies, and which justifies the cost of its strategic policies by regarding it as a duty to protect smaller and weaker nations against communist aggression.

Here is the fundamental difference between the official attitudes of the two nations — and it is difficult to see how Wilson or President Johnson can regard future meetings as anything warmer than occasions for polite, formal diplomacy between two foreign nations.

Wilson's refusal so far to appease his own left wing by disassociating Britain wholly from U.S. policy in Vietnam has been based on his belief that it would be an empty gesture and might harm a valuable relationship. Now he might think he has little to lose in going the whole way and doing what many at home have long been pressing him to do.

He could, fresh from his Moscow get-together with Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin, present the president with some new communist-concocted formula for reaching a settlement in Vietnam.

If Mr. Johnson rejects it, Wilson could shake his head sadly and hint that, in the circumstances, Britain really could not see how it could support the U.S. position any longer. From there it would be but a short step to lining up with Soviet Russia, communist China, President Charles de Gaulle's France and others in open condemnation of U.S. "intervention" in Asia.

Could President Johnson be swayed by such manoeuvers? Britain's Daily Telegraph, which is also anti-Labor, does not think so. It contained this wry comment:

"What is certain now is that it is beyond the capacity of a British government to change any basic purpose that the administration in Washington does not want to change . . . In the absence of real national power, ringing declarations on foreign policy by British leaders suffer from a technical deficiency, like playing Beethoven's Fifth on the ukelele. Few souls or hearts are stirred in Washington."

No Tears For Leroi

From the Calgary Herald

NO tears should be shed over the stiff two-and-one-half-year prison term meted out by a United States judge to a Negro leader, Mr. Leroi Jones, in Newark, N.J.

The fomenting of racial hatreds is an ugly thing, whether it is encouraged by white or colored. In the case of Mr. Jones, many of his diatribes against the white race drip with a venom which even a white racist like Mr. George Wallace of Alabama would have difficulty in matching.

Mr. Jones is a poet and playwright of some talent. But he has squandered his potential as a writer by using his talent to pour out a gospel of obscenity-sprinkled hatred, destruction and anarchy.

Mr. Jones believes in separation of the races. He believes that Negroes should fulfil their needs by looting, destruction and killing. He has a contempt for the law which strives to protect all U.S. citizens, whatever their color.

It is not surprising he eventually found himself in court, charged with possession of weapons during last summer's shocking Newark race riots. It is not surprising that he was convicted. It is not surprising that the judge should describe him as a man seeking to destroy democracy.

BOSS LEADER

Onus Placed on Others to Keep Affairs Running Smoothly

Nation, Municipalities Disdained

On the floor of the legislature last Thursday the mayor of Vancouver drew his finger across his throat in an expressive gesture.

Many of those who watched could imagine Prime Minister Pearson doing the same thing far away in Ottawa.

Now what could possibly bring the same spontaneous reaction from two men in public life as different as Tom "Terrific" Campbell and Mike Pearson?

The answer to that is the throne speech which marked the opening of the new session of the provincial legislature.

It showed this government, now in its 16th session, is deeply entrenched, rigid in its ideas, and increasingly ready to let someone else make whatever adjustments are necessary to keep the affairs of province and nation functioning properly.

Take the transit question, for instance. The throne speech talks about the concern of the government for this perennially money-losing side of B.C. Hydro operations, which is fair enough.

But then it adds, vaguely and ominously, that "correctives" will be proposed at this session. This is where Mr. Campbell made his throat-cutting gesture, eloquently symbolizing the reaction of municipal leaders, who fear the whole transit question is going to be dumped by the government in their laps.

It may not happen, of course, but the chances of such a dumping being averted seem quite slim at the moment. The only alternative might be for the government to bring urban transit into some government department, as it has just done with the ferries.

The intention, presumably, would be the same — to hide the mounting cost of operations in these Crown agencies.

Why all the concern on the part of the government? The story is told in a prospectus issued last year when Premier Bennett went to Wall Street to borrow more money for Hydro. It shows Hydro borrowings in the next five years will total an estimated $982,000,000.

Hopefully, it adds, some $600,000,000 of this borrowing will be financed out of government-administered pension funds, but that still leaves nearly $400,000,000 to be raised somehow in New York or Toronto.

No wonder the premier wants Hydro balance sheets and

By IAN STREET

those of other crown agencies to look as good as possible. How else can B.C. inspire confidence in the leaders upon whom we depend so heavily?

The municipalities, on the other hand, have to look to this government for handouts in the form of increased aid to meet their growing responsibilities. Last year hospital construction became a regional district function with increased grants in aid from the province.

In this throne speech there was reference to improved and extended social welfare benefits "under which more responsibility will be assigned to local governments and more revenue made available to them."

From previous bitter experience, however, as NDP leader Bob Strachan has pointed out, municipal leaders know the increased aid doesn't nearly cover the cost of increased responsibilities.

So, it looks as though the government's concern over transit losses may be translated into action which would see the systems handed over to regional districts here and on the lower mainland. Naturally, it wouldn't be done without further provincial aid but it's doubtful whether this would cover present and future losses.

It's a measure of the government's over-solicitude for the tender feelings of Wall Street financiers that it's impossible to find an up-to-date figure for transit losses either in the Hydro prospectus or the latest annual report of the Crown agency.

You can learn that for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1967, transit revenues rose 3.3 per cent to $14,500,000 but nowhere is the cost of running the system clearly stated.

However, an educated guess puts the combined loss for Victoria and Vancouver areas at around $5,000,000 perhaps higher.

To make matters worse, local authorities will have to take what the government tosses them. The government's attitude quite plainly is: "Like it or lump it."

That, in a nutshell, is also B.C.'s response to the constitutional question.

The disturbing thing is not the actual terms in which the province's espousal of the British North America Act is set out in the throne speech. It is the rigidity, the inflexibility, exhibited in Premier Bennett's refusal to negotiate anything but detail when he goes to Ottawa for Mr. Pearson's conference Feb. 5.

In the circumstances, it seems strange that B.C. should even attend the conference at all. But Mr. Bennett rejects this suggestion, saying while B.C. opposes any changes in basic principle he will talk about "details." He refused to define these negotiable areas.

This stand could wreck the conference and Mr. Bennett knows it. But he chooses to adopt the same attitude towards Ottawa and the other provinces as he takes towards B.C. municipalities. He obviously believes — and this may prove to be a most dangerous assumption — that in the end economics will settle the unity issue.

The confidence this feeling brings simply oozes from the throne speech (e.g. "our exports are a very important factor in maintaining Canada's balance of payments").

But it's worth remembering, as we sit smugly on our money bags, that B.C. without Canada could not be as prosperous as it is today, and that at least should be worth going east and talking about.

Sweeper 'Cleans' Oil from Sea

CORNWALL (CP) — Henri Lalonde, a 29-year-old plumber, has a patent pending on an invention which may solve the oil slick problem on world waterways and has offered the "oil sweeper" to the British government.

Lalonde began working on his invention after the tanker Torrey Canyon went aground in the English channel last March, discharging oil on the beaches.

The device is like a giant funnel, to be fastened in a framework which floats on pontoons.

The inventor says his oil sweeper can be adjusted for depth as it is pushed ahead over the waves by a ship.

The sweeper rises and falls with the waves rather than being swamped or lifted clear of the water by the wave crests.

Pumps take the oil and water mixture swept into the funnel back to tanks in the hold of the ship where the components are separated, Mr. Lalonde said.

"If the oil is thick enough to be worthwhile, it then can be salvaged."

Lalonde said industrial and government organizations have expressed interest in the device. He had built and tested one model.

WINDSOR DRIVING SCHOOL

Japanese Method Impresses City Engineer

Garbage Liability Could Be Asset

There was enthusiastic unanimity at Wednesday's meeting of the regional board when it was suggested that money be allocated for a comprehensive, district-wide garbage disposal study.

Garbage is everybody's business. We all have it and we all want to get rid of it.

When the subject came up, representatives from unorganized territory, who are sometimes reluctant to go along with plans of urban communities, clamored to get into the act.

Everyone seemed to agree that disposal will eventually be handled by the regional district and that the entire Saanich peninsula, Greater Victoria and the adjacent electoral districts will all be included in the master plan.

A suggestion that it might

CITY HALL COMMENT

By A. H. MURPHY

be premature to start considering the matter now was immediately squashed. Not only was it mature, said Reeve Curtis, of Saanich, but it might be later than we think.

About 60,000 tons of garbage are produced each year in the Greater Victoria area and 27,000 tons of that come from Victoria. Most of it is dumped on Hartland Road just outside the western border of Saanich. To provide trucking service to the dump and disposal costs the city about $300,000 a year.

No one is happy about Hartland Road dump. For years there have been complaints about the smoke which ensues when everything burnable is put to the flame. There have been complaints about rats and seagulls and crows carrying contamination on their feet to spots outside the dump.

The biggest problem with garbage today, say the authorities, is not weight but bulk. The disposable paper industry says that it is only on the threshhold of development and if this is so it means more garbage trouble.

City Engineer Jim Garnett went to Tokyo recently where he saw a new, high-pressure processing plant which eats up garbage at the rate of 450 tons a day and turns the refuse into "iron rocks."

The 2,000-ton pressure press compacts the garbage and sheets it with reinforced steel. Makers claim that the six-ton blocks are suitable for shore protection, reclamation projects and other civil construction work.

They are being used now as foundations for high-rise apartment buildings, the Japanese claim.

The press, installed here, would cost about $1,500,000—not cheap certainly, but no more than the cost of an efficient incineration plant. And if it could turn a liability into an asset it might begin to pay for itself. Certainly Mr. Garnett, who believes garbage disposal should be a provincial or regional responsibility, is impressed.

We have tried many methods of garbage disposal in this district over the years, including dumping at sea, with resultant pollution of our beaches. Perhaps the Japanese have the answer.

Study of Movies, Press Makes Pupils Culture-Conscious

Seeing Is Understanding

"Anti-brainwashing training" is the half-humorous term for a new classroom concept called screen education.

Its aim is to teach pupils of all ages how communication takes place between individuals and groups, and how the mass media operate.

This may sound like a frill, except that an increasing number of responsible educators say that screen education is not only desirable but essential.

"My contention is that the educational curriculum at all levels is dangerously obsolete, to the extent that it does not provide room for systematic and critical study of popular culture," the University of Saskatchewan's Professor Dr. Dallas Smythe said last fall.

"And I define popular culture to include not only the screen, TV and radio, but comic books, pocket books, phonograph records, popular songs and so-called 'underground' newspapers, films, and indeed, consumer goods in general."

Dr. Smythe wasn't sounding off in class. He was part of a panel discussion during the national convention of the Canadian Education Association in Regina.

A cross-country group of educators debated screen education, and the session concluded with passage of a resolution calling on the CEA to encourage "the systematic study of popular culture" in Canadian schools.

Dr. Smythe, chairman of the division of social sciences at the University of Saskatchewan, explained the need for screen education this way:

"In an earlier era, when elementary skills in writing and arithmetic were essential to the development of an industrial society, indoctrination with simple information about skills was a prominent goal of education."

A LOOK AT LEARNING

By BILL STAVDAL

But simple job training isn't real education any more, he said.

"The priority which unsolved problems, especially in human relations, should command should be obvious in this, the 23rd year of The Bomb.

"In short, my plea is for systematic instruction to the end that the individual may learn to protect himself from brainwashing by the popular culture.

"Perhaps we should call the classes "anti-brainwashing."

Dr. Stuart Selby, assistant professor of education at the University of Saskatchewan's Saskatoon campus, said the aims of screen education are the same as can be found in any provincial curriculum guide.

The difference is that screen education really tries to fulfil the aims, said Dr. Selby.

Screen education is education about the "relevant and compelling" media world of today, he declared.

Barry Duncan, English consultant in Etobicoke, a suburb of Toronto, explained how screen education works in his system.

Classroom discussion of today's films and TV programs brings the most apathetic students out of their shells, said Mr. Duncan.

In response to a question he added:

"An invaluable adjunct to the viewing of films is the actual creation of a student-made film. This project will prove to be one of the most meaningful and enjoyable assignments in the high school.

"It doesn't matter that the end product is woefully deficient. What is paramount is the student participation in the creative process."

Mr. Duncan is the organizer of a screen education program in Etobicoke, using movies from the National Film Board and other sources.

"Most English teachers work almost exclusively with the printed word, little realizing the infinite possibilities of the 20th century's most exciting art form — the film," says Mr. Duncan in his introduction to the subject for Etobicoke teachers.

The Etobicoke board of education's instructional services centre lends movies like Nobody Waved Goodbye, No Reason To Stay, An Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge, and The Drylanders.

Their themes cover youth in crisis, man's goals, film imagery, man's visions, man's conflicts and man against his environment.

Screen education is practically unknown in B.C. though it is increasingly discussed and experimented within eastern Canada. International conferences on screen education were sponsored by UNESCO in Oslo in 1962 and in Vienna in 1966.

A form of mass media education has just begun in Greater Victoria elementary schools, using newspapers. A newly-published guide to understanding the papers points out the difference between stories that are factual, interpretive, speculative, promotional or pure propaganda.

Logically, the next step is objective examination of television and the movies.

Hard Work Produces Easy Style

The relaxed, easy-going style of Thelma Gibson is the result of hard work and a lifetime of seasoning on the club circuit.

It seems forever since she left Athabasca, Alberta, for Vancouver but she has been singing and dancing since she was able to stand up. Both her mother and father were in show business and the entire family, including Thelma's three brothers, played in the CBC production of Memories of Shilo.

BROTHER COMING

There is a possibility one of her talented brothers, Lenny, will play the Red Lion later this year. All three sing, dance and act.

Thelma Gibson recently finished two weeks playing in a production of Raisin in the Sun at the Vancouver Arts Club under the direction of Virginia Harrison, wife of jazzman Lance Harrison.

Just before that the busy singer took a holiday in Jamaica looking up members of her family and collecting new material for her own club act.

TOUR NEXT

The new material is now being used at the Red Lion and will be featured in the act when Miss Gibson goes on tour across the prairies. She will play to night club audiences in both hotels and private clubs including the Petroleum Club in Edmonton and the Summit Hotel in Calgary.

When playing dates on tour Miss Gibson has the benefit of using her own trio. The group works out a routine so that rehearsal time is cut to a minimum and the band can play for dancing.

Believe it or not but Spring Thaw is on the road again. The all-Canadian stab at satire opened in Newfoundland Jan. 24 and it was the first time the cast has appeared in that province.

This is now the no-expense-spared version of Spring Thaw with one set costing $5,000. The 1968 version plays here at the McPherson on Feb. 29 and March 1 and 2.

The success enjoyed by the Victoria Concert Orchestra at Nanaimo has prompted a second concert, this time in Duncan. The orchestra under the direction of Laszlo Gati is an abridged version of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

The concert at 8:30 p.m., Feb. 16 in Cowichan High School will feature soloists Robin Wood and Winnifred Scott, the Amity Singers under Rodney Webster and the trumpets of David Fisher and Martin Van Kemenade.

SLAVONIC DANCES

The program includes works by Mozart, Vivaldi, Brahms and Dvorak. Robin Wood and Winnifred Scott will play Brahms' Liebeslieder with the two pianos and four voices. They will also play Dvorak's Slavonic Dances for piano.

The Amity Singers will offer both sacred and secular selections including Jesu Joy of Man's Desiring and Donkey Riding.

Champlin's Choices

Best to See from A to T

By CHARLES CHAMPLIN
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD—The last of the 1967 films have been well and truly launched, or at least launched. Now comes the difficult and unsatisfactory task of sorting out the year's 10 best.

The order is alphabetical and is not a ranking:

Accident: The use of the motion picture medium to convey complex relationships and subtle emotional states was brilliantly displayed in Joseph Losey's spare and understated study of tensions, sexual and otherwise, among some Oxford dons. Harold Pinter's screenplay and performances by Dirk Bogarde and Stanley Baker made for a gem of a film, brilliant and chilly.

Bonnie and Clyde: Arthur Penn's poetic and controversial study of the lives and times of a pair of depression era killers tied critics and audiences in knots. Warren Beatty (who produced as well) and Faye Dunaway may have glamorized a feral twosome, but what no one can deny is that the result was a dazzling piece of film-making.

Cool Hand Luke: Paul Newman was an existential hero in Stuart Rosenberg's film about a contemporary southern road gang. The picture had some lapses but overpowered them and survived as notably thoughtful and dramatic parable about men's costly need for heroes. Fine performances abound, including Newman's and George Kennedy's as a bully turned hero-worshipper.

Far From The Madding Crowd: The year produced no more visually stunning motion picture than John Schlesinger's scrupulous rendering of the Thomas Hardy novel set in the pastoral England of a century ago. Julie Christie was not wholly successful as the heroine, but Schlesinger's evocation of another time and another place was.

Guess Who's Coming to Dinner. Spencer Tracy's final work and last teaming with Katharine Hepburn had to make for an enormously moving film at that level alone, and it did. Tracy, soon to die, was in top acting form. Stanley Kramer's approach to the subject of interracial marriage (Sidney Poitier and Katharine Houghton) was debatable dramatically and as advocacy but William Rose's script was polished, pointed and often funny. And Poitier's performance capped a remarkable year for him.

In Cold Blood. The task of translating Truman Capote's monumental study of the killers of a Kansas farm family was itself monumental. But Richard Books (as writer-producer-director) brought off an honest, sobering, revealing motion picture, earnest and authentic, with only minor lapses into theatricality. As the killers, Scott Wilson and Robert Blake were compellingly convincing.

The Dirty Dozen. Robert Aldrich's tale of 12 soldiers, convicted killers all, turned suicide squad under Major Lee Marvin in the Second World War, was a fast and furious piece of film story-telling at its glossiest. It reconfirmed that Aldrich has few peers at dramatic exposition and the handling of action. The picture was attacked for the savagery of its ending, and it was tough going, but Aldrich's theme was the brutality of war and his heroics were ironic.

The Graduate. Mike Nichols' second film sustained the reputation founded on Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? The story—about a mopey young man rebelling against his parents' values, being seduced by an older woman and falling in love with her daughter—does not hold up under ruthless examination for logic. But it plays as the funniest film of the year. And despite the dark goings-on, it purveys a wry, defiant optimism. Dustin Hoffman was the boy, Anne Bancroft the mother and Katharine Ross the slim, enchanting girl.

Persona: Like most of his work, Ingmar Bergman's exploration of the relationship of two women (nurse and patient) was murky, disturbing and laced with symbolism, much of it private. He was examining the interchange of personalities and also the nature of despair and life without belief. The result was an admittedly difficult film, an often baffling experience, yet another masterful extension of the possibilities of the motion picture medium.

Two For The Road: Stanley Donen's slick romantic comedy proved to be more than that, thanks to its author, Frederic Raphael, who armed Albert Finney and Audrey Hepburn with trenchant observations about the nature and the course of love, single and married. The handling of four or five periods in time simultaneously was technically spectacular. For once a pair of romantic leads had more than two dimensions, and Finney's irascible charm was refreshing. Smooth, but adult and insightful.

That Word Again

CBC Gives 23 Reasons For Warrendale Ban

TORONTO (CP)—A four-letter word repeated 23 times in the film Warrendale kept the award-winning documentary off Canada's television screens, says CBC vice-president Eugene Hallam.

Hallam said the use of the world was forbidden by the Broadcasting Act.

"Any citizen could have launched legal action against the CBC if the film had been aired," he told a citizen's forum.

"It's all very well to say it's in the public interest, but its against the law."

Warrendale, originally commissioned for the CBC and now shown in movie theatres, deals with emotionally disturbed children in a Toronto treatment centre.

Hallam denied the CBC had bowed to "minority groups" in refusing to show the film. He said a controversy that developed when the provincial government took over the treatment centre in the film had "nothing to do with putting it on the air."

Concert Feb. 5

The Amity Singers, conducted by Rodney Webster, will present a concert in the Kirk Hall at St. Andrew's Church at 8 p.m., Feb. 5.

Tickets may be obtained from St. Andrew's choir members, who are sponsoring the program, or purchased at the door. The choir's project fund will benefit from the proceeds.

Dramatic Terror

Bacchae Shows Struggle Between Mind, Impulses

BACKSTAGE with Patrick O'Neill

And the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee.

And both Jesus was called, and His disciples, to the marriage.

And when they wanted wine, the mother of Jesus said unto him, they have no wine.

Jesus said unto them, fill the waterpots with water, and they filled them up to the brim.

The ruler of the feast tasted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it was.

The governor of the feast called the bridegroom and said unto him, every man at the beginning sets forth good wine . . . but you have kept the good wine until now!

In the Bacchae, Euripides says gods appear to men in many forms.

St. John shows us one form, in the pastoral miracle of the water that became wine for the wedding feast.

But such a ceremony gives little hint of the deep and dangerous places men may find in their intoxication.

For such a look, we must follow the track of a different image of God, in the form of Dionysius, hundreds of years before that marriage feast in Cana of Galilee.

Here, the rite of wine is a liberation of the savage soul, bound up with the love that is hate, and the sensuality that becomes a stream of blood.

Whom the gods would destroy, they first make drunk.

The struggle between the wisdom of man's mind and the torment of man's id is played out in dramatic terror in the current production of The Bacchae at Phoenix Theatre, University of Victoria.

The focus of the production is on the chorus, the women who bring to life the torment of their ecstatic revels.

The girls work almost as one demented character, their talent and the work director Carl Hare has done with them gave the production its spinal cord.

Again and again, the girls reached the kind of shuddering peak of sexuality that can rarely be portrayed on the stage.

The women were led by Susan Roy, who has a rich voice and powerful presence.

Giving wild movement to the collective gender of the Bacchae were dancers Deborah Bowes and Judy Cameron.

Others in the chorus were Sally Ball, Willa Campbell, Christine Chester, Sylvia Clark, Dian English, Sandra Gallagher, Marge Hoek and Karen Norlinger.

Sophocles' bitter personal experiences are believed to have influenced his picture of children often ungrateful toward their old parents.

But we have no record to tell us what event led Euripedes to his fascination with mothers killing their children:

In Medea, soon to be staged by Victoria Theatre Guild, a mother's final revenge on her husband is the savage slaying of her two sons.

In The Bacchae, a young ruler is ripped to pieces by his mother, who then parades through the audience, bearing his bloody head.

If the event had been founded on experience, and Euripides' grim nightmare had been carried through by his own mother, we would never have beheld his art.

And we might have thought the flow of wine no more dangerous than at a wedding in Cana.

Euripides had the courage to look to the bottom of the cup, and, with amazing impunity, tell even so powerful a god as Dionysius what he thought.

Legend tell us he was ripped to death by dogs in his old age.

Did Sub Hit Soviet Vessel?

TEL AVIV (LST) — One theory being advanced here for the disappearance of the Israeli submarine Dakar after a dive off Cyprus is that she may have been in collision with one of the many Soviet warships now in the area.

The international search for the submarine and the crew of 69, has been joined by two British and four U.S. warships, another Israeli submarine, two patrol boats and a destroyer which were brought from a training exercise off Messina.

HUNT CONTINUES

Four Israeli, two British and several U.S. planes, including some from the sixth fleet, also are searching and will continue today.

The search headquarters is operating at the Royal Air Force base at Akrotiri, in Cyprus, where Israelis have sent liaison officers. An official spokesman said the Soviet Navy's assistance had not been requested.

Officials announced the 1,280-ton Dakar, one of Israel's four submarines, interrupted communications Thursday.

IN TROUBLE

The possibility that the vessel had been involved with another warship was being considered. It is reported there are more than 50 Soviet vessels in the eastern Mediterranean.

The navy has ruled out hostile action as the reason for the 22-year-old submarine's disappearance.

"If she had sunk we would have debris and an oil slick," one navy man said. "Perhaps she has run into trouble and is not able to surface."

EXPERTS PUZZLED

But other military officials privately were giving her up for lost.

The search is being hampered by low visibility and high seas. Experts said they were puzzled that the intensive search had located no sign of wreckage.

A big reception had been planned in Haifa where the submarine was expected to arrive Monday. Among those waiting to welcome her were the British wives of several members of the 69-man crew who married during their training period in Britain.

Whistle Too Much

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)— The City of Long Beach, new owner of the Queen Mary, has refused to sell a whistle from the venerable ship to students from the University of Washington.

Harry Fulton, special assistant to the city manager, wrote the students who made the offer:

"I'm afraid all involved in city government would be whistling another tune if we dared to part with the whistle of the great Queen Mary."

HEARD 15 MILES

The students had proposed sounding the whistle at athletic events.

However, Fulton advised them that the whistle, which is seven feet long and weighs more than a ton, can be heard 15 miles away.

"It is one of the most far-carrying sounds ever devised by man," Fulton wrote.

"If you sounded this in a football stadium the players might never again hear the signals called. A basketball pavilion could virtually go into orbit."

"You should have a special dinner for members of the legislature," said the man from James Bay, "to celebrate the opening."

Our Maitre d', Leslie, was uncertain what we should serve such a dignified gathering.

"That's easy," said our guest.

"They're going to expect lots of beefs in the next few weeks.

"And every session there are a few who have to eat crow.

"Some of them will want pork, to live off the fat of the land.

"You might provide consomme — before it's over, somebody's going to be in the soup.

"And chicken would be excellent, we're bound to end up with the taxpayer all fowled up," he added.

"I'm sorry I asked," said Leslie.

Hovercraft Nearing Local Water Test

Mariners might get a shock when they see something like a flying saucer skimming over local waters this summer.

But appliance manager Bob Howard is not a Martian. He'll be piloting an air cushion vehicle that is the first of its kind anywhere.

Mr. Howard now is putting the finishing touches on his three-seat hovercraft that he expects will be ready to go in about a month.

Without plans, he began putting the machine together in New Westminster three years ago. He now lives in James Bay and the craft sits in a cold and cluttered garage.

It appears much like the ones manufactured in England, having an oval shape, light-weight skin to direct airflow downward, centre-mounted engine and midships control-passenger cockpit.

With ingenuity he figured out airflow dynamics, control design, mechanical innovations, various special features and the sheet-metal contouring.

One of the biggest problems was calculating the pitch in the two large fans that give the craft its supporting air cushion.

"I designed the fans by the seat of my pants from what was known on the dynamics of air flow, and there's enough research on that to sink a ship," Mr. Howard said.

"I did get some plans later from England and found I was just three degrees out in the pitch of the blades."

WHEELS FOR LAND

The craft has two vertical rudders aft and a rubber skirt suspended around its outer body perimeter to contain the air bubble on which the machine rides.

There are retractable wheels for more manoeuvrability on land.

It is powered by a rebuilt 80-horsepower Volvo car engine that is reduced 3:1 to drive the fans.

The 16-by-8-foot body has 60 cubic feet of styrofoam flotation material in frame chambers to provide 3,700 pounds support. The craft weighs only half a ton.

Lights Plan Shines On

What started as a Centennial project of B.C. Hydro has turned into a continuing campaign for outside lighting of buildings and homes.

The promotion was arranged jointly by B.C. Hydro and several communities on Vancouver Island. In the Victoria area, the building chosen for illumination was Saanich municipal hall.

The idea was to encourage the floodlighting of public and private buildings, not only as a Centennial project, but also as a continuing contribution to the beauty of the community.

In addition to enhancing the appearance of premises, architectural lighting offers increased safety for persons using the buildings at night and also helps cut down on vandalism.

The lighting is recommended for homes and private gardens as well, a B.C. Hydro spokesman said, and free advisory service is available for the asking.

An example of how floodlighting enhances architecture is shown in the accompanying Ian McKain photo of the Saanich hall.

Labor Hearings Planned by MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons labor committee met Friday to set the machinery in motion for what are expected to be extensive public hearings on a controversial labor bill now before Parliament.

The committee was assigned Dec. 5 to study a government-sponsored amendment to the Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act which has drawn strong criticism from many unions across the country.

Main effect of the bill would be to remove from the Canada Labor Relations Board the decision on forming regional groups from present national bargaining units.

Huge Faulkner (L-Peterborough) was elected chairman and Rene Emard (L-Vaudreuil-Soulanges) vice-chairman at Friday's organizational meeting of the committee, which had not met previously in the current session of Parliament.

A five-member steering committee will meet next Tuesday to lay down a tentative schedule of hearings and notify interested parties. Mr. Faulkner said he expects an "open invitation" will be extended to all groups wishing to make appearances.

MAIL JAMMED

Because of the wide interest in the bill, the committee decided to print 1,000 English and 500 French copies of its proceedings. The normal committee printing order is 750 English and 350 French.

MPs and senators say their mail has been jammed in recent weeks with postcards protesting the legislation. The mail campaign has been organized by unions affiliated with the Canadian Labor Congress.

Union spokesmen say the bill would open the door to the breakup of national bargaining units such as in the railway industry and lead to crippling regional strikes.

UNSUCCESSFUL BIDS

The Confederation of National Trade Unions has already made unsuccessful bids to take over the bargaining for CBC production employees and railway shop workers in Quebec.

In British Columbia, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters is reported to be ready to organize regional railway units.

The prime minister's office has received an interim report from a special group set up more than a year ago to study federal labor laws, Labor Minister Nicholson told the Commons Friday.

DELAY NEEDLESS

But he said there is nothing in the report that would cause the government to delay a labor bill now before Parliament that has drawn bitter opposition from unions across the country.

Mr. Nicholson said the report now is being translated into French and will be tabled "in due course."

Ray Ballard (PC-Calgary South) had suggested the labor bill be held up until members have a chance to study the report.

Detroit GM

Strikes Create Car Layoffs

DETROIT (AP) — More layoffs are expected at General Motors, where strikes at three foundries and resulting layoffs from parts shortages have made idle 117,900 GM United Auto Workers union members.

The mounting effect of the strikes led GM to lay off 60,300 workers Friday.

In Detroit, company and union negotiators resumed bargaining Saturday morning in efforts to settle the strikes after meeting for more than 12 hours Friday.

PARTS SHORTAGE

GM officials in Baltimore said Friday that a parts shortage is expected to idle about 5,000 workers at two Chevrolet and Fisher Body plants late next week.

The number of workers at GM and other car-makers made idle by strikes, parts shortages and local disputes rose to 135,000 Friday.

A union demand for six minutes of company-paid wash-up time before lunch is the chief stumbling block to settlement of the strikes at the GM foundries in Saginaw, Mich., Defiance, Ohio, and Tonawanda, N.Y. Some 11,200 workers are on strike at the three foundries.

Parts shortages have made idle another 106,700 GM workers, including employees at five passenger car assembly plants.

They are Chevrolet plants at Flint, Mich., Lordstown, Ohio, Terrytown, N.Y., and Los Angeles and the Cadillac plant in Detroit.

In Canada, about 10,000 UAW members continued their strike against Chrysler of Canada over a national contract expected to set the pattern in further Canadian auto negotiations.

Four thousand Chrysler workers also continued their strike over local issues at a St. Louis plant, while the company laid off 600 workers at a key stamping plant in Twinsburg, Ohio, due to parts shortages.

Cars Destroyed In Picketing

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Four fires broke out and three cars were destroyed as about 800 coal miners resumed picketing at a non-union mine. The Solar Fuel Co. said an $18,000 highlift was extensively damaged by fire. The United Mine Workers Union is trying to organize two Solar mines in Somerset County in western Pennsylvania.

Appraisers Chose President

Wes Hobson was named president of the Victoria chapter of the Society of Real Estate Appraisers at a recent election of officers.

Others elected were Elliott Nicolls, vice-president; Wayne Morson, secretary-treasurer, Fred Marconi, Harry Holland and Ken Walters, directors.

Nickel Job Won By Inco

JAKARTA (AP) — The Indonesian government Saturday named International Nickel Company of Canada Ltd. as the sole negotiator for a multi-million dollar nickel mining investment here.

Dropped from the chance to negotiate is the combine of Societe le Nickel of France and Kaiser Aluminum of the United States.

The announcement came after months of frustrating negotiations and power politics.

The negotiations have been watched closely in financial capitals as an indication how Indonesia treats potential investors it is desperately trying to attract despite massive bureaucracy investors have to fight.

Police Grab 155

Arrests of Picketers Spur to Bargaining

SOMERSET, Pa. (AP) — A coal company and the United Mine Workers Union agreed Saturday to start collective bargaining after state police arrested 155 UMW members picketing one of the company's mines.

Talks were scheduled to begin Monday between the union and the Solar Fuel Co.

Judge Thomas Lansberry of Somerset County said the union agreed to stop picketing the company's No. 4 mine as long as good faith bargaining continues.

The union, which has been trying to organize the mine, staged mass picketing at the mine four times this week.

Wednesday, 104 pickets were arrested.

Four fires broke out and three cars were destroyed during picketing Friday. Two union organizers were arrested then.

Those arrested Saturday were taken into custody for violating a court order limiting the number of pickets to 15.

After the bargaining agreement was announced, Judge Lansberry let the pickets go without bond.

Veteran Knows Where to Find Them

Jumbo-thick strip cut extra long, but narrow enough to fit into a Minnow Teaser, no flasher and an extra slow troll was the combination that Roy Smith used to lead us into salmon in Finlayson Arm.

"I try for a slow tight roll to the strip if I am really fishing hard, but in the early mornings they will take anything that rolls," says Smith who has been fishing Saanich Inlet since 1935 with more than the usual amount of success.

"We got lots of fish in those early days, but it was tough fishing," he says. "We used to row with two sets of oars, but 't was hard rowing with wire line and one-pound weights on each line. We used nothing but spoons then."

He says the fish used to take spoons readily, then they seemed to get wise to spoons, but pickled herring would take them.

"They wouldn't look at a pickled herring now," he says. "They are even particular about how bait is presented to them."

He cuts his own strip from frozen herring.

"I like the bright right side of the herring for my jumbo strip. I use the left side for super strip, or I sometimes cut jumbo out of the left side, but it has a different roll and isn't quite as effective."

He uses a non-sliding double treble hook on his Minnow Teaser-strip setup. He places one barb of the top treble hook through the strip and lets the lower hook hang free. He pulls up on the strip to control the roll. For more action he cuts three little half-inch slits in the tail of the strip. "In clear water you can just see those tails swim," he says.

We used six or seven feet of 28-pound test leader on the strip trolled without a flasher and 30 feet of 40-pound test nylon to a big five-inch by seven-inch planer. He uses 60-pound test wire line on Peetz Recorder reels and on this trip we fished from 75 feet to 200 feet of line.

On one line — and it produced salmon as well — he used Super Strip Teaser and his own Roy Smith flasher with four feet of leader from flasher to strip, and a five-pound trip weight.

Smith says he likes the dull mornings best for fishing.

"See the color of that water," he remarked as we slipped the dockside at Hall's Boathouse, just as first light of day was showing.

The water was murky from the mud brought down in flood waters.

"It will take a different color Tomick plug to catch them today," he said. "You can't do much about bait, but you can change the color of your plug to suit the color of the water."

His long, thick strip is more than one-quarter-inch thick where it fits into the Minnow Teaser. "I don't always troll slowly, but the last three or four times out I have caught more fish on the slow troll," he said.

"The only thing with going slow is that the salmon will play with the bait, but won't get hooked. I watch my rod carefully and as soon as I see a fish is nibbling I pick up the rod and set the hook. Sometimes salmon that are not feeding will only nibble, but you can see the action on the rod.

"If you are going fast the salmon haven't got a chance. They just get hooked," he says. He notes that a flasher will usually set the hook in a salmon.

We hit our first salmon on an inside turn. "That indicates the fish are deeper than we have been fishing," Smith said. We lowered our lines to 100 feet, from 75 feet.

A few minutes later we had action on both outside rods, but no fish in the boat.

We let out 200 feet of line and got more action. Then we lost the fish for a time.

"There might be too much fresh water here from the flooded Goldstream," Smith said. "It might have pushed the fish further out into the Arm."

Smith is a great believer in daybreak fishing. "If you are there at daylight you can stay as long as you like, but if you miss good fishing at daybreak you can't ever get it back," he reasons.

Roy's 26-foot boat, the Poacher Maru 2, is one of those old cabin boats you see around Saanich Inlet ... an ideal fishing craft with an old Easthope motor that doesn't give much speed, but never gives any trouble. Smith and his regular fishing partner, Vern Palliser, are among the Saanich Inlet highliners and have probably caught as many fish, or more, this winter as any other pair of anglers in Saanich Inlet.

Smith knows every underwater hump, snag and weed patch in Saanich Inlet, all learned through years of hard experience. "You see that point, down inlet from Chesterfield Rock. Line it up with that point there and you are fishing on the dropoff," he said. "There is quite a dropoff across the Arm here and the fish lay along it. It is a sandy bottom. You won't hang up, but you might get into weeds."

We like a feed of salmon, but we consider the rockfish fillets, made into fish and chips, superior eating to salmon. Their frames and heads also made good bait for our neighbor, Bill Smith, to initiate his new crabpot on the next day, with some success.

It is best to fillet the rockfish the day after you catch them. In that way you get free of the blood that seems to run through the flesh of the freshly-caught fish.

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI)—I was a little worried there for awhile.

Nearly two months had gone by and there wasn't any word from Leo Durocher. Not a word. I thought something happened to him. Something serious. He had me real worried there.

That's why I'm so glad he broke radio silence the other day. Good old Lee! When he finally comes through he comes through beautifully. Better than anybody you ever saw. The Green Bay Packers, Raquel Welch or Anna Maria Alberghetti.

The site Leo picked for re-entry was Omaha, Neb., a city where the people are more hospitable than in most other places, where you get one of the best steaks in the country and where Bob Gibson, the Cardinals' world series hero, was born, raised and now lives.

Lee was attending a banquet there and Gibson was one of the honored guests.

There are two things you have to say about the dandy little manager of the Chicago Cubs. One, he's always thinking. And two, he's one of baseball's biggest spenders.

Lee has only one slight drawback. He spends his money or yours the same way. Lavishly. At times even recklessly. He always figured it cost two bits more to go first class, and even if he did that figuring in pre-inflation days, Leo still goes first class or he doesn't go at all.

Anyway when it came time to stand up in Omaha and say a few words, Leo had them all picked out.

He told his audience he has a tendency for saying "the wrong things at the right time" and a statement like that makes you wonder whatever in the world gave him that idea?

Leo then looked over at Gibson seated at the speaker's table and said:

"I hear you're asking for $100,000. If they don't give it to you, they're crazy. You are worth all of that."

See that! Turns out that Leo Durocher is alive and isn't hiding out in Argentina. All you gotta do is give him a little time and you'll hear from him. Guaranteed. He's never missed yet.

The point here isn't whether Bob Gibson should get $100,000 or even $200,000 from the Cardinals.

What is the point is that Leo stuck his nose in something which isn't any of his business. It's not anything that's going to change the general shape of the world, or even baseball, because Leo Durocher always will be Leo Durocher and there's something about him that makes you accept him no matter what he says.

Lions' Choice May Balk At Reporting

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League have stated they will make Mike Eben their first choice in the Canadian college draft but they may have trouble persuading the six-foot, two-inch University of Toronto end to move to Vancouver.

B.C. coach Jim Champion says Eben wants to continue courses in German language and English literature at his alma mater.

Lions have first pick in the draft because the last place club in the Western Conference gets first choice this year following the defeat of Saskatchewan Roughriders by Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the Grey Cup final.

PARIS (Reuters) — France beat Ireland 16-6 in their Rugby Union international championship game here Saturday after leading 8-6 at half-time.

World Cup Defence Plan Takes Shape in England

By JAMES CONWAY

LONDON (CP) — Sir Alf Ramsey, architect of England's victory in the 1966 World Cup, has produced his first blueprint for defending the soccer trophy at Mexico City in 1970.

Thirty-five possibles for the regular international squad were summoned to the training camp at Lilleshall, Staffordshire, in mid-January for an initial shakedown. The 1966 cup squad first took shape at a similar pre-competition get-together at the same place.

Three days of hard training, pep-talks and searching tests helped Ramsey try out the veterans as well as a few young bucks.

This year's results will help him to construct a new England squad. Primarily it will have to defend the country's honor on the international soccer circuit for the next couple of seasons, but looming over all is the inexorable approach of Mexico, now less than 30 months away.

Ramsey's first priority is to pick a team for the junior Under-23 side's international game against Scotland Feb. 7. He then needs a short-list squad for the senior international team's crucial tussle Feb. 24, again with Scotland, for a qualifying place in the European championship.

The lineup included 20 players who have been on the full international roster in the past, and all but the Queen's Park Rangers' top forward, Rodney Marsh, have played on at least one or other of the English junior teams. Marsh was scheduled to play in the Under-23's tour of Eastern Europe last summer, but was scratched following an injury.

Ten of the 11 1966 World Cup heroes remained in the 35. Jack Charlton, the only absentee, had a prior commitment along with the rest of the Leeds United team and Arsenal in a Football League Cup match. Neither team could spare players for the training session, but Charlton and several others may well join brother Bobby Charlton in the near future.

A second set of brothers has joined the candidates for future honors.

Cyril Knowles, a Tottenham Hotspur fullback who made his international debut against Russia last December, and winger Peter Knowles of Wolverhampton, a regular on the Under-23 team, went through their paces.

Two more players, Jimmy Greaves and Martin Chivers —recently transferred for a record £125,000 from Southampton—and Cyril Knowles completed a Spurs hattrick.

The younger players are being groomed to take over from any of the veterans who slip out of the limelight in the coming month.

Others like Chris Lawler and Ian Callaghan of Liverpool, Brian O'Neill of Burnley, Southampton's Terry Paine and more are pushing to fill the places of any who don't make the grade.

There will be changes, but the basic formation will be emerging in the next few months, giving Ramsey plenty of time to produce a squad that has an equal chance of repeating in Mexico the scene at Wembley in July, 1966.

College Football Writes New Rules

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The sucker shift, clipping along the line of scrimmage and faked fair catches have been outlawed in U.S. college football by the rules committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The committee also abolished a one-year-old rule allowing only ends and backs to go downfield under punts with the snap of the ball.

SUCKER SHIFT OUT

The sucker shift was eliminated by prohibiting interior linemen from moving once they assumed a position in the line. Under the old rule, the linemen frequently shifted for the purpose of drawing opposition players offside.

In the past, clipping has been legal in a zone along the line of scrimmage.

Under the new rule, no player five yards or more outside this zone may enter it at the snap of the ball.

CAN'T THROW BLOCKS

The new rule on fair catches prohibits the man who signals from throwing a block while the ball is in play.

The fake fair catch signal was being used often so that the signaler could block enemy players coming down field.

Under the new rule on punt coverage, all players on the kicking team are free to go downfield when the ball is snapped instead of only ends and backs.

Spurs, Manchester United Battle to Cup Play Draw

LONDON (CP) — Tottenham Hotspur, defending the English Football Association Cup, battled to a 2-2 away draw against Manchester United on Saturday in the third round of the soccer competition.

It was the top encounter of the day. Manchester United is the English League champion.

The Football Association Cup is a knockout competition, and the giants will replay Wednesday night.

Upset of the day was scored by Dunfermline in the first round of the Scottish Association Cup. Two second-half goals gave it a 2-0 away victory over defending champion Celtic, Britain's most successful team in international competition in recent years.

A capacity crowd jammed Manchester United's stadium for the glittering battle against Tottenham.

It opened with a swift exchange of goals, Tottenham's £125,000 ($326,000) forward Martin Chivers scoring in the fourth minute and George Best for United two minutes later.

Bobby Charlton scored a lucky goal for United in the 77th minute, but a last-minute equalizer by Chivers earned Tottenham the tie.

Macclesfield, the only non-league team left in the English Football Association competition, had a good chance of bringing off one of the biggest cup upsets of post-war years when it led first division Fulham 2-1 well inside the second half. But it appeared disheartened by a penalty decision against it which resulted in a Fulham equallizer, and the London team rallied to win 4-2.

Two of Fulham's goals, one of them the vital tally from the penalty spot, were scored by Allan Clarke.

BRINGS OFF WIN

Carlisle, of the second division, brought off one of the day's finest wins by defeating first division opponents Newcastle United 1-0 on the latter's ground.

Newport of the fourth division and Bournemouth, Colchester United and Reading of the third division all held first division rivals to draws. Reading's opponent, Manchester City, missed a penalty in a game ending in a scoreless tie.

A goal by left winger Hugh Robertson in the 63rd minute sent Dunfermline on the way to dismissing Celtic from the Scottish Cup. Jim Gardner got the second goal.

Two goals by John Gregg and one by Willie Johnstone gave Glasgow Rangers a 3-1 win over Hamilton Academicals.

Berwick Rangers, the team which spilled Glasgow Rangers 1-0 in last year's competition, bowed 2-0 to Clyde, for which Stewart scored two goals in the first half.

Hibernian swamped East Stirling 5-2 after conceding first blood in the 14th minute.

Casper Edges Ahead, Course Record Falls

PASADENA, Calif. (CP) — Billy Casper fashioned a three-under-par 68 for a 54-hole score of 205 Saturday and the third-round lead in the $100,000 Los Angeles Open golf tournament.

Casper, two-time U.S. open champion, goes into the final round Sunday with a one-stroke lead over the 28-year-old John Schlee, now living in Dallas, and Al Geiberger, who birdied two of the last three holes to finish with a 69.

EQUALS RECORD

Schlee, playing ahead of Casper, carded a brilliant 65 Saturday and only Casper's bird on No. 17 from seven feet broke the tie.

Arnold Palmer, seeking his fourth Los Angeles Open victory, is four strokes behind Casper after his round of 69 Saturday.

Schlee's 65 equalled the competitive course record for the revamped Brookside Golf Course's 7,120-yard par 36-35—71 challenge. It had been established just a few minutes earlier when Miller Barber had a 34-31—65. Schlee's nines were also 34-31.

The round started with Casper tied with four others for the lead—Geiberger, Dave Marr, George Archer and Dave Stockton.

Pre-Game Road Trip Ends Jinx

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—Basketball coach Tony Laterza of Akron University had an unusual problem this season, and he solved it in an unusual way this week.

His team had been unable to win regularly at home since it had a 22-game win streak snapped last season. Since then, it had lost four of six, including its last two games, on its home floor but it had won seven of eight road games.

It was a situation which had Laterza worried about Wednesday night's game against Mount Union. He acted by hiring a bus, taking the team to nearby Medina for dinner and bringing them to their home gym just like a visiting team.

The Zips then went out and trounced Mount Union, 68-39.

Chinooks Show Depth To Sideline Killarney

Harold Turner, manager of Victoria Chinooks of the Inter-City Junior Men's Basketball League, doesn't often allow himself to show any emotion after a game.

He was all smiles after Saturday's game at Central Junior High School, however, as the league champion Chinooks came up with a polished performance to win the best-of-three semi-final series against Killarney in straight games.

Chinooks raced to a 16-point lead early in the first half and were never seriously threatened as they fastened a 77-58 victory. Victoria won the first game, 71-61, in Vancouver on Thursday.

Chinooks will now meet the winner of the IGA Grocers-CYO Saints series in the best-of-five finals starting next Saturday and Sunday at Central Junior High.

CYO leads the other series, 1-0, and games are scheduled for Monday, and, if necessary Wednesday.

It was a rewarding victory for coach Moe Turner against the club which had given Chinooks the most trouble in regular season play, splitting the four games played.

Everyone of the Chinooks figured in the scoring, proving Moe's contention early in the season that he had the necessary depth this season to go all the way.

None of the Victoria players could match the 23-point performance of Killarney's Doug Dougan but four players hit double figures.

Steady Dave Wirtanen topped the Chinook scoring with 16 points while league scoring champion Ollie Moilanen contributed 15 points, Drew Schroeder added 11 and Glen Moffat had 10.

Rod Fields, who sparked Victoria with 25 points on Thursday, just missed, contributing nine points.

TRIED EVERYTHING

Killarney tried everything to rattle Chinooks, starting with a man-to-man defence and when Victoria decimated it, switched to their vaunted zone defence, but Chinooks broke it without much trouble for the second straight time.

Playing with poise, Victoria worked the ball incessantly, waiting for the good shot and then sinking it, more times than Killarney would like to remember.

The visitors, behind, 28-39 at the half, cut the margin to seven points midway through the second half but Chinooks closed with a flourish, hitting for eight straight points to put the game completely out of reach with a few minutes left.

KILLARNEY (58)—Bob Steeves 6, Paul Peterson, Doug Dougan 23, Vic Couture 4, Ron Olynyk 7, Dave Marshall 2, Dave Hislop 4, Gary Field 4, Gary Elliott 6, Larry Harvie 2.

CHINOOKS (77)—Ollie Moilanen 15, Chris Hall 2, Drew Schroeder 11, Al Huddleston 2, Dan Wade 1, Eric Walker 4, Glen Moffat 10, Barry Turner 3, Dave Wirtanen 16, Mike O'Connor 2, Greg Schroeder 2, Rod Fields 9.

Kelowna	32	11	16	5	143	145	27
VICTORIA	31	9	18	4	160	136	22

Next game: Today—Kamloops at New Westminster.

Victoria Cougars, who haven't scored the first goal in their last seven games, last night ran away and hid from Kamloops Rockets, 5-3, at Memorial Arena.

A driving first period, in which the Cougars shot often and well, saw the locals run up a 4-0 lead that was never threatened. In their last seven games, Cougars won two, lost four and tied one while dropping out of playoff contention. And the inability to score before they were trailing was a big factor.

Although the squad waited too long in the season to jell, Saturday's effort delighted a crowd of 1,561

Actually the game ran against the expected format. With Rockets only able to dress 12 men, it figured to be Kamloops making the early drive and Victoria coming hard at the end.

It was a disappointing night for Randy Rota, the 42-goal scoring whiz, who went home with nothing to show for the evening but a fat lip. Somehow he got whacked in the face early in the game and was rested for a while. He never looked his usual dangerous self, although he came up with three or four good tries.

Dennis Ferrill, who was wheeling and dealing better than in recent games, opened the scoring. Leading the play, he went in the corner to dig the puck out, and deflected Barry Clarke's hard shot at 6:47. In less than four minutes, Stacy Whiting blasted a slider from the blue line that went in off defenceman Larry Money's shoulder for the big defenceman's first score of the season.

GOW UNASSISTED

That was all the scoring until the last minute of the first period. At 19:05, Greg Gow got an unassisted goal. Half a minute later, the puck was knocked away from a Kamloops attack and Dave Williams finished off a beautiful three-way passing attack with Gow and Terry Mitchell.

In the second period, Kamloops took over the attack but heavy pressure on Murray Finlay resulted in only one goal as Ken Tarnow cashed a pass from Grant Evans at 8:42. Kamloops kept the heat on to open the third with Marv Ferg doing the damage on a pass from Tarnow. But Victoria cooled the Rockets when Larry Limacher really set up Neil Sanders on the open corner of the net. Evans' unassisted goal for Rockets at 18:16 was an anti-climax.

HONEST EFFORTS

Doug Anderson got good honest efforts from all of his lines, and the defence turned in a solid effort. Bob Webb was outstanding and partner Al McIvor also turned in a great game.

The decisive win over the Rockets was sweet reward for the hustle and shooting. In five previous games, Victoria lost five, including one here when a Rota goal at 19:59.9 beat them 5-4.

In other action, Vernon Essos scored a 5-3 win over Kelowna at Vernon.

McCubbin Rink Unbeaten Three Others Still Alive

NEW WESTMINSTER — Bob McCubbin of Richmond was the only undefeated rink in the Pacific Coast Curling Association men's playdowns Saturday at Royal City Curling Club in New Westminster.

McCubbin who drew a bye in the first round of the six-rink playoff to choose the PCCA representative for the B.C. championship against the winner of the B.C. Curling Association playdowns, won the "A" event with a convincing, 12-4, victory over Gary Merrett's rink from Duncan.

Eliminated after the first day's play were former world champion Lyall Dagg and John Arnet, both of Vancouver.

McCubbin handed Dagg, who drew the other first-round bye, his first loss, 10-3, and then Jake Block from Abbotsford eliminated him in the "B" event, 9-8.

Keith Dagg's Victoria rink rebounded from an 8-9 loss to Merrett in the first round to eliminate Arnet, 8-7, in "B" competition after Block tripped the Vancouver rink, 8-7, the first loss.

Kelth Dagg meets Block and McCubbin faces Merrett again in the "B" semifinals this morning. Finals are scheduled for the afternoon and should someone else besides McCubbin win the "B" event, a playoff will be held in the evening.

Four New Records In Just Two Days

KIMBERLEY, South Africa (AP) — South Africa's Karen Muir broke another pair of women's swimming world records — for 100 metres and 110 yards in one minute, 6.7 seconds.

The tall 15-year-old sensation eclipsed her own world mark of 1:07.5 for 110 yards and the 100-metre standard of 1:07.1 set by Canada's Elaine Tanner at the Pan-American Games in Winnipeg last July 30.

FIRST TWO RECORDS

The distance of 100 metre is equal to 109 yards, one foot, so her time for 110 yards covers both the metric and yard records.

The night before she shattered world records for 200 metres and 220 yards backstroke with a time of 2:24.1.

STILL BARRED

Whether the leggy youngster will enter the Olympic Games in Mexico City next October will depend on whether South Africa is readmitted to the Games by the International Olympic Committee meeting this week in Grenoble, France.

South Afirca was barred from the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo because of her apartheid policy in sports.

Full-Court Press Wins for Everett

Everett Junior College built up a 44-21 halftime lead and went on to defeat University of Victoria Vikings, 79-57, Saturday in an exhibition men's basketball game at Gordon Head Campus.

One of the top junior college teams in Washington State, Everett rattled Vikings in the first half with a devistating full-court press and Vikings could only hit on 28 per cent of their field attempts.

Vikings finally started to hit in the second half but Everett was far too consistent for Victoria to make a comeback.

New Tennis Group Forms Pro League

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Formation of a professional tennis league in which Rod Laver, Ken Rosewall and Pancho Gonzales have been signed to contracts was announced Saturday.

George MacCall, a former U.S. Davis Cup team captain, told a news conference the organization was named the National Tennis League.

MacCall said five players had been signed for contracts totalling $1,000,000.

He said Laver, 29, the Australian pro standout, received a contract guaranteeing him $500,000 over a five-year period.

The others are Gonzales, 39, of Los Angeles; Andres Gimeno, 30, of Spain; and Fred Stolle, 29, and Rosewall, 33, both of Australia.

When three more players have been signed, MacCall said, a world tour will begin about April 1 and will last 40 weeks.

The first open tennis tournament, the British hardcourt championship, is scheduled to begin April 22 at Bournemouth, England.

Next games: Today—Toronto at Chicago; Oakland at New York; Pittsburgh at Boston; Detroit at Minnesota; Los Angeles at Philadelphia.

Montreal Canadiens made it to the top of the Eastern Division of the National Hockey League, Saturday night, with a 5-2 win over Boston Bruins, the erstwhile league leaders, at Montreal.

Boston's loss made it possible for Chicago Black Hawks to catch them with a 4-1 win over the Maple Leafs at Toronto but New York Rangers missed a chance to overtake Toronto when they were surprised, 4-3, by St. Louis Blues in New York.

In other action, Detroit edged West Division leaders Philadelphia Flyers, 3-2; Minnesota held second place with a 3-1 decision over Oakland and Los Angeles kept pace with St. Louis in the struggle for third place, with a 5-3 win over Pittsburgh Penguins.

THIRTEEN WITHOUT LOSS

Yvan Cournoyer's 16th goal of the year sparked a three-goal Montreal flurry in the first period and it was all they needed for their ninth straight victory and their 13th game without a loss.

Defenceman Terry Harper with his first of the year and John Ferguson scored late in the first period to give Montreal a 3-0 edge and Gilles Trembley made it 4-0 in the second period.

Brilliant Bobby Orr did his best to spark a third-period Boston rally as he set up Phil Esposito and Ed Westfall for goals but Claude Provost squeezed one for Montreal between them and goalie Rogatien Vachon had little trouble keeping Bruins at bay.

TWO FOR HULL

Bobby Hull flexed his muscles and pumped in two goals, his 33rd and 34th of the season, to pace the Black Hawks to their win at Toronto. Ken Wharram and Bill Orban scored the other Chicago goals, Orban's the first of his NHL career. Bob Pulford got the lone Toronto goal.

Chicago's Pat Stapleton was rushed to hospital after being struck near the eye with a stick in the first period. He was released to join his mates for the return trip to Chicago and may be in action again tonight against the Leafs. Pulford drew a slashing penalty on the play which injured the Hawks' defenceman.

Rangers blew a 3-0 first period lead at St. Louis and former Victoria Maple Leaf Larry Keenan was big gun for the Blues. He scored in the first and second periods to whittle New York's margin to one goal.

Jerry Melnyk and Bill McCreary fired third period goals to climax the comeback as Blues registered their sixth game without a loss.

EASY RETURNS

Detriot, last place club in the Eastern Division, ran their unbeaten string to three games as Roger Crozier returned from Fort Worth to take over goalkeeping duties.

He didn't have a shot on goal for the first 10 minutes of the game and handled only 16 in the game while the Wings tested Bernie Parent 36 times.

Norm Ullman scored his 22nd and 23rd goals of the season, the second on a power-play in the third period for the ultimate winner.

Bill Flett scored twice for Los Angeles and Howie Hughes, Brian Smith and Ed Joyal added the others. Paul Andrea, Andy Bathgate and Earl Ingarfield scored for Penguins.

A Pittsburgh crowd of 11,156 which broke the week-old Penguins' attendance record watched their favorites come from behind a first-period deficit and then lose out in the third period.

Alabama Star Can Smile Baseball, Football Bidding

NEW YORK (AP) — George Hendrick, an 18-year-old outfielder from Los Angeles, was the first pick in baseball's winter free agent draft Saturday, but a second - round selection, Ken Stabler, became the center of a possible signing war between baseball and football.

Stabler, Alabama quarterback who led the Crimson Tide into the Cotton Bowl, was picked by Houston Astros for their Triple A farm club at Oklahoma City early in the second round.

BOUND TO BE PICKED

Stabler, a left-handed pitcher in baseball, almost certainly will be a high choice in the pro football draft next Tuesday.

Commenting on the Astros' selection of Stabler, General Manager Spec Richardson said:

"The club understands Stabler has not made up his mind whether to play professional football or professional baseball. We're hoping, of course, he chooses baseball."

Stabler, from Foley, Ala., is 22 years old, six-feet, three inches tall and weighs 195 pounds.

"I will just wait and see how things go in the football draft before deciding what to do," he said from his home.

Stabler

Hendrick, 18, was selected by Oakland Athletics, who had first choice because of their last-place finish in 1967.

In the regular phase of the draft, the teams selected by the inverse order of their finish last season. A special draw determined the order for the special phase which involved players who had been drafted before but who hadn't signed contracts.

Hendrick was the first of 128 players taken in the regular phase. Eric Soderholm, 19-year-old shortstop from Miami Beach, Fla., was the first of 162 players claimed in the special phase.

Soderholm, picked by Minnesota, was a choice of the Athletics last year.

Scientists Watch An Island's Birth

Its size concealed from aerial photographer by flame-pierced clouds of smoke and steam, new island rears itself from unstable seabed in Pacific near Tongan Islands. Picture below shows steam and boiling sea, symptoms of birth pangs as new island evolves with continuous stream of rocks and lava from central volcano.

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (CNS) — In the normally calm waters of the South Pacific, strange sights are still to be seen.

One of the strangest has been under the watchful eyes of geologists, meteorologists and vulcanologists since early December — the birth of a new island.

Fifteen hundred miles northeast of New Zealand a young volcano is rearing itself up from an unstable seabed.

From a fiery cone barely proturding above the surrounding, boiling sea a continuous blast of rock and steam is being spewed upwards; the labor pairs are severe, and the new island is taking form with a kind of savage resistance.

The island is in the Metis Shoal of the Tongan group, and is right on the circum-Pacific mobile belt, as is the volcanic and earthquake-prone North Island of New Zealand.

The crew of a Royal New Zealand Air Force Orion who flew over the area to observe the island's birth reported that from as far off as 60 miles a 5,000-foot column of smoke, billowing out of the sea and marking the new island's cradle, could easily be seen.

"Steam was belching out up to 300 feet high, and in the centre of the smoke and steam there were great gouts of red flame," one of the crew said.

"We went down to 300 feet, but there were rocks being thrown out in all directions from the volcano. We didn't go any lower.

"It was impossible to estimate the size of the island because the whole area was obscured by thick clouds of steam."

But it is likely that the island, building itself up and outward by the tons of material being flung out from its central crater every hour, is still growing. Geologists believe that it may continue its growth period for many months to come, gradually slowing down its activity as the volcano cools down.

It is not often that the birth of a new piece of land can be observed at firsthand.

To geologists, the new steamy baby of the Pacific offers a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to witness in miniature something that may be akin to the genesis of many of the thousands of volcanic islands that now dot the blue waters of the Pacific.

Shape of Towns to Come

'Dots' Instead of 'Rugs'

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's "towns" will take the form of circles, fingers, lines, dots or rugs.

If they turn out to be rugs they will fail because the whole purpose of building new communities is to cure the rug-like urban sprawl of Canadian cities today, architect-planner James Murray of Toronto told the National House Builders Association.

But they could be successful in any of the remaining four shapes of the future, he told the association's annual convention.

London, England, is an example of the "circle"—suburban growth fanning out evenly from a core.

"Finger" towns will radiate in slim systems from a centre along transportation lines and topographical features. Washington, D.C., and Stockholm, Sweden, are examples.

The "line" is a Russian concept. A single linear spine runs indefinitely with vertical spines of industry and homes reaching from it.

The "dot" is the modern concept of almost-independent satellite communities connected to the city by efficient transportation.

H. W. Hignett, president of Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., said Canada's new towns will all be related to major existing cities. This would limit their development to at least 30 areas of the country.

He predicted the uni-centred city with only one core will give way in some cases to cities with two or more dynamic centres of activity.

Angus McClaskey, president of Don Mills Development Ltd., Toronto, said new communities will succeed only as the result of broad regional planning.

But, he added:

"Planning of new towns and growth is too important to be left in the hands of the planners."

Mr. Hignett countered:

"Planning is too important to leave to private enterprise."

Condominium Idea Watched

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian builders are taking a wary look at the new-fangled concept of condominium housing, with most of them willing to let the other guy try it first.

Members of the National House Builders Association concluded that, in theory at least, condominiums combine the virtues of inexpensive housing and home ownership.

In practice, they will be hard to finance in Canada and must prove a saleable product before they will make much of a dint in the housing shortage.

In condominium arrangements occupants buy the units of a multi-unit project and share the ownership of the land and related facilities.

When the scheme works, it reduces the cost of land for each owner and brings down construction costs. One builder said as much as $5,000 per unit may be saved by building a condominium townhouse development instead of a series of detached homes.

New condominium developments are under way in Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia with apparent early success. Toronto builder Sam Handler said he sold 37 townhouse units in two days with down payments of $2,500 to $3,500.

But Gardner English, president of Mortgage Insurance Co. of Canada, said big private lenders will regard condominium housing as a risky venture until it is proved conclusively that units can be sold and resold without difficulty.

Delegates agreed that condominiums may work as townhouse developments, but it will be harder to sell apartments in high-rise buildings.

Builders expect some money to be available from Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. in 1968 for condominium projects, but not enough to get more than a few under way.

Some provinces are studying whether special legislation will be necessary to permit this type of construction. Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia have special bills specifying the rights and duties of builders and owners.

British Columbia, which found the word condominium distasteful, calls its legislation the "Strata Titles Act."

Starfighter Crashes

BONN, Germany (UPI)—An F104G Starfighter of the German air force crashed near Leck Thursday but the pilot parachuted to safety, the defence ministry reported. It was the 77th Starfighter Germany has lost in crashes since they were introducted in 1961.

Airways Staff

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Aviation Administration has ordered a 1,739-man increase in its air traffic personnel to meet growing airway congestion and bring traffic control centres, airport towers and flight service stations up to full authorized strength.

The Stamp Packet

Monty to Sell Gifts

By FAITH ANGUS

Ten collectors' items belonging to Viscount Montgomery are included in the January all-world stamp auction of Stanley Gibbons Ltd., of London.

They are unique presentation pieces, in some instances signed by world leaders.

One item is a beautiful leather album housing a full range of Soviet issues. It is signed by Nikita Khrushchev and was presented to Field Marshal Montgomery by the Red Army in 1959.

Two other albums, containing Chinese mint stamps of 1950-60, were presented by Mao Tse-tung.

Others were presented by Emperor Haile Selassie, the President of Turkey, the government of Luxembourg and the Mayor and aldermen of Antwerp.

A 4d stamp printed on unwatermarked paper went on sale at the philatelic counter, London GPO Nov. 28. These new printings have become necessary as there has been delay in producing the new designs for the regionals which are not expected now until 1969.

The recent death of Louise Boyd Dale, of New York, recalls memories of her father's visit to Victoria in 1939.

At that time Alfred Lichtenstein was one of the giants of philately, owning a collection that contained some of the world's rareties. A number of these were shown in the first colored illustration of the world classics which appeared in Life magazine of June 28, 1954.

For some years, Mr. Lichtenstein acquired material for his collections in Victoria, including the famous pair of 12 pence blacks.

Mrs. Dale inherited her father's love of stamps as well as his executive ability and throughout her life devoted a great part of her time and wealth to her favorite hobby and to the making of its many benefits and pleasures available to others.

An ardent student and supporter of medical research and all educational projects designed to aid humanity, Mrs. Dale was internationally recognized as one of the most distinguished philatelists of her time.

Some new issues of Kennedy memorial stamps have been released during the past weeks. Ajman commemorates the fourth anniversary of the death of President Kennedy with a 10Rs stamp and a 10Rs souvenir sheet printed in 21 carat gold.

The design shows a profile of the late president and the funeral bier. Printings were 10,000 stamps and 9,000 sheets. birthday anniversary of the late President Kennedy. Denominations are 1c, 15c, 25c, 35c, 50c

Six stamps were issued by Grenada in honor of the 50th and $1 (BWI currency.)

Operation Victim Forgives Surgeon

LONDON (LST)—An unnamed surgeon who amputated the wrong leg of a widow has been severely reprimanded by a disciplinary committee set up by the Birmingham regional hospital board. The widow, Mrs. Beatrice Didcock, 75, of Birmingham, is now legless and confined to a wheelchair.

Mrs. Didcock says, "Whoever it was who made the operating mistake has probably saved hundreds of lives. I was the unlucky one. But we all make mistakes and I am not going to have a word said against him."

Whole Thing Up In Air

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver family is living in an unintentional treehouse they hope will be down on the ground in the near future..

"We can't stay up here any longer," said Mrs. William Delmonico. "We're freezing—it's like living in a treehouse."

The problem: Mr. Delmonico raised his South Vancouver waterfront home 10 feet off the ground Jan. 15 to build a new ground-level living area after receiving a city building permit.

Carpenters went to work reinforcing the underside, forms were prepared for footings so the cement could be poured Saturday and the under area was to be enclosed this week.

But a building inspector refused Wednesday to approve the forms of the footings — thus preventing the work from proceeding—because of a mixup at city hall.

The Delmonico residence will remain aloft until somebody figures out why the first permit was issued and why the second one wasn't.

Mrs. Delmonico said the house creaks and rocks in the wind and drafts blow freely through the unprotected underside off the ocean.

"I've put blankets on the floors, but our three kids all have colds," she sighed. "I've had to send them over to my sister-in-law's place."

Ex-Mafia Killer Tells How Death Boss Died

NEW YORK (UPI) — A former Cosa Nostra Lieutenant now turned informer described Saturday how Murder Inc. boss Albert Anastasia disposed of his underworld superior by having him killed and his body ground up in a garbage truck.

The information came from Jim Carra, 70, a "retired" Mafia killer who made a deal with federal authorities to avoid a long prison sentence, according to a copyrighted story in Parade Magazine.

Carra, who is living in hiding under an assumed name and with an altered appearance to escape retribution from his blood brothers, described the killing of onetime Mafia chieftain Vincenzo Mangano and several other unsolved murders in an interview with columnist Jack Anderson.

Anastasia, then one of Mangano's underbosses, framed Mangano with a doctored tape recording to get permission of top Mafia leaders to murder him, Carra said.

"Anastasia was ambitious to take over Mangano's position, but he couldn't eliminate Mangano without the approval of the fratelanza (Sicilain for fraternity)," Carra said.

MEETING LURE

When they issued a contract for Mangano's death, Carra said, "Mangano was killed by Vincent Squillante on orders from Anastasia.

"Squillante had a garbage disposal company on Long Island and lured Mangano to a meeting in a house in Huntington or Babylon, Long Island," he said, and he was killed and his body ground up in a garbage truck.

CHAIR DEATH

It was for the treachery involved in this killing and in that of another rival, Frank Scalice, framed in June, 1957, with counterfeit money, that Anastasia was shot to death in a hail of bullets as he sat in a barber chair in October, 1957, Carra said. He identified one of the killers as Joe Coniglio.

Squillante disappeared mysteriously several years later after he was summoned to testify before a grand jury investigating the private carting industry.

SECRET GRAVE

Anderson said Carra "reminisced about past murders as casual as a retired businessman might recall his stock market killings" and mentioned one secret grave in the northeast and another near Galveston, Tex.

Carra also said it was only when Lucky Luciano was deported that "narcotics smuggling became an organized operation on a big scale with civilian crewmen on army ships acting as carriers.

SHIP PLAN

"Luciano would send the 'junk,' army ships would carry it, and Mangano would receive it at the army pier at 54th Street in Brooklyn. Men with garbage trucks would take care of getting the junk away from the ships," he said.

The informer estimated the five Cosa Nostra families in the New York City area had 2,500 to 3,000 blood-oath members."

Anderson said federal authorities already have used Carra's information to break up some Mafia rings and put some members behind bars.

Carra hopes to live out his remaining years unmolested, Anderson said, but they may be short. He has throat cancer.

Quebec Town

Bribery Counts Pile Up

MONTREAL (CP) — Three more charges were brought Friday against Mayor Maurice Bergeron of Suburban St. Michel. The mayor's brother and Alderman Roland Lariviere of St. Michel were also charged.

The mayor of the community of 55,000 is already awaiting trial on several charges of accepting bribes in connection with the issuing of municipal permits.

Also awaiting trial on similar charges are four of the city's six aldermen.

WAREHOUSE PERMIT

A fifth alderman, Lariviere, was ordered Friday to appear in court this week on a charge of accepting a $2,500 bribe in return for the issuing of a permit for the construction of a warehouse.

Mayor Bergeron was charged with seeking $3,000 for the issuing of a permit for a social club, accepting $300 on the purchase of firemen's uniforms and accepting $300 for the issuing of a grocery store permit.

His brother, Jean Marc Bergeron, director of personnel in St. Michel, was charged with conspiring with the mayor in a deal for the firemen's uniforms.

Or Rainbow's End?

Gold Standard Holds Pub Up

KINGSLAND (AP) — The pub in this English village could be said to be on a sound financial basis.

It's believed to be standing on a hoard of gold.

Bob Kingston, a 66-year-old retired agricultural contractor turned water diviner, says there's a heap of gold lying about five feet under the floor of the Monument Inn.

He thinks he discovered it when he called at the pub to demonstrate his power to find water with divining rods.

The rods started to twitch—but in a way Kingston has never known them do before. He decided the reaction was not caused by water or beer.

Gold, he declared, was the reason.

Village historians rapidly recalled that the inn was built over the site of Mortimers Cross, a War of the Roses battlefield. They said the defeated House of Lancaster could have buried its treasure there as it fled from the House of York.

Villagers grabbed shovels and started digging. But the packed earth was too tough and they had to give up.

They will hold off for a week until complete improvements to the pub.

Said pub landlord Reg Green: "I have to think of my customers' comfort."

Grateful Cups of Tea Only First Reward

BARKING, England (UPI)—People in nearby apartments flocked around Friday when four men loaded 30 tons of steel on four trucks in record time, two hours. One housewife made the men a pot of tea before they drove away, murmuring thanks. Saturday, the C. and M. Engineering Co. offered a $240 reward for the steel. The men were thieves.

Flames at Pemberton

PGE Wreck Cleared Away

PEMBERTON, B.C. (CP) — Traffic resumed on the Pacific Great Eastern line Friday after crews repaired 300 feet of track and cleared wreckage of 14 freight cars destroyed in a derailment and explosion.

Two tank cars loaded with butane fuel exploded Thursday after a 56-car PGE freight train was derailed two miles east of here.

A crew of 50 men worked overnight Thursday and Friday with bulldozers to clear wreckage from the track.

CAUSE UNKNOWN

J. S. Broadbent, vice-president of the PGE, said Friday the cause of the derailment and explosion has not yet been determined.

"We were lucky it happened where it did and there was no loss of life," he said.

He said 11 of 14 units damaged were a total loss and would be cut up for scrap.

The PGE officials said no detailed estimate of damage will be available until records of the units destroyed are checked.

He said freight cars vary in value from $600 to $20,000, depending on their age and depreciation.

Tools and equipment at a shingle mill loading bay adjacent to the tracks were damaged and a truck parked in the mill yard was also damaged.

Nick Nichols, 56, was the only worker on duty at the Pemberton Cedar Products shingle mill when the explosion occurred.

He escaped injury but a truck he took cover beneath was demolished.

Mr. Nichols said he saw two butane-loaded tank cars jackknife into the air and collapse into a heap yards from where he was standing.

Police Keep Cool As Duel Pledged

CAMBRIDGE, — England (AP)—Two rivals for an honored post at Cambridge University vowed Saturday to settled their claims in a duel with pistols.

At dawn, of course, and at a secret rendezvous.

The imminent challenge to British law provoked little concern among Cambridge city police.

"We're not losing any sleep over these lads," a spokesman said.

But Robert Jarman, 23, a university research graduate, and undergraduate Humphrey Davies, 20, insisted they are going ahead with a pistol duel that could lead to death.

The causes of the dispute are misty, but both would-be chairmen say they will fight it out within two weeks.

Jarman told a reporter: "This is genuine. I got a letter from Davies in which he described me as a foul usurper. It is a matter of honor which can only be resolved by a duel. We have decided on pistols."

The last potentially lethal challenge at Cambridge where Prince Charles is a student, took place four years ago, when two undergraduates attempted to settle a quarrel with sabres. Some outsiders turned up, and then everyone went to the pub.

'World Pacts Affect Provinces'

MONTREAL (CP)—Federal Liberals meeting here Saturday called on the federal government to consult the provinces before signing international agreements that could affect provincial jurisdiction.

A resolution in these terms was unanimously passed during a workshop session of the annual meeting of the Liberal Federation of Canada's Quebec wing.

The meeting's declared aim is to decide Quebec's destiny in Canada and to formulate policies that will be suitable alternatives to ideas like separatism and special status.

ALL FIELDS

Gerard Pelletier, MP for Montreal-Hochelaga and parliamentary assistant to External Affairs Minister Martin, introduced and explained the resolution. He said it was meant to show that the constitution granted provinces "an undeniable authority" over several matters that could be subject to international agreement.

The resolution as passed said the federal government should recognize "the absolute necessity of prior consultation with the provincial governments in all fields over which it does not have exclusive authority, before the signature of any international agreement relevant to the said fields."

It also called for the federal government to invite provincial governments to take part in Canadian delegations meeting with all international bodies responsible for matters over which the federal government does not have exclusive authority.

In another workshop session dealing with the protection of the individual, Consumer Affairs Minister Turner said his department is planning to set up a permanent federal-provincial office that would try to achieve national cohesion in the battle against uneven prices and fraudulant advertising.

DRUG LAW

During debate on a resolution asking the government to amend food and drugs regulations to require bilingual labelling of products, Warren Allmand, MP of Montreal-Notre Dame de Grace, unsuccessfully tried to have the wording altered so that foreign specialty items wanted by only a few consumers would not have to be thus labelled.

An amendment to limit the resolution to goods made in Canada was defeated and the original resolution passed by a show of hands.

Stanfield Challenge

Moderate View Needs Airing

HALIFAX (CP)—Opposition leader Robert Stanfield said Saturday night it is time for the "moderate majority" to enter the debate about Canada's future.

While the extremists in both the French and English languages reached for every available forum, "there is a somewhat greater difficulty in securing the participation of more moderate Canadians."

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Halifax Board of Trade, he said that if the moderates stand aside from the debate, "the extremists can win by default."

"No Canadian has cause to fear the growth and strength of the French language," Mr. Stanfield said. "English-Canadians have nothing to lose from official bilingualism. We have everything to lose if this debate gets out of hand."

RECENT TRAVELS

The Conservative chief believed, as a result of recent travels in various parts of the country, that Canadians were making "important progress" towards mutual understanding.

"For instance, most of the people I have talked to, in all parts of Canada, think it is only fair to accord to French-Canadians living in substantial communities outside Quebec the same linguistic and educational rights enjoyed by the English-Canadian minority within Quebec.

Canadians were not being asked to become bilingual. "What is being suggested is that in areas where there is a sufficiently large concentration of population speaking in the French language, there should be services available in that language."

POWER TRANSFER

Mr. Stanfield called for "a practical approach" to next month's federal-provincial conference in Ottawa, so that the eventual result will be a division of powers between the federal government and the provinces "best suited to serve the conditions of modern Canada, and preserve the bilingual character of the country."

If that meant a transfer of some federal powers to the provinces, "we should be prepared to consider such a transfer, solely on its merits."

But "it is important also to make it clear that the national government must retain its essential power."

Planning Job for Region

A proposal to place regional planning under the jurisdiction of the Capital Region will be made in February, Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis said Saturday.

The reeve, chairman of the board, said he initiated discussion on the subject some time ago and will present the proposal at the board's first meeting of its new year in February.

"I'll put forward the proposition and let the board take it from there," he said.

Simplification is the aim of the proposal, he added.

"It would simply bring the Capital Region Planning Board under the umbrella of regional district government without altering the duties or functions of the planning board."

"Regional planning, as opposed to local planning, would then be a function of the regional district.

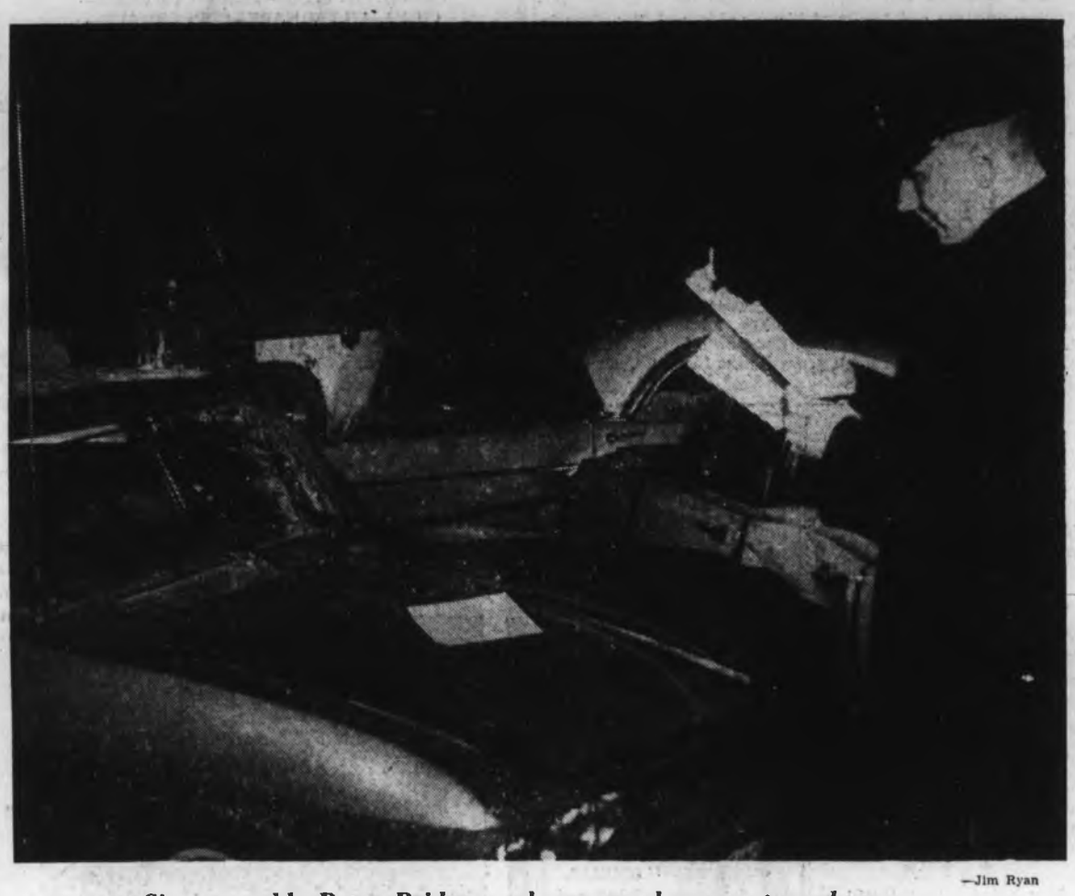

"The Capital Regional Planning Board is at present an advisory body only. The regional district board is a legislative body. Therefore, a planning proposal put forward by the regional district could be made law."

The reeve said now that a regional district is established and working well "we should attempt to avoid perpetuating single-purpose boards."

"Assume that there had not been a Capital Region Planning Board in existence here at the time the regional district board was formed. It would have been quite likely then that planning would have been one of the regional district's functions right from the outset. But, since the CRPB was operative, there wasn't the urgency that might have been found in regional districts elsewhere in the province."

The reeve feels that the time is now right to consider transferring the planning board to the jurisdiction of the Capital Region board.

City constable Peter Bridgewood assesses damage at crash scene

Bus, Car Plow Up Park Lot

By MARK DICKINSON

It took five wreckers Saturday night to untangle the wreckage after an airport bus collided with a small car and both vehicles slammed into a crowded parking lot.

Two persons were injured and eight cars and the bus were badly damaged in the spectacular crash at Langley and Broughton.

Taken to hospital were Robert Aker and Lloyd Ironstand, both 22, of Work Point Barracks, occupants of the car that collided with the bus.

PASSENGER UNHURT

Joseph Barszewski, 21, also of Work Point Barracks, a passenger in the small vehicle, escaped uninjured.

Driver of the C and C Transportation bus was identified as Richard Layton, 28, of 2940 Doncaster.

The crash occurred about 10:30 p.m. when the bus southbound on Langley collided with the car moving east on Broughton. Impact threw the car about 30 feet south and into the parking lot. The empty bus also plowed headlong into the lot.

In a chain reaction, six unoccupied cars were smashed.

"You can't even park around here without getting clobbered," one irate car owner said.

'NO CHANCE'

It took a long time for police to identify owners of the parked cars as they arrived one by one for their vehicles.

St. Joseph's Hospital reported both Aker and Ironstand in satisfactory condition with head injuries.

Bus driver Layton said he didn't see the car until "he was about three feet in front of me. I just didn't have a chance to stop."

'More Together Than Alone...'

By DON GAIN

More than 150 Victorians who are dedicated to peace, met in Pendray Hall of Metropolitan United Church Saturday night to eat a non-feast of rice and tea and donate $401 to aid war-stricken civilians in North and South Vietnam.

The meal, sponsored by St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral, was attended by Roman Catholics, atheists, Quakers, humanists, Buddhists, Anglicans, Unitarians, United Church members, a Lutheran, a theosophist and a member of Victoria Truth Centre.

"We are basically all members of one human family and when one branch is suffering, we are all concerned," Msgr. M. T. O'Connell of St. Andrew's Cathedral told the meeting..

He said the dignity of each individual person should also be upheld.

"When we see certain members of the human race degraded, neglected, abandoned in one way or another, again we are concerned."

The monsignor said that victims of war should have our first claim.

"Death and starvation stare them in the face every day."

He expressed the hope that the sacrifices made in Victoria would inspire millions to a simplicity in meals and in living.

He was referring to several Victoria groups who last week carried out a three-day fast culminating in the meagre meal Saturday night. Several of the groups were at the non-feast.

In addition to the money collected for civilian aid, the gathering gave participants a chance to identify with the Vietnamese people, Mrs. Mira Yarwood said.

"It also helped us to identify with one another," said Mrs. Yarwood, who is chairman of the Victoria committee of the Canadian Aid for Vietnam Civilians.

She said another non-feast would be held by the social action committee of the Unitarian Church in Servetus Hall on March 23.

"This sort of thing could do a lot for more peaceful relationships in our own country," Msgr. O'Connell said.

"It's a wonderful thing to get all faiths and no faiths together in one room in Victoria," said Geoffrey Mitchell of Metchosin, whose wife Jacqueline had put in a three-day fast.

Rev. Laura Butler of Metropolitan Church, who is vice-chairman of the Victoria committee of CAVC, said it was an opportunity for everyone to face up to the responsibility that this is his or her world.

Mrs. Lloyd Brereton, whose husband helped organize the event, said it was encouraging to find such a wide spectrum of the community represented.

Miss Butler pointed to the placemats.

"I think this sums up the way we feel," she said.

Printed on the mats were the following:

"I am only one
But I am one
I cannot do everything
But I can do something.
Because I cannot do everything
I shall not refuse to do
The something I can do.

"Here we are only a few
But we are quite a few
We cannot do everything
But we can do more together
Than each of us can do alone."

Quaker Vivian Etheridge was diner.

Scientist Defends Society

Planners Strangling Ideas

By JOHN MATTERS

Planners have mesmerized local politicians and together they exert insidious controls on society, a New Westminster soils scientist said here Saturday.

"Historically, this country was built up by individuals who believed in free enterprise," Al Keenleyside said in an interview. "Now we have bureaucracies moving in everywhere, specifying what we can do with everything."

He was in Victoria for the annual meeting of the British Columbia Institute of Agrologists.

SOCIETY AS CHILD

The planners offend the free enterprise principle the most, he said. They treat society as if it were a child, telling the people at every turn what they can and cannot do.

"They are doing this to private enterprise ... inhibiting its growth."

Mr. Keenleyside said he also was troubled by the "rigidity" of planners.

AT ALL LEVELS

He said when someone has a proposal for a new building, for example, "people who do not put their money where their mouth is have to be contested and challenged at all levels of government."

"In some parts of British Columbia, the municipal planners will even try to tell you what building design they want," said Mr. Keenleyside. "It is not their money which is being invested, and it is not their money which will be lost of the thing goes broke."

ALWAYS ACCEPTED

The problem, he explained, seems to have its source in the relationship which planners have with politicians. The planners have set themselves up on pedestals "and while they are not always accurate, their opinions always seem to be accepted by people who are elected by the taxpayers."

He said there are many incongruities in local planning and building regulations. For example, it is not uncommon for fences taller than four feet to be prohibited but there is nothing to stop anyone from growing a 20-foot tree.

ALL OUR RIGHTS?

"This is a fact ... people don't realize it ... this is absolute socialism," added Mr. Keenleyside. "Do we have to give up all our rights?"

Because more government agencies are gaining the power to tell people what they can do with their money, Canada is becoming a "socialized bureaucracy."

"The United Kingdom is an example of this and they're broke," he said. "This also could happen to us."

Mr. Keenleyside, who stressed he was not speaking on behalf of his professional group, also attacked agricultural marketing boards.

He said Victoria bulb grower Geoff Vantreight does not have a marketing board handling his daffodils, for example.

"He has no government board to shield him. He knows that if he doesn't maintain quality, his whole business will go down the drain."

INFERIOR PRODUCT

Mr. Keenleyside said B.C. apples are an example of a marketing board product. The "mediocre" apples which it is selling could probably be bought for $2 a box if the growers were more competitive.

For Overseas Work

March May Start B.C. Aid Program

By BILL STAVDAL

An international teach-in next summer may be the sequel to the $110,000 March for Millions, said student organizer Bob Taylor on Saturday.

Victoria's successful community hike last fall may blossom into a province-wide international aid program, Mr. Taylor forecast.

OVERSEAS WORK

He made the prediction at a mass teen-dance in the Bay Street Armory where cheques totalling $110,649.35 were presented to two agencies for work overseas.

The money was raised by more than 10,000 sponsored hikers who walked 26 miles Nov. 25 to raise money for underdeveloped countries.

FREE DANCE

The free dance was held to thank the marchers, most of whom were teenagers. About 1,500 attended.

The event paused at 9 p.m. for presentation of cheques.

One, for $88,519.48 was given to Charles Archibald of Burnaby, chairman of Project 100. The organization raised money among B.C. school children for education vans which will go to developing Commonwealth countries.

HUNGER RELIEF

Another cheque for $22,129.87 went to Dr. Victor Rogers of Victoria, chairman of the local Oxfam organization. Oxfam is involved in hunger relief.

Mr. Taylor, of 1951 Argyle, a student at the University of Victoria, turned the money over to L. J. Wallace, deputy provincial secretary and chairman of the B.C. Centennial Commission.

Mr. Wallace then presented the cheques to Mr. Archibald and Dr. Rogers.

Congratulations to the teenagers were offered by Victoria's Mayor Hugh Stephen and former Esquimalt councillor Arthur Mebs, chairman of last year's Greater Victoria centennial celebrations committee.

Mr. Taylor said afterward that he hopes to bring speakers from developing countries to address a teach-in next summer. It might be held outdoors in Beacon Hill Park, he suggested.

"We want to tell the young people how the money is being spent, and of the need," said Mr. Taylor.

"What we are really hoping for is an international exchange program, hopefully on a province-wide basis."

Local Government

Colwood-Langford Need

By DON GAIN

Unorganized territories—particularly Colwood and Langford—badly need local government, Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis told the annual meeting of the Association of Women Electors at Holyrood House Thursday.

"As chairman of the regional district," the reeve said, "I feel free to warn residents of these unorganized areas that without municipal government their problems will multiply, their growth and development will continue in haphazard fashion, and their districts will eventually lose much of their present charm and attractiveness."

The reeve said the argument that local incorporation would boost taxes "is not entirely valid."

He said taxes in these districts would undoubtedly increase "with local government or without it."

Unless the establishment of a municipality or municipalities takes place soon, he warned, "irreparable harm will be done to these large and still-desirable sections of the Greater Victoria region."

"To those members of the A.W.E. who live in the districts to which I have referred, I direct the plea that you continue to study this problem and take the initiative which will, hopefully, lead to incorporation just as quickly as possible."

Elected president at the meeting was Mrs. Charles Smith. Other officers elected were: Mrs. Hazel Hodson, first vice-president; Mrs. D. M. Boyd, second vice-president; Mrs. A. B. Hall, treasurer; Mrs. E. O'Regan, recording secretary; Mrs. F. J. Laughlin, corresponding secretary; Mrs. H. A. Ray, past president.

New European imports at Wilson's . . .

The first of the new spring crop of European imports is starting to arrive at Wilson's . . . There's a marvellous . . . and quite unique . . . knit dress and jacket from Austria . . . Unique on two counts, really . . . the first being that both dress and jacket are completely reversible . . . ivory on one side, cyclamen pink the other . . . fastening with matching leather buttons . . . And on the second count . . . a complete set of short sleeves to sew into the dress if you'd rather have it sleeved than sleeveless! . . . Size 10 . . . Another Austrian beauty is an ivory alpaca cocktail dress . . . with cutout lacy design on the bodice . . . through which you can see the taffeta lining of the palest, most delicate green . . . Just two of these . . . sizes 8 and 12 . . . wonderful to wear because they're light as a feather . . . From Sweden . . . bearing the Hettemarks label . . . a couple of beautifully tailored suits . . . one in lime wool gabardine with slightly fitted jacket . . . size 10 . . . The other, in navy, has a natty double-breasted and belted jacket, pleated skirt . . . Both exemplify the newest in European tailoring . . . From Italy comes the niftiest knit slack-and-top outfit we've ever seen . . . A lovely shade of turquoise, size 10 . . . Top has a suede front, back zipper and turtle neck . . . slim pants firmly knit to hold their shape . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

A French fashion consultant predicts the world-wide acceptance of pants. Women, she says, will be able to wear pant suits and culotte skirts on practically any occasion.

Norwegian dinnerware impervious to heat . . .

One of the windows at Montague Bridgman's displaying some new flameware from Norway caught our attention the other day . . . so we simply had to go in and find out more about it . . . This flameware . . . contemporary in design . . . comes in an earthy, reddish-brown shade, with a satin-like patina . . . Includes everything you can think of . . . cups, saucers, plates, meat platter, covered casseroles in two sizes, tea pot, etc., etc. . . . Just $6.90 for a 5-piece place setting . . . which we think is extraordinarily reasonable . . . and how nice to be able to bring dishes right from the oven which match everything else on the table! . . . If you decide to treat yourself to some of this attractive flameware, we suggest you get some of the Swedish linen place mats, a new shipment of which has just been received by Bridgman's . . . stylized designs of pigeons or roosters, carried out in several different color combinations . . . They complement the Norwegian dinnerware beautifully, and cost only $1.50 each . . . Swiss linen napkins in plain colors can be teamed up with these . . . although they're actually meant to match the coarse linen place mats . . . also Swiss . . . which come in a big variety of lovely colors, and are priced at $1.95 . . . Incidentally, these are all good gift suggestions too . . . Montague Bridgman Limited, 811 Government St., 383-0821.

Seems most of our VIP ladies make their hat selections there! . . . Earlier in the week we'd been browsing among the first of the new spring hats at Miss Frith's . . . Stunning imports by Christian Dior . . . Andre . . . Mr. Charles and M'sieu Leon . . . to do a little name-dropping . . . Flowered creations a-plenty . . . which this year have an airy, fragile look . . . designed to flatter any woman outrageously when she wants to look her prettiest . . . but we saw a lot of very interesting straws too . . . like the Dior toque in a checkered effect of white, black and burnt sienna . . . and a stunning turban in twisted straw and organza tubing . . . pale yellow and green . . . Shiny straws . . . mostly black . . . are used for some very elegant wide brimmed hats . . . a couple of which have high patent crowns . . . A Dior tam is covered with flat, multi-colored flowers . . . Profile styles are still very, very smart . . . and manage to look very new, too, when carried out in fancy straws . . . A high-crowned hat of natural straw with turned up brim has an interesting top-knot in orange, white and green . . . Miss Frith Millinery & Fashions, 1617 Douglas St., 383-7181.

Lightweight, smooth and colorful canvas is being used for the "new look" in raincoats.

Carefree dresses in sunlit shades . . .

"Sunlit Brights" is what the Madam and Eve Shop call their new dresses by Jonathan Logan . . . and a very apt description it is! . . . These dresses are 100% polyester, with a ribbed texture . . . hand washable and require no ironing . . . Geranium and carnation pinks, sour lime, navy and ceramic blue are the colors, and at the moment there are three different styles . . . one with a covered zipper side closing, short sleeves, silver button trim . . . A sleeveless model with deep V yoke and low front pockets . . . brass button closing . . . A third, of horizontal lined polyester, has short sleeves, A-line skirt and little Peter Pan collar . . . More of these Jonathan Logan dresses are expected, so there'll be a really good selection . . . Another new dress that caught our eye is a washable silk knit by Joseph Ribkoff in what he calls flag colors . . . horizontal stripes in red and vanilla on a light French navy ground . . . chain belt around the waist . . . And a terrific Lee Parker coat and dress ensemble . . . plain sleeveless dress with stand-up collar . . . double-breasted coat patterned with a diamond check . . . a size 10 in warm toast and coconut shades, and a 12 in green, mauve and oyster . . . Madam and Eve Shop, Trounce Alley, 383-7177.

Not only short skirts but shorts as well . . . for the city . . . were decreed by young Italian designer Heinz Riva.

Custom-made ornamental iron work . . .

Life is just full of interesting "firsts" . . . For instance, just recently we were invited to see how ornamental ironwork is made . . . by a firm who make to order . . . and by hand . . . just about everything you can think of out of iron strips and bars, which are moulded and twisted and welded into the most elegant designs which emerge as gates, balconies, fireplace screens and fenders, railings, coach lamps, sign brackets, mirror frames, wall plaques, coffee tables, bar stools, room dividers . . . to name but a few! . . . You can draw your own design . . . choose from any of 1600 patterns on hand . . . or leave it up to their own creativity . . . and be sure of getting real beauty and fine workmanship no matter how small . . . or how large . . . the wrought iron object of your choice . . . Another thing about this firm . . . they make a point of giving excellent service . . . always getting work out on the day promised . . . even if they have to sacrifice their weekends to do so! . . . Prices are very reasonable . . . and they'll give you an estimate first . . . and stick to it! . . . Ornamental ironwork . . . either outside or in . . . does wonders for practically any home . . . Call Wes DesJardins at . . . Esquimalt General Repair Shop, 614 Grenville Ave., 382-1874, or 384-3336.

Make a bee-line for Saba's . . .

Saba's were busy getting ready for their big Spring Fabricanza Sale when we visited their fabrics department last Monday . . . but they took time out to show us the first of their lovely new wools for spring . . . and we were no end impressed! . . . Many of these are made in England by Dormeuil . . . 54" wide . . . and ranging in price from $7 to $11 a yard . . . There are plain colors, checks and plaids . . . all co-ordinated so you can mix and match them . . . Lovely shades, and the proper weights for dresses, suits or coats . . . A patterned fabric for dress, and matching plain for coat . . . or vice versa . . . would make an elegant costume ensemble! . . . Getting back to the Fabricanza sale which started last Thursday . . . it will be on all this coming week . . . and bargains are truly fantastic! . . . We saw striped bonded orlon jersey reduced from $7 to $5.49 . . . that wonderful new fabric Crimplene . . . soft textured fortrel and dacron mixture . . . which you can toss into the washer and dryer without a second thought . . . There are two groups of mix-match woollens . . . Imported linens . . . Handsome brocades . . . Pure silk Dupioni . . . Rhodia twill . . . Surah prints . . . attractive cotton ripple sheers which don't need ironing . . . all of these drastically reduced . . . Saba Bros. Limited, 1130 Douglas St., 384-0561.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: My problem is a 68-year-old husband who has less sense than his teen-age grandson when it comes to how to behave around girls. Alex acts his worst when we go out to eat. If the waitress has her name on her uniform he has to use it immediately.

For example: "Hello, Hazel. My but you look pretty tonight!" What is the old buzzard trying to prove — that he can read?

I have told Alex dozens of times that it embarrasses me when he gets personal with the waitresses and they do not appreciate it either. He says I am crazy — that ALL women like to be told they have pretty hair or a lovely smile or a nice figure. When I reminded him that it has been 45 years since I have had a compliment from him he said, "Wives don't count."

Why does he behave this way and what can I do about it? — OLD GRAY MARE

Dear Mare: Alex knows it's a sure way to get your goat and he will continue to behave this way as long as you let him know he is succeeding. If you've been married for 45 years and this is all you have to complain about, Lady, you are lucky. Be glad he can see.

Dear Ann Landers: Our sixteen-year-old daughter is driving me crazy. Lynn is a sophomore in high school and she spends twice as much time on her hair as on her homework.

Her last report card was disgraceful — nothing over a C and mostly D's. Lynn washes her hair every other night and rolls it up on curlers. This is tremendously time consuming because her hair is very long and thick.

In the meantime the family never sees her looking nice. When she comes to the dinner table her hair is already up in curlers. Frankly I am sick of it. I will not allow Lynn to go to bed with a wet head so she must dry it before she sleeps, and this takes another hour. Every morning Lynn brushes and teases her hair for at least 30 minutes which means she has not time for a nourishing breakfast.

If you say this is just a phase I will keep quiet and continue to take tranquilizers. How about it? — MOTHER MARY

Dear Mother: Be thankful it's a daughter and not a son you are writing about.

Hair has always been a major bone of contention between parents and children and so long as there is hair there will be disagreement. As to what should be done about it, my advice is to save your pipes, Mother. Insist that Lynn get her grades up if she wants to enjoy dating privileges but leave her hair out of it.

Dear Ann: During the holidays we gave a series of small dinner parties. On two separate occasions, invited guests brought along another couple. I would not have minded if they had telephoned first but they showed up and said, "We knew it would be O.K."

I felt like a hypocrite smiling and saying, "Oh, it's perfectly all right." Frankly, I was burned up. My husband says I am petty. What do you say? — SHORT ON SILVERWARE

Dear Short: It's extremely poor taste to bring guests without first checking with the hostess. Unexpected dinner company can mean rearranging tables and a multiplicity of other problems. Social amenity demands that a surprised hostess be pleasant under such circumstances, but nothing says she has to invite the clods back.

Mayor Blasts 'Unclean' CYC

The mayor of Fort Qu'Appelle, Saskatchewan, the only area in the province to have a Company of Young Canadians' project, says he would like to see the CYC withdraw.

"There are enough bad influences on television," he said. "The CYC add to it, they sure don't help our young people.

He said most of the volunteers in Fort Qu'Appelle dressed like hippies, didn't get haircuts and were unclean.

Ald. Fred Dunk said the consensus of residents was that CYC personnel in the town were "almost parasites on society".

Premier Ross Thatcher and Premier E. C. Manning, of Alberta have already suggested that Ottawa take the CYC out of the Prairies.

As much as 80 per cent of marijuana brought into Canada could contain heroin, said Dr. E. J. Tyler, head of Brandon University's psychology department.

He said the drug has long been considered a means to attract people to the more dangerous and addicting narcotic, heroin.

The result of "heroin-tipping" would be to give the marijuana user an unaccustomed kick and leave him unsatisfied with anything but the more potent drug.

He told the Red River Co-operative in Winnipeg "I am a little concerned that a lot of people don't see emerging trends—and a lot of young people don't."

Roadblock Resume

Missing Lights Big Complaint

City police checked 400 vehicles Friday night in roadblocks on Fort and on Esquimalt until cold weather and wind forced a stop after two hours.

No arrests were made, and six motorists will be summonsed for various offences. Of the 70 warning tickets written, 14 were for missing licence plate illumination lights and 11 for absent brake lights.

The checks were handled by two sergeants, 10 constables and 10 auxiliary constables.

Impaired Driver Fined, Second Gets Remand

Christopher Jukes of 4 Kingham Place was fined $300 and had his licence suspended when he pleaded guilty in central magistrate's court Saturday to impaired driving.

Jukes was arrested early Saturday morning after his car hit a utility pole at Gorge and Rock Bay.

William Campbell, 207 Lascelles, was remanded to Monday for sentence after he pleaded guilty to impaired driving. He was stopped Friday night after driving erratically on Old Island Highway.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said: "He gave a Breathalyser reading of .22 per cent, which makes him very fortunate he is not charged with drunken driving, since the textbooks say .2 is drunk."

The Week in Records

Album Tide Rushing

By CATHY LOWTHER

Albums have been doing the thing lately. Everyone has an album out — The Cream's Disraeli Gears, Bob Dylan and J. W. Harding, Traffic, The Buffalo Springfield Again, Tommy Boyce and Bobby Hart, and Jimi Hendrix' Axis and Love.

Donovan has a trippy anti-acid tablet, a double album called A Gift from a Flower to a Garden.

● The Notorious Byrd Brothers are the new Byrds. After splitting, mutating and decaying, they are revived as a trio with only Roger (Jim) McGuinn surviving. His guitar and the electric effects are the only really good things going for them.

● The Loving Spoonful, after a popularity plunge, is back strong with Everything Playing. Van Yanovsky, the Canadian, is replaced by Jerry Yester and the sound is unchanged. John Sebastian is still the main writer, grooving country to soul experiments.

● Those who listen to U.S. radio will remember Noel Harrison's smash Suzanne. Leonard Cohen, a Canadian poet-song-writer, wrote the song and has an album of his own out.

Like Suzanne, the selections are religious symbolic protests, such as The Stranger Song and One of Us Cannot Be Wrong. His poetry books can be bought in a Yates Street bookstore. His best is Flowers for Hitler.

Hit singles: Tommy Boyce and Bobby Hart are joint winners. Love Is Blue is fantastic, zoming from nowhere to No. 2 in one week. Spooky, Green Tambourine and Woman Woman are still strong.

Hit LPs: Disraeli Gears has revived Fresh Cream. Bob Dylan and J. W. Harding, already a gold disc, The Buffalo Springfiled Again and the Who Sell Out are in steady demand.

Up and Coming: Everything That Touches You is the best of The Association. Two from the States to watch are A Question of Temperature by the Balloon Farm, and Just Dropped In to See What Condition My Condition Is In (I swear it) by the First Edition.

Letters to Kitte:
Don't Mistake Crush for Love

"Dear Kitte Turmell: Here's my heart-breaking problem. I love a boy I'll call A. When he was going with a girl I'll call B, his best friend, I'll call C, found out about my love for A. As a blabbermouth, C told A. Then for about a month, A stopped speaking to me. Before this interruption, he had told me I would be his second choice, but now . . . I wonder.

"A has just broken up with B for the second time, but after all my friends telling him to date me, I suppose his love is lost. I don't want him to think I am running after him, but I do love him deeply.

"Tell me what to do to gain his love again. We are school pals and used to walk around there together, about four times a day. Now it's just once in awhile. Oh, Kitte, what do you think about all this?—'Peep-Squeak'"

Dear "Peep-Squeak": Stop telling anyone how much you like him. Don't use phrases such as "love" too lightly. Since you never went with A, and he told you that you would be his second choice, I can't see that you have cause to think he loved you — so how can you lose his love if you never had it?

Your problem sounds like a crush to me and this you will soon outgrow if you get with boy-girl groups, for social and hobby and club activities. If you are on the go, you will meet many who will like you. You'll be better company if you think in terms of friendship and fun. Nobody wants to nurse a broken-hearted girl. If you stop brooding, you'll be more attractive to A too!

"Dear Kitte Turmell: My friend is planning to marry a man from another country and will move there, after the wedding, for which I will be her maid of honor. I want to give a shower for her but wonder what kind it could be.

"She does not wish to tote or ship a lot of breakable things, to a place where many things from this country would not fit in with her type of home and way of life.

"What she really wants is money, so she can buy what she finds useful after she starts housekeeping. But I wonder if there is any such thing as a money-shower. Please advise.—'Virginia'"

Dear Virginia: Yes, there is such a thing as a money-shower — usually given for a club or church leader, or one being ordained for the ministry or going on a church mission.

For the money-shower, all may bring gifts in coins or bills in sealed envelopes. Often it is requested that the envelopes be left blank, so the bride does not know how much each gave. In that case, names of all who contributed are listed on a big congratulation card for the bride.

Donors may, in addition to blank envelopes with money, address personal congratulatory cards for the bride.

Pop Group Fails In Rescue

TORONTO (CP)—Two persons died Saturday in their blazing home despite efforts of a pop-rock group to rescue them.

The bodies of Thomas Fleming, 61, and his wife Margaret, 57, were found in an upstairs bedroom.

Mike McQueen, 21, a neighbor, and five other members of the Spasstiks kicked open the front door but were forced back by heavy smoke and flames.

Relax—Enjoy Dinner Visit

By KITTE TURMELL

"The only thanks I'll give for the next invitation to dinner at a boy's home will be when it's all over," Rosalie wrote me.

"My boy friend had to pick this time to introduce me to his family. There'll be a dozen or more at a Sunday dinner to celebrate a family birthday. What can I say? What should I do?"

First, you should relax, Rosalie. You probably can't be a smash hit with everybody, so you shouldn't try. This advice comes from Tony Scotti, a rising star in films.

"Show your true self from the beginning," Tony recommends. "If you try to be somebody else, you'll be found out. And if you are obviously straining to be on your very best behavior, the family will sense it and won't be able to feel at ease with you.

"What's expected of a girl? Well, this is what she'd have to be to score high with my family at our dinners.

"For my Dad, she should be good-looking but natural. He has an eye for beauty but doesn't like a lot of make-up. My Mother is interested in my career and so she expects any girl of mine to be interested in it, too.

"Grandma likes a girl who looks for ways to help, like clearing away the dishes. 'Look at her, sitting there doing nothing!' she'll whisper in my ear about a girl who doesn't think of those things. My grandfather admires a girl who wants an education, but he also likes her to listen brightly to his politics.

"Basically, though, we all just want our guests to have a good time."

And guests in the Scotti house do have a good time. Singing and listening to music are as important as the food. They sometimes come before the dessert.

Tony explained: "Somebody will go to the piano and start a song. It's like an audition. You can swing and sing and you're part of the gang."

But Tony adds that certain rules are firm in his house, the same as anywhere.

A guest is expected to arrive at the time mentioned in the invitation.

This time can vary, of course. At Tony's house they like to get together at 1 p.m. and talk before sitting down to dinner about 3 o'clock.

As soon as served, you start eating. The man is king, the guest is queen. You eat before the food gets cold. You watch for your hosts to say grace. Customs vary here.

Eat with pleasure. Say it's the best dressing, the greatest gravy, the tenderest turkey or beef or stew ever.

Make your dinner-talk light and happy. This is no time to ask somebody how he did in the stock market or at the race track. Steer clear of subjects like illness or family trouble. Talk about what interests you and your enthusiasm will be catching.

Stay at the table until your hostess rises or signals that she is through. However, you might sit with the family for a half-hour after finishing eating.

At all times, be relaxed, be interested and be pleasant. In other words, be yourself, at your best.

Movement Growing

Expert Help 4-H Necessity

More specialists and volunteer workers are needed in the 4-H farm youth movement, leader delegates told the annual convention of the 4-H provincial advisory council at the Century Inn Friday.

There has been an increase of 5.84 per cent from 2,282 members in 1966 to 2,440 in 1967, supervisor Wayne Wickens told the leaders.

Some delegates said higher salaries would attract more specialists.

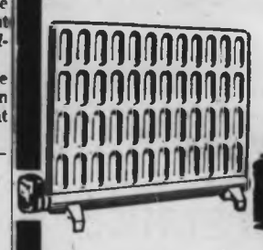

The heavy work load resulting from club expansion was the subject of some complaints, and it was felt more volunteer leaders are needed.

In home economics the lack of specialists is hampering some club programs.

Crash Site Probed

Ice Keeps H-Secrets

THULE AIR BASE, Greenland (LAT) — A week after a B-52 bomber crashed onto a frozen bay near here with four hydrogen bombs aboard, investigators are still uncertain whether the nuclear payload can ever be recovered.

The major questions are still wide open. One, what happened to the bombs riding in the belly of the plane when it went down? Two, what happened to the aircraft itself? Three, what caused the crash?

PART OF ONE

The air force does know that at least part of one of the bombs was shattered in the crash either by impact on the ice or by detonation of conventional explosives which serve to trigger the thermonuclear weapons.

All of the bombs could have been destroyed. Some of them could be buried in the ice, covered by refrozen snow, or they could be at the bottom of the bay under 800 feet or more of water.

The following courses of action are believed the most likely:

- If the bombs are still on the surface partially intact and if there are areas of intense radiation, thousands of tons of snow and ice will have to be removed from the bay and melted so that the contaminated water can be safely disposed of.
- If the weapons plunged through the ice intact, then miniature submarines like the Alvin and Aluminaut, which participated in the recovery of a lost H-bomb off the coast of Spain, will have to be brought in. The ice, which may be as much as 10 feet thick, might have to be carved out to form a place for them to surface.
- If the weapons melted their way into the ice, they would have to be carved out. In this case, finding them would be an enormous task. Since alpha radiation from plutonium cannot penetrate upward through the ice to the surface, radiation instruments will be of little value in finding nuclear materials frozen into the sheet. Neither will sensors which detect metal.

ON SURFACE

The search Saturday put increased emphasis on radiation monitoring. Radioactivity detected so far has been limited to the immediate crash area. Surprisingly, the snow surrounding the site does not appear to be contaminated.

But fragments of the aircraft are radioactive and the contamination is apparently fixed to the surface.

One possible explanation for this is that the weapons exploded while still in the bomb bay, sprewing plutonium on the inside of the plane.

The indications that the radiation is fixed to the wreckage of the aircraft brought optimism from U.S. officials. If these conclusions are borne out it would mean the radiation is not in a suspended state where it could be inhaled by people living in the area. When inhaled in sufficient concentration alpha particles can cause lung cancer.

Education Building

Time Capsule for Church

Gavel Changes Hands

After five years as president of Victoria and Vancouver Island branch, Canadian Restaurant Association, W. E. Webb, left, turned over his gavel last week to Thomas Hanna. Mr. Webb, who led successful campaigns against high gas and electricity rates, will remain as co-ordinator of CRA's Island region.—(W. A. Boucher)

By DON GAIN

A Langford church will have its own time capsule.

When the cornerstone of the new Christian education building of Gordon United Church is laid at 12:10 p.m. today, a number of items will be sealed behind it.

Included will be the building plans, news clippings, a history of the building including early plans, a list of the building committee members and a copy of the cornerstone service.

The cornerstone will be laid by David Flatman, charter member of the church. Mr. Flatman is a longtime resident of the area and was one of the main organizers when the church was built 13 years ago. He is donating the cornerstone, which is made of Swedish black granite, to the church.

AFTER SERVICE

The ceremony will take place immediately following the morning service in the church.

The building, which was started at the end of the summer, should be ready for official opening and dedication in late March or early April, building committee chairman Stan Hiscock said Friday. Its cost is estimated at $50,000.

The new centre, which has been supervised by Marvin Sather, is being built, in a large part, by volunteer labor.

AUDITORIUM

The building will have 16 rooms on the lower floor and a large auditorium on the upper floor. A 20-by-16-foot kitchen will be equipped with two electric stoves, two sinks and refrigerators.

The centre will be used mainly by the church's 150 families, for Sunday school classes and work with young people.

The two-storey building is of pumice block construction. Originally it was intended to have a breezeway connecting it to the church but this space is now being used to extend the choir facilities.

The cornerstone ceremony will be conducted by the minister, Rev. G. G. Smith, and a short talk will be given by Mr. Hiscock.

Work planned for the future includes paving of the parking area and landscaping of the grounds.

Breakdown in Aircraft Delays High-Sky Test

CHURCHILL, Man. (CP) — The first North American attempt for a co-ordinated rocket-aircraft auroral probe was aborted Friday night when the high-flying jet developed pressurization problems.

The malfunction sounded an emergency alarm in the aircraft and the 21 persons aboard, including several of the world's leading auroral scientists, were required to don oxygen masks while the Convair 990 sought a lower altitude.

Chief Pilot Fred Drinkwater of Saratoga, Calif., said in an interview later that "at no time was anyone ever even on the borderline of danger."

Drinkwater said the automatic pressure controls ceased functioning about 10 minutes after takeoff and manual controls began acting inconsistently about 10 minutes later. The aircraft was scheduled to fly at 39,000 feet, 3,000 feet below its maximum capability, to particlpate in the what is to be the most significant experiments of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's 1968 auroral expedition.

The project has been delayed indefinitely until repairs to the aircraft are completed.

It was the second delay in the project which was first scheduled for Thursday night but postponed because of blizzard conditions. Ironically, just prior to the mechanical problem a bright aurora had developed almost directly overhead of the Churchill research range but scientists did not have time to make any significant measurements before the mission had to be cancelled.

Scientists are trying to determine the source and characteristics of the aurora, a scientific mystery for more than 100 years, in hopes of proving or disproving some of the theories associated with it.

Columbia Pact Attacked As Big Loser

TORONTO (CP) — A prominent civil engineer said here that Canada will lose hundreds of millions of dollars in the coming years as a result of terms in the Columbia River treaty.

James Ripley, who spent four years analysing the treaty's articles, said rising prices have wiped out the profit that Canada appeared to have in 1964 when the federal government ratified the treaty. In effect, it sold the Columbia water to the United States for $254,000,000 for all time.

Mr. Ripley Thursday night told a joint session of Canadian, British and American civil engineers at the University of Toronto that the U.S. is still holding $120,000,000 that was owing to Canada when the treaty was ratified.

Canada was "conned" into believing that the value of stored water decreases in time.

WHOLE SYSTEM

The treaty, which agreed to integrate the potential of the Canadian and U.S. portions of the Columbia basin for the optimum output of the whole system, caused continuous controversy in the House of Commons prior to the ratification in September, 1964.

"The continual deception and occasional outright lying that government officials engaged in to sell the treaty plan are undoubtedly part of the growing disillusionment of people with the political process," said Mr. Ripley.

He said that several lessons were learned after the treaty was signed, one of them being that Canada is in need of a water policy and another that "our constitutional framework is creaky."

Student UN debaters hold lively vote during Saturday assembly at Norfolk House School

Victorians Help Bahamas

Texts Roll South In Wake of Visit

The chance visit of two Victorians to a Caribbean schoolhouse last summer has resulted in thousands of textbooks going from B.C. to the Bahamas.

The S.S. Beaver Kiwanis Club of Victoria is now funnelling tons of books and teaching aids to the Bahamas out-islands, where school supplies are scarce.

Last July, hardware dealer Roy Parrett and his wife, 1708 Carnegie Crescent, were holidaying in George Town, Great Exuma Island, when they attended term-end ceremonies at a one-room school.

ALMOST NO BOOKS

"A husband and wife teaching team was instructing 132 children in seven grades, with almost no books," said Mr. Parrett on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Parrett discussed education with the teachers, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Thomas, and decided to help when they returned to Victoria.

Mr. Parrett enlisted the aid of his service club and Operation Textbook started rolling.

BRANCH HELPS

The Kiwanians collaborated with the textbook branch of the department of education. The branch turned over books being withdrawn from B.C. schools because of course changes, said Mr. Parrett.

The first shipment of 1,600 texts, workbooks and teacher guides went to Nassau earlier this month. They will be distributed among the poorly-supplied Bahamian out-islands, said Mr. Parrett.

SPECIAL ATTENTION

"Originally the idea was just to supply George Town," he said. "Now we're hoping for several tons of books."

He also reported that the S.S. Beaver Kiwanians intend to give special attention to equipping the George Town school run by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas. It has no electric lights, projection equipment, record player or radio.

Clear Skies Allow Full Air Search; Result Negative

For the first time in nearly three weeks, weather permitted search aircraft Saturday to venture into an area of the Rocky Mountains where an aircraft with two Victorians and a Burnaby man aboard is believed down.

But no clues were found, a search and rescue official said from Vancouver.

CLEAR VIEW

Aboard the twin-engined plane which disappeared Jan. 8 were Reginald Thurber and Harvey Dishaw, both of Victoria, and pilot Gary Foshen of Burnaby.

Visibility in the area, 75 miles north of Golden, was described "unlimited" and allowed search planes to finally cover the entire route believed taken by the missing plane before it disappeared.

Search and rescue officials would not comment on what possibilities exist because no sightings were found. The search was to continue today between Enderby and Rocky Mountain House.

FAVORABLE WEATHER

The good weather was expected to last at least until tonight.

Fifteen aircraft, including nine military planes, took to the air Saturday from Comox, Penticton, Golden, Edmonton and Calgary.

By Saturday night, searchers had covered 72,481 square miles and had put in 529.9 flying hours.

He'll Speak On Whales

Management of Antarctic whale stocks will be discussed Monday at the University of Victoria by K. Radway Allen, director of the federal biological station at Nanaimo. Mr. Allen, an internationally-known marine biologist, will speak at 8 p.m. in Room 168 of the Elliott Building.

Students Back UN Action

An international group of students voted Saturday to send the Pueblo crisis to the Security Council for immediate action.

The resolution was overwhelmingly approved by nearly 100 high school students at the third model UN meeting at Norfolk House School, 801 Bank Street.

Students from 15 private and public schools participated in the event. Seattle and Greater Vancouver schools sent delegates.

Greater Victoria schools included Norfolk House, St. Louis College, St. Ann's Academy and University School.

President of the assembly was Terry Tomkow of Burnaby Central High School.

Shoreline High School in Seattle became first winner of a plaque recognizing the best contribution to the assembly.

Privacy View:

Protection Plan No Protection

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the British Columbia Civil Liberties Association says a B.C. Legislature bill aimed at limiting invasion of privacy will probably increase electronic eavesdropping instead of lessening it.

Lawyer Sidney Simons was commenting Friday on the bill, introduced Thursday in the legislature. The bill is based on the findings of a royal commission that investigated invasion of privacy last year.

'ABSOLUTE POWER'

"This bill will not reduce eavesdropping — if anything, it will increase it," Mr. Simons said.

"It gives the police absolute power in this area to do what they please with the tacit approval of the provincial government."

Mr. Simons said there appears to be nothing new in a portion of the bill dealing with invasion of privacy where a person's name or portrait is used in a commercial enterprise.

He said the law has always provided civil remedies against this form of invasion of privacy.

The Vancouver lawyer said news reports indicated that recommendations made by the association are not covered in the legislation presented.

BEST WAY

"We recommended that no eavesdropping be condoned and that the best way to reduce it was to make evidence obtained by electronic eavesdropping inadmissable in court," he said.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner told reporters that other governments concerned with legislating against invasion of privacy have stressed commercial electronic equipment or other gadgetry.

Lilac Starved

By M. V. CHESNUT

HIDDEN HUNGER (G.F.M., Victoria) — The poor growth of your lilac last year and the browning of its leaves suggests that some important mineral element is missing or in short supply in your soil. Browning between the veins is one of the symptoms of manganese or magnesium deficiency, while scorching of the leaf edges could indicate insufficient potash.

Rather then attempting to make good the deficiency by dosing with specific trace elements — which is always a tricky business — I think it would be better simply to make sure your lilac is on a well-balanced diet.

I suggest you spread a generous layer of old rotted manure over the rooting area and prick this in shallowly with a digging fork. During the growing season, supplement this by spraying the leaves about once a month with liquid seaweed fertilizer, which is rich in all the minor elements required for healthy growth.

HOUSEPLANT PROBLEM (E.K., Cordova Bay) — Your plant is a Kalanchoe tomentosa, a native of Madagascar, and the dark brown markings on the tips of the leaves is a natural characteristic of this plant; they are NOT due to any errors in cultivation.

The Kalanchoe, pronounced kal-an-KO-ee, likes a sunny window and ordinary room temperatures. Like other succulent plants, the soil should be allowed to become quite dry between waterings.

FLY TRAP PLANT (O.S., Ganges) — Touching the tip of the leaf will not cause the tap to close in the Venus Fly Trap plant. Look for three bristles in each lobe of the leaf; these are the "triggers" that acutate the trapping mechanism. One of these bristles must be touched lightly TWICE before the two halves of the leaf will snap shut.

GLORIOSA DAISY (A.C.J., Victoria) — The fine color photograph you sent me of the plant you found growing in the garden of your new home is a Gloriosa Daisy, a very attractive perennial developed from the common roadside Black-eyed Susan after many years of painstaking selection and breeding. Your plant was probably grown from seeds distributed by the Colonist about five years ago.

The Gloriosa Daisy can be propagated by digging up and dividing the root clump in October or early April, or by saving and sowing seeds. Seeds started indoors or under glass in March will often bloom the same year. The plant likes a sunny location and well-drained sandy loam soil.

INJURED TREE (W.M., Duncan) — Your tree which was split in the recent storm should not have been bound with wire. The wire will cut into the bark as the tree swells in girth, strangling the flow of sap and eventually killing it.

A much better way to repair a split is to drill holes through the tree with a brace and bit and bolt the split portions together with long iron bolts. Use large washers under the bolt head and the nut to distribute the pressure over a wider area of bark. Repairs must be done promptly before the wound can dry out or become weathered.

ART BUCHWALD Plugs Loophole

Tax Hounds Track Cad

WASHINGTON — When Emil Harwood Booster paid his taxes for 1967, he discovered that he still had $117.50 left over in his bank account. He probably would have gotten away with it except he made the mistake of bragging to a friend in a bar about it and he was overheard by an Internal Revenue Service agent who reported it to his chief.

An emergency meeting was called of federal, state, and municipal tax officials to discover why Booster still had money left in the bank.

The Internal Revenue Service man said they had checked Booster's federal tax return and it was all in order, so he couldn't be tried for any criminal violations. The state tax official said as far as his people could find out, Booster had paid all state taxes. The municipal man said his records showed that Booster was clean.

"Then," the IRS man said, "we can only come to one conclusion. If Booster still has money left over after he has paid his taxes, there is a loophole somewhere in the tax law."

"I suggest," the state tax man said, "that the best way to settle this matter is to put a state surcharge on Booster so we can get the money that way."

"Wait a minute," said the municipal tax collector. "If anyone should get the $117.50, it's the municipality. It would be very easy for us to raise Booster's real estate taxes."

"I object," said the state representative. "It now seems to me the reason Booster got away with this is that our sales tax has been too low. We can up the sales tax by 1 per cent, make it retro-active, and inform Booster he owes us the $117.50."

There was a lot of angry shouting and finally the IRS man called the meeting to order. "Hold it. Shouting will do us no good. Let's look at this thing calmly. The way I see it, we are not as concerned about the $117.50 as we are about the fact that Booster still had money left over after he paid his taxes. Now we'll all have to admit that this is a very bad precedent and, if Booster can get away with it, everyone else will try to get away with it. We must discover what went wrong and see that it doesn't happen again."

"I'll tell you where it went wrong," the state tax man said. "We thought the president was going to put a surcharge of 10 per cent on everyone's income tax, so we didn't tax Booster as much as we originally planned to."

"And," said the municipal man, "we thought the state was going to raise Booster's gasoline taxes, so we didn't raise his water and sewer taxes.

"And we also thought there was going to be a new liquor and cigarette tax, so we thought we would pass up our idea of an entertainment tax until next year."

The IRS man said, "It seems to be a comedy of errors, and the only one who is laughing right now is Booster. The solution to the problem, as I see it, is to set up a co-ordinating committee and in 1968 tax Booster an extra $117.50 which he failed to pay in 1967. We could split the $117.50 among all of us so Booster would have no idea what we were doing."

"It's not a bad idea," the state tax man said. "But I think there should be some punitive damages added. It's true that Booster didn't violate any laws, but he knew as well as we did that if he had any money at the end of the year, it belonged to one of us."

"That's true," the municipal man said. "He should have come clean and told us he still had money left in the bank and then let us adjust our tax rates accordingly.

"I say call him before the grand jury. Any guy who has any money left over after he pays his taxes has got to be guilty of something."

Everyone agreed and the IRS man said, "it's guys like Booster who give inflation a bad name."

The Little World of SHEILAH GRAHAM

Kooky Image Valued

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — Angela Lansbury turned down the number one lesbian role in Robert Aldrich's version of The Killing of Sister George, played on stage by Beryl Reid. Explained Angela, "It wouldn't be good for my image." Angela didn't mind playing villains before her Mame hit on Broadway. She was a prostitute in A Taste of Honey, a horribly obsessive mother in The Manchurian Candidate. But the kooky good-natured Mame has given Angela a special niche and she wants to stay in it.

Bette Davis was set for Sister George, I thought, and she would have been okay, but as of now Bette is out. This gives her lots of time to view herself, complete with glass eye, playing the monstrously obsessive, possessive mother in The Anniversary. I saw Mona Washburn in the play in London. I think I'll skip Bette and her eye patch in the film. It's too gruesome. . . . Aldrich by the way, with a smash hit in The Dirty Dozen (he sold his interest for $1,350,000), is planning a sequel, The Valiant Misfits.

Richard Harris was a sad Irishman when they told him that his next picture, Nobody Loves an Indian, has been postponed. His next, Molly McGuire, will start in May. On a Clear Day, with Vincente Minnelli directing, is scheduled for September. Meanwhile Richard will make some record albums. The first, A Tramp Shining. He looked mystical when I asked him what it meant.

Mickey Rooney in process of divorcing his sixth wife, is finally in the clear with the government. He has paid off close to $250,000 he owed in income tax. While Mickey doesn't have any ready cash, at least he is now free of debts. He went broke over women, but when I asked a close friend, "Will he marry again?" my friend replied, "Of course." His last wife — they were married a little more than three months — is accepting a $20,000 settlement.

At the end of In Cold Blood, director-producer Richard Brooks put a 12-second blackout to give the audience time to recover before the house lights go up from the shock of seeing the two men hang. You sit there in stunned silence.

The publicity of Shalako, makes the statement that Brigitte Bardot and Sean Connery are the two great sex symbols of the current film age. I could give them an argument.

Paranoia at the Top

SYDNEY HARRIS

A friend of mine in St. Louis, who is deeply concerned with the Vietnam war, recently sent hundreds of copies of an editorial in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch to friends all over the United States. The editorial was headed, To Save the Dollar, End the War, and I thought it was fine.

She also wrote to the publisher of the newspaper, offering to pay for a subscription to be sent to President Johnson. The publisher replied sadly that this would be of no use because "the White House has cancelled its subscription to the Post-Dispatch."

This, to me, is as frightening a symptom of President Johnson's paranoia about the war as anything I have heard. When he orders cancelled a subscription to one of the most respected and responsible newspapers in the U.S., because it opposes his view on Vietnam, then we are dealing with a leader whose ears are completely closed to dissenting opinions.

A few weeks earlier, another form of political megalomania made itself evident on the part of President Johnson. According to a wire service story, he was about to board a U.S. government helicopter when an officer saluted him and said, "Sorry, sir, but this other helicopter over there is yours." And Johnson retorted, "Son, they're all mine!"

In point of fact, and law, none of them belongs to the president, but to his office; they are on loan to him in his function as president. The president owns nothing that he has not already brought with him to the White House; he has only the use of certain government facilities.

This grandiloquence, this immodesty, this overweening sense of self-importance, can be more dangerous to a nation than the actual policies it follows — as we can clearly see with General de Gaulle. Confusing oneself with God is the most common disease of leadership — and it is even a more striking aberration in a democratic country than in a totalitarian one.

Everyone knew that Hitler was a psychopath, or that Stalin was a lunatic butcher; their governments were, after all, based on passion and pig-headedness. But the virtue of a democratic society is largely that it can choose men with cool heads and flexible characters to lead it through difficult times.

And when its leader turns out to be rigid, stubborn, vain, vengeful, and petty, we have lost our great advantage.

Listening to one's critics and opponents is perhaps the most important function in a democratic society — the one that most clearly distinguishes it from totalitarian states. To cancel a subscription to a hostile newspaper is a declaration of war aginst all reason and persuasion. What, then, is left but naked force?

9 IN MEMORIAM

SPAVEN—In loving memory of a dear Mother Agnes Spaven, who passed away Jan. 29, 1965.
Sleep on dear, good mother,
it has been long years
Since you left our hearts filled with sadness and tears;
Yours was a heart that was blithesome and gay, Scattering sunshine
all along the way;
You know how we loved you,
and yes, love you yet,
Though God took you from us
we cannot forget.
—Lovingly remembered by her daughter, Agnes.

Island Areas Exist On Skeleton Health Care

SALTAIR — Worried parents and professional people recently discussed and criticized the shortage of doctors and psychiatrists north of the Malahat.

About 30 people met informally in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Les Knight, Saltair, a district which is not included in North Cowichan or Ladysmith.

It must depend on medical aid from the Central Vancouver Island Health unit, which has one doctor serving an area from the Malahat to Qualicum in the east, and to Tofino in the west.

There is only one psychiatrist to cover this same area, plus North Island centres as well.

Mrs. Knight said professional counselling services for parents in her area are so overloaded with work that their usefulness to an individual negligible.

The meeting was sparked by an official's comment: "The parents don't care, that's why we don't have more counselling services."

Attending the meeting, but not in an official capacity, were: Robert Strachan, NDP MLA; Dr. Charles Gregory, Victoria psychiatrist; T. B. Beames, special counsellor for two mid-Island school districts; E. G. Beck, counsellor at Ladysmith Secondary School; Charles Lonsdale, teacher at Chemainus Secondary; Rev. D. S. Lewis, Ladysmith United Church; Mrs. D. S. Lewis, occupational class teacher Chemainus Secondary; Rev. W. J. Hill, Chemainus Anglican Church, and Mrs. Elaine Kelly, president of the Chemainus and Ladysmith branch of the Mental Health Association.

In addition, there were about 20 parents.

Mrs. Ann Johnson, chairman of the Ladysmith recreation commission, was also present.

Questions, answers and opinions were exchanged. Sometimes quietly, sometimes heatedly, when parents let their emotions show about the "lack of cohesion between parents and teachers developing youngsters into useful citizens."

Dr. Gregory said he hoped schools would quickly become "human resource centres," adding that a community education committee composed of educators, health workers and interested citizens might possibly bring this about sooner.

Noon Crash at Campbell River

Driver Dragged By Death Car

CAMPBELL RIVER — A 21-year-old Campbell River man was dragged helplessly while his car spun out of control Saturday. He died moments later.

The man, Harry Martin Seaton, 21, was driving north on Dogwood Street shortly after noon. His car and that driven by William Simmons, 35, Campbell River, collided at the Evergreen Road intersection.

Seaton was thrown out of the car when his side door was smashed off, however he remained partly caught by the interior.

He was dragged helplessly while the car spun out of control, doing two turns before ramming into a ditch.

Three of his five passengers were hurt. Mrs. Carol Francis, Campbell River, is recovering in hospital with a broken arm.

Meanwhile, Esquimalt navy divers Saturday abandoned their search for a missing motorist in Upper Campbell Lake, 20 miles from Campbell River.

Leonard Turner, 24, Campbell River is missing in 100 feet of water after the car he was driving went out of control on a bridge on the Elk River Timber Co. logging road.

The car crashed over an embankment and came to rest for a few moments at the water's edge. A passenger, Ray Wagner, 24, Gold River, was unable to pull Turner free before the car slipped into the lake.

The accident happened in the early hours of Friday morning.

Mr. Turner has been listed as missing, presumed drowned.

The navy divers recovered the car Friday afternoon, resuming their search for Turner's body Saturday at first light.

However they could only remain 1½ hours below the surface at a time and the search was abandoned Saturday afternoon after no trace was found.

Reward Offered For Gun Vandal

NANAIMO—More than $1,000 damage was caused to B.C. Hydro insulators during the week by a vandal or vandals armed with a 30.06 hunting rifle.

District manager Tom Humble said a reward of $250 leading to their arrest and conviction has been posted.

Mr. Humble warned of the danger to forests, livestock and people, including the vandals, from high voltage lines hanging loose. The most recent shooting knocked out Ladysmith's power for a short while, insulators had to be replaced.

Indian Farmers

Social Worker Spurs Program

DUNCAN — "It looks promising, but it will not be a fast development. It will require sacrifice and hard work for the Indians to become self-sufficient."

Co-op development worker John Trew made the optimistic comment after several weeks in the Cowichan Valley.

He came here at the request of the Cowichan Indian Band and he is working with interested groups within the Cowichan Indian agency.

ASKED FOR HELP

Currently he works with the Cowichan Band's agricultural committee to explore possibilities in farming.

Mr. Trew stressed his job is not to convince Indian people of the value of certain programs. The Indians requested his assistance.

Now the Cowichan Band's farm development committee and Mr. Trew are studying the feasibility of producing corn silage, hay, strawberries and blackberries for sale.

He said "From this study it seems the most lucrative venture would be the growing of small fruit.

MORE JOBS SOON

"There are indications for a good market at Duncan and a greater number of people could be employed."

Before any project could be started here, land would have to be secured and a meeting will be held soon with Indian land holders to discuss all aspects of the proposed program and to explain the formation of a possible co-operative.

Mr. Trew said co-operation can have various forms.

It could resolve into a co-op, a company or a partnership, but the formation of a group is essential to become a legal entity to raise outside capital.

PRELIMINARY

He said that applies to various projects which could be carried out by Indian people.

Mr. Trew said "it is a training on a small scale from where people can take the next step to bigger development in business organization."

Parksville Picked For Welfare Work

PARKSVILLE — Plans have been announced for the opening of a welfare department office in Parksville.

It will be in a building to be erected on property owned by Mrs. George Abernethy on the corner of Morison Avenue and McMillan Street in the centre of the village.

The building will be two-storied, of 2,400 square feet covering almost two lots. A paved parking area will be provided at the rear.

The building will be occupied in May. The welfare department will occupy the entire top floor, and will have a staff of seven social and office workers.

This will probably be a district branch of the welfare department to serve the surrounding area.

Catering For Tourists

Increasing popularity of Vancouver Island has made necessary additional parking facilities and another dock at B.C. Ferry landing at Horseshoe Bay on Mainland. For those with imagination, scene pictured could almost exemplify British Columbia. Look closely; present is construction, water, rugged rock outline and firs — (Agnes Fleti)

Jubenville Reserved

DUNCAN—Weldon Jubenville, IWA president at Duncan, said he has reservations about Monday's meeting with Labor Minister Peterson, which coast industry officials and union leaders have been ordered to attend. The meeting will discuss contract proposals, which do not come up until June.

Some labor leaders on the Mainland Friday described the meeting as unprecedented.

Cowichan Farmers Celebrate 100th

A highlight of the 100th annual meeting of the Cowichan Agricultural Society and Farmers' Institute, Saturday, was the presentation of a life membership plaque to a hard-working member.

Bill Barker, secretary of the organization for the past 22 years, will retire from his position as manager of the CAS office at the end of the month. However, he will continue as secretary.

The presentation was made by society chairman, Henry Westwick, who explained the life membership plaque had the distinction of being two firsts.

"This is the first and only life membership to be presented at our 100th meeting, and it is the first plaque to be drawn and designed by one of our own 4-H members," he said.

The plaque was designed by Maureen Kinney, a member of the Cowichan Jersey Club and the Cowichan Valley basting belles.

Six directors were elected, five for a three-year term, and one for a two-year unexpired term made vacant by the resignation of Hamish Mutter, after 20 years with the society, including five years as chairman.

Re-elected to office were Tom Groves, Don Morton, Stan Owens and Henry Westwick. New directors are Harold Myhre and Bill Wikkerink.

In his directors' report, chairman Westwick stated, "This meeting ends the first century of operation of the society. Perhaps the main reason the society did not embark on many centennial projects as such was because our centennial coincided with that of our country.

"One project was definitely labelled as a centennial one. The Cowichan Agricultural Society was host to the B.C. Federation of Agriculture midsummer directors' meeting during the first week of June.

Mr. Westwick continued, "It has been the policy of the CAS that orderly planning and development of Pioneer Park-Exhibition grounds area be carried out. The society has held title to approximately three acres of Exhibition grounds since its purchase.

"Because the area was purchased mainly from public funds and because multiple ownership makes development more difficult, the directors felt the society should offer the title to its property (except the fenced-off area around the administration building) to the minicipality of North Cowichan with the hope that development of the area for community use be carried out.

Teaching Must Yield to Learning

Why is it that not a single sophisticated, experienced educator of any standing in the province can be found to seriously and aggressively defend much of what is going on in most of our schools?

Why is it that relatively few sensitive, perceptive, intelligent high school graduates can be found who would sincerely and strongly defend much of what passed for "education" during their high school years?

Why is it that ever-increasing numbers of thoughtful citizens are seriously concerned about how poorly our schools are preparing our youth for the enormously complex social problems which characterize our age?

Why is it that the overwhelming majority of our imaginative and creative teachers is either cynical about, or contemptuous of, or disillusioned with, so much that passes for education?

Only Handful Asserts Rights

Why is it that among B.C.'s 18,000 teachers, 8,000 of whom are university graduates, there doesn't seem to be more than a handful who will stand up and assert their right to make professional decisions concerning what to teach, how to teach, and under what conditions the act of teaching will take place?

Why is it that teachers continue to perform all manner of soul-destroying, repetitive, meaningless, stupid tasks just because, "... that's the way it's done around here," or, "... well, that's the way it's always been done?"

Why do the teachers of this province stay so massively silent about some of the more glaring conditions, practices and policies which deprive them of their professional dignity, and, what is far worse, rob their students of the right to a quality education?

Students Also Have Rights

When are teachers going to start refusing to be told what to do by the principals and to start asserting their rights to be consulted about, or otherwise have a share in, whatever decisions are reached concerning matters of fundamental importance in the act of teaching?

When are teachers going to begin to inform principals that they categorically refuse to attempt to teach in subject areas, or at grade levels, in which they have not been academically or professionally prepared?

The students, after all, have rights too — the right to be taught by a teacher who knows what he is talking about.

When are teachers going to commence insisting on their right to be free to teach as they see fit, and, at the same time, accepting the responsibility which accompanies freedom?

When are teachers going to set out to inform parents, and society in general, that the teaching and learning conditions in the schools are seriously out of step with the age in which we live?

Questions Easy —Not Answers

In Canada, a shockingly low 6.1 per cent of our gross national product goes into education at all levels, from kindergarten to university.

When are teachers going to commence doing much more about our national disgrace — the outrageously large classes which frustrate every attempt to provide a meaningful and worthwhile education for each individual child?

When are teachers going to launch and sustain a public debate about meaningful and worthwhile issues in education?

But questions — especially provocative ones — are easily asked.

It is the answers which are difficult.

It is rather interesting to take a look at some of the elaborate barriers we so readily construct — barriers which seem almost diabolically designed to prevent students from getting a better education.

Every practising teacher knows perfectly well that each student learns in his own unique way. Each child's learning style is as unique as his own fingerprints.

Old-Fashioned Group Idea

Yet, in all our schools we erect artificial grade barriers and other administrative devices, which force every student to learn not only at the rate set by the school, but also in the manner or style determined by the teacher.

We thus observe that in almost every school in the country the learner is expected to conform to the school rather than the school to conform to the learning needs and the learning style of the student.

Thoughtful educators everywhere proclaim the desirability of focussing on the individual rather than the group. But our schools and our whole approach to education are based on the old-fashioned group approach to learning.

The school, and its agent the teacher, forces most learners to learn precisely what the teacher wants; and, usually, forces him to learn it at precisely the rate established by the teacher.

One is led to wonder why teachers do not allow the student more freedom to make more of the major decisions concerning his own education.

If a student can learn by himself for the most part, why shouldn't he be allowed to do so? Indeed, isn't it desirable to encourage him to study and learn independently?

In the case of the senior secondary grades (high schools) in this province, it would seem that probably three-quarters or more of all the students are mature enough to accept the responsibility for making decisions concerning whether to attend a class or to study independently in the library or elsewhere.

It is well known that students who are given freedom to choose how and at what rate they wish to learn are much more likely to become committed to what they learn.

Approach Tested

For over two years now this school (Campbell River High) has tested this approach to school organization and there is every good reason to believe that the system works well.

Thus, at the present time, the entire student body of 450 Grade 11, 12 and senior matriculation students, both academic and vocational, attend their classes on a voluntary basis.

Students decide for themselves whether or not being exposed to a teacher conforms to their learning needs or learning style. Of course, the majority of students readily, freely and regularly avail themselves of the teachers' talent, knowledge or skill.

Other Ways To Learn

However, all students, without exception, quite frequently choose to learn in other ways such as through independent study, tutoring on an individual basis, or in fact learning from one another.

When students attend classes on a voluntary basis, some rather fundamental changes in emphasis seem to take place within the school.

For example, detailed rules and regulations, and all supervision of students can be dispensed with. In fact, the only school rule is not really a rule at all. It is, rather, an expectation that every student respect the rights of others.

Also, classroom disruptions and discipline problems largely cease when students attend classes by choice. In most classes, students are also free to leave at any time if it should suit their purpose to do so. Why should students be forced to sit in a class in which they are not learning anything?

Punishment Not Needed

It has also been found that it isn't necessary to punish students by strappings, detentions, or other punitive forms.

If a student is involved in deviant, anti-social behavior, the last thing he usually needs is some externally-imposed disciplinary measure. Rather, he needs help in acquiring the strength to discipline himself.

And, when the school ceases to attempt to force every student into the same preconceived mold, the incidence of deviant behavior greatly diminishes.

Much of the so-called deviant behavior of adolescents is merely rebellion against unreasonable, inappropriate or outmoded expectations on the part of adults.

Many of the discipline problems in our schools are clearly created by the teachers themselves. The times have changed, and modern youth is no longer content to accept traditional values or practices uncritically or supinely, as in the case of the generation of teachers now teaching them.

Private Nooks For Study

For over two years the students have never been supervised during studies, and they are free to study in any empty room in the building. Furthermore, private study nooks are placed throughout the building to accommodate students who wish to learn independently.

Students have free access to the library at all times from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. They are not supervised in the library and they sign out all their own books.

In addition, students have free access to all parts of the building at all times, without supervision, and there are no out-of-bounds areas. They may fraternize in the hallways or in common rooms.

The school's shift in emphasis would also seem to have brought about a new role, or a new dimension in the teacher's role.

Teachers are completely freed of the unnecessary and onerous burden of hall or other supervision duties. They do not sign in or out, nor do they have to ask permission if it suits their purpose to leave the school building at any time.

Needn't Ask Permission

They do not keep registers. And they don't have to ask permission to obtain supplies or to use any item of school equipment.

Teachers are fully and intimately involved in helping determine all school policies and practices which have a direct bearing on their teaching conditions.

Teachers decide for themselves how to teach, how often they wish to meet their students, how they will test and how they will assign letter grades.

The school has also attempted to disabuse students of the notion that the teachers are the defenders of the integrity of the institution. Instead, the school has tried to make students realize that the teachers are professionals who have a service to offer and who are available to help them learn.

These changes appear to have brought about a much greater measure of mutual respect between teachers and students.

Under the stimulus which freedom and respect have provided, the teachers prepare their work more carefully, and the quality of teaching improves.

It has also been interesting to note that under a system of voluntary attendance at classes, teachers get the message very promptly if the teaching is not up to par. Students may simply begin to go elsewhere to learn!

Moreover, when a more deliberate attempt is made to accord full professional status to the teacher, he appears to become more committed to serving the needs of his students.

He begins insisting upon his right to share in, or be consulted about, all the decisions affecting him and his clients.

Directives from the principal, or from anyone else for that matter, simply become unacceptable to the true professional.

Also, once the teacher is freed of petty, non-professional tasks, he finds time to become self-critical concerning all manner of attitudes and practices associated with the traditional school.

Experiment, Innovate

He begins to want to experiment and innovate; he also begins to concern himself with broad educational problems rather than with narrow teaching ones.

In addition, the teacher begins to make big investments of time and energy in his professional development, because he knows there will be a payoff in terms of freedom and opportunity to explore creative avenues to teaching.

But, probably most important of all, teachers begin to think of themselves as members of a professional team engaged in a truly professional approach to the problems of modern education.

We must stop being directive and authoritarian to both teachers and students, if the true purposes of education are ever to be served.

Our schools must be made more human, and we must start to give more than lip service to such ideas as freedom, responsibility, rights of the individual, trust, and faith in our fellow man.

Somehow or other, we must develop a generation of students who view schools not as coercive institutions designed to frustrate their every natural instinct, but rather as institutions dedicated to serving their individual needs and individual goals.

Change View Of Teachers

And, somehow or other, we must develop a generation of students who view teachers as professional persons who know something about how people learn, and who are dedicated to the idea that each of their clients has the right to help determine what, how, and under what conditions learning best takes place.

It may be that much of the inhumanity of our schools and much of the irrelevance that is taught in them are the root causes of the appalling drop-out rate that characterizes education in this province.

A measure of the tragic inadequacy of our schools, and of society's pitifully inadequate educational effort, can be obtained from an analysis of what happens, on a province-wide basis, with every 100 students who enter Grade 1.

One-quarter of all students drop out of regular school before reaching Grade 12. Also, a full one-third of those who start Grade 12 either fail or drop out during the year.

Drop-Out Rate Real Shock

In this modern day and age, when at least 12 years of basic education is such a necessity in order to live a meaningful life, society should be shocked at the fact that approximately half our youth does not satisfactorily complete a basic, general education.

If the teachers of this province continue to remain complacent in the light of the statistics cited above, they are scarcely deserving of the professional status for which they seemingly yearn.

How can we expect the majority of our future citizens to enjoy the full benefits of our civilization if only half of them complete a basic education of only 12 years?

And, to compound the problem, most of them probably leave school with an assortment of memorized facts, but without a thirst for learning.

What we educators should probably be doing is attempting to educate the public to the idea that the school system should be committed to keeping every child in school for a minimum of 12 years.

Curriculum Living Thing

During this 12-year period, the school would simply attempt to educate each child to the maximum of his ability. In such a system, passing or failing would be meaningless or irrelevant. In such a system, the curriculum would become a living thing and teachers would become committed to the present and future welfare of their clients rather than to the traditional values enshrined in the institution itself.

Moreover, the educational effectiveness of such schools could then be measured in terms that are meaningful to the individual and his future rather than in terms of a set of social values firmly rooted in the tyranny of the past.

We could then designate the schools with the highest standards as those which, over a 12-year period, develop in each student a life-long interest in, and commitment to, learning.

The evidence we have concerning the enormous shortcomings of our schools is overwhelming. It seems, regrettably, that only a small number of our colleagues, and only a relatively small proportion of our well-educated citizens, have grasped the obsolete splendor of our educational system.

A prominent U.S. educator recently said that hardly anything in our present system is worth saving.

The grade system must go.

Our obsession with teaching, rather than with learning, must go.

Our pass-fail syndrome must go.

Our concern with the memorization of facts, rather than with the development of understanding, must go.

The concept of the classroom unit must go.

Major Change Essential

If all of these relics from the past must go, what is worth saving, or what is left, in our present "system?"

Fundamental, indeed revolutionary, changes in our school system must take place. The 21st century is a mere 33 years away, but much of what we do in our schools is firmly rooted in the 19th century.

The emphasis in education must change from the group to the individual; from memory to inquiry; from the graded school to the ungraded school; from the self-contained classroom to the self-contained school; from scheduled classes to appointments and independent learning; from teacher as general practitioner to teacher as clinical specialist; from teaching as telling to teaching as guiding; and from schools like prisons to schools where freedom and humanity are enshrined.

It is indeed very tempting to ask questions about why our schools are so primitive, aversive, dysfunctional, coercive and inhuman.

Why Schools So Primitive?

It is equally tempting to ask when the profession and society in general are going to insist upon making the changes that are so obviously and compellingly necessary.

It is grossly irresponsible for educators to sit back and rest upon their laurels. The habitual answer that the schools are better now than they used to be is not worthy of the sophisticated teacher.

Are we teachers going to continue being part of the problem, or are we going to start being part of the solution?

If teachers are not going to fight for better schools, who will?

Progressive Principal Speaks Up

John Young, principal of Campbell River high school, has stirred nationwide interest by making a success of radical ideas in his school. Nearly all students are free to attend classes or study independently; regulations on dress and behavior are almost non-existent. The Campbell River experiment is catching on all over B.C. This is an excerpt from an article by Mr. Young in the current issue of The B.C. Teacher magazine.

Our Principals

Conviction that success breeds success leads John B. Robertson, principal of North Ward school, and members of his staff to bring their students to a point where they share that conviction.

"If a boy of girl has encountered one or two failures, he is apt to develop a failure complex — for failure breeds failure, too.

"A little extra attention, often through group teaching, may change failure to success — especially in reading or math — and then the student is on the right track.

NEW SCHOOL

"While those are key subjects, we concentrate not on the subject itself, but on teaching the student to think."

While this is Mr. Robertson's first year as principal of North Ward he is no stranger to the school. He went there as vice-principal in 1958 for a year and a half, then spent another year as acting principal.

These days he shares with the whole school a keen anticipation of the time when they'll move into the new Blanshard school, on which work has just begun two blocks away.

FIRST POST

Mr. Robertson is a native of Victoria who spent his first few years in Ontario before returning and attending Glenlyon school. From there he went to Victoria high, then attended Victoria Normal School when it was in Christ Church Cathedral Hall.

His first teaching post was a one-room, eight-grade school with 28 children at Bonnington Falls in the Kootenays. Next came a year at Trail and three at Fruitvale.

Returning to Victoria, he taught Grades 6 and 7 at Lampson and at Oaklands before going to North Ward. He returned to Oaklands as vice-principal under Norman Forbes, then in 1966 was named principal of Strawberry Vale school.

CAMP HELPER

Along the way, in common with so many principals, he acquired his BEd degree from UBC through night school and summer courses.

Mr. Robertson has had little time to develop hobbies, but for years has been active on the staff of Camp Columbia, summer recreation spot for the Anglican church.

He is married and has three children — a girl in Grade 11, another in Grade 9, and a boy in Grade 4 at Margaret Jenkins. — E.M.S.

Second Volvo. Take the payments you've made to yourself and pay cash for the second Volvo. Drive it six years and continue making payments to yourself that time. (At, say, $80 a month for six years you'll end up with a nice round $6,000.)

Third Volvo. Take some of that $6,000 and pay cash for your third Volvo too. (You'll still have about $3,000 left.) Continue making payments to yourself for six more years. You now have nearly $9,000. Enough for college, and your fourth Volvo. And you can take it from here.

Will it actually work? It will if you want it to. Will Volvos actually hold up for six years? In Sweden Volvos hold up an average of 11 years. In Sweden there are no speed limits on the highways; there are over 70,000 miles of unpaved roads.

One bright August morning in the year 1911, a small coasting vessel churned away from the port of St. Anthony, on the northernmost tip of Newfoundland, and headed up-river, destination, Quebec.

And Then There Were None . . .

CANADA'S ORIGINAL REINDEER EXPERIMENT

At the bobbing stern, stiff-legged and bending slightly over the rusty taffrail, stood a tall, skookum lad of 18. His cool, grey eyes were gazing shoreward in a silent goodbye to the small cluster of buildings on the hillside, the Grenfell Mission headquarters he called home, and the bare-masted schooners and stilted wharves which filled the small harbor.

He was never to see them again.

By GEORGE ERSKINE INGLIS

The day before, young Billy McNeill had been a reindeer herder's apprentice for the Grenfell Mission at $8 a month. This day, he was a full-fledged government herder at the grand pay of $1.10 a day and keep. He was off on the great adventure of his life.

When the reindeer crop had outgrown the Grenfell Mission's capacity, the Canadian government purchased 50 head at a price of $51.30 each, for an experiment in providing food for the Eskimos and Indians in the Mackenzie River area of the North West Territories. The herd consisted of six stags, four gelded stags trained as sled deer, and 40 breeding does.

The 50 reindeer were presently below decks, in the hold of the coaster, battened down against the ocean swells pushing up the Straits of Belle Isle, past Anticosta Island.

The deer got sick.

It was a rough trip. The journey, normally a four-day thing, lasted 11 storm-battered days. Packed between decks in a hold usually filled with Cape Breton plaster of Paris, four of the does died. Their lungs absorbed too much plaster dust, and clogged up.

Reaching Quebec, the bewildered reindeer were easily loaded into cattle cars and crossed the prairies to the end-of-steel at Stony Creek, some 30 miles east of Fort Edmonton, now Edmonton, capital of Alberta. Four more deer, three does and a valuable stag, died on this leg of the journey, presumably from further effects of plaster diet. Now there were only 42.

A large supply of reindeer moss had been plucked in Newfoundland, and accompanied the herd. As their appetites were small throughout the journey, the supply lasted well until the end-of-steel was reached. From there on, the diminishing sacks of moss were augmented by green oat bundles.

Six rangers from the Canadian forestry service joined the herd at Stony Creek.

In pairs, the reindeer were crated and loaded on horse-drawn wagons for the long, rutted and often boggy trip through the forested curves and up-and-down windings of the famous "Athabasca Trail" to reach the river town of Athabasca Landing, jump-off point for the water drive down river to the Far North. Teams of four oxen pulled the supplies for the rangers and the reindeer.

By this time, young Billy had undergone a transformation. Hard, lean, bronzed and moccasined, the youth, full of self-reliance and confident in his ability to carry through the exciting adventure, was now a man.

It was typical of Billy that, on entering the North, he quickly absorbed and adopted the northern customs. After once wrapping the caribou laces of his moccasins around his ankles, he never again wore boots or shoes.

It was a welcome sight for Billy and his fellow rangers when the reindeer cavalcade topped the last sand ridge past Tawatinaw and saw below, through the clusters of jack-pine, the row of squat buildings and riverboat warehouses fringing the low banks of the muddy Athabasca River.

The Landing as it was called, was the first true gateway to the unknown north. To it, by mule team, oxen and horses, past it on York boats, home-made scows, flat-nosed sturgeon heads for low water, wood-burning side-wheelers and long-stacked sternwheelers, went all the trade goods and living supplies for the long, silent reaches of the North.

The Landing was crowded with bearded teamsters, rivermen, full-bloods, half-breeds and voyageurs. Among them splashed the red-coated shoulders of the Mounties, coming and going. A few, a very few, women's faces showed.

At The Landing, five scows, with sides fenced in, awaited the reindeer convoy, four for the reindeer, one for the rangers. The scows were awkward, heavy, ungainly things, built of green lumber for easier shaping. They were 50 feet long, with a 12-foot beam. The oars were 20 feet long, and the steering sweep oar, anchored to an iron pivot at the stern, was 40 feet long. It took a strong man to be a steersman.

Forty of the burliest Indians were recruited as rowers, 10 to each scow, rowing standing up.

As one doe had died on the trail, the floating herd now numbered 41. But, going down river, problems developed, troubles burst out. Food ran short; hunger and sickness set in. One sled deer fell overboard and drowned, while another simply jumped free, reached shore and disappeared.

The herd now totalled 39.

On reaching Fort McMurray, where the Clearwater River joins the Athabasca, all the Indians but one steerer to each scow were sent back, and the little flotilla floated downstream to Lake Athabasca and Fort Chipewyan, dodging driftwood and sandbars as they slowly followed the lazy fall current.

The winding Athabasca has always been a problem to shipping, as it depends on summer rains and the spring-time snow melts from the Rocky Mountains for navigational depths.

It was now mid-October of 1911. Four more reindeer had died. Now there were only 35. Fall was giving way to winter. In the mornings, jagged strips of ice began to show in the quiet spots along the river channel. The air was full of wild geese, honking southward. The smaller birds had vanished. The captive reindeer grew gaunt; the little flotilla faltered before the strengthening ice.

Nine miles below Fort Chipewyan, winter closed in on them. Ice-bound, the rangers waited four days for the ice to thicken, then walked ashore, cut poplar and spruce logs, built cabins, pulled the scows ashore with a Spanish windlass, and settled in for the long winter with their diminishing herd.

Billy McNeill never knew what a Spanish windlass was until the scows were pulled ashore. A short, stout log was placed in the forks of two sturdy poplars. Holes were bored through both ends, and lengths of tough jack-pine pushed through for handles, or spokes. Rope cables from each scow were then tied to the centre of the log. Each jack-pine spoke was grabbed by four husky herders who, in relays, slowly winched the scows ashore. "No sea chanties," grinned Billy, "we had to save our frozen breath for twisting them dam' jack-pine."

Once in the cabins, the rangers were comfortable. They had stoves and a two-year supply of grub. Fuel was for the cutting. The lot of the reindeer also improved. Herded by the rangers' small but fast Lapland dogs, the reindeer pawed through the deep snow to reach a carpet of caribou moss, well scattered below Fort Chip. Unfortunately, three more reindeer died. Then, there were 33.

The next spring, on May 1, 1912, the little band, following the break-up ice, nosed into the tiny dock at Fort Fitzgerald. Further river progress was barred by the turbulent twin rapids appropriately named the Rapids of the Damned and the Rapids of the Drowned.

It was here that Billy, always a strong swimmer, won a $10 bet from the two Mounties stationed at Fort Fitzgerald. The river at this point is a half-mile wide and fairly fast water. Talking swimming, one of the policemen bet Billy that he couldn't swim the river above the rapids. Rowing him across, the two policemen followed behind to see he didn't get swept away, into the rapids.

Shucking his shirt, but keeping on his moccasins, Billy plunged in, swam across, pulled himself up the muddy bank, shook himself like a shaggy dog and reached for the $10 bill. "Ten bucks was a lot of moola in them days," chuckled Billy. "Our pay from the forestry was only $1.10 a day and rations. Just like army pay."

The Canadian forestry branch had planned a temporary resting camp on a peninsula of land thrusting out like a thirsty tongue into Whitefish Lake, some 25 miles east of Fort Fitzgerald. A fence was built across the peninsula. "The reindeer can rest here, fellas, and so can you," the forestry officials told the rangers. "You can't lose them. They won't try to swim, because they can't swim across."

"Next morning," laughed Billy, "there wasn't a reindeer in sight. During the night, they swam over to the mainland and disappeared southward."

This was the start of a long nightmare for the rangers. Leaving camp in a hurry, they chased after the runaway reindeer. On foot, they travelled more than 100 miles through forest, swamp and creek. They caught up to them at the broad mouth of the Peace River, a natural barrier.

"We were in awful shape," Billy shook his head. "We'd worn out our moccasins and socks, and we finished on bare feet, swollen, bruised and bleeding. I only carried my 30.30 rifle, a few shells and a small Hudson's Bay Company axe. No blanket, no mosquito bar. Lordy, but I was a bloody mess. I had one small fishhook and caught some jackfish. In the spruce clumps, I snared spruce hens and bush partridges. The darn things were so stupid, you could almost walk up to them and wring their necks."

It took the searchers 20 days to catch up with the reindeer. They found them, one misty morning, dejectedly standing on a small inshore sandbar. There were only 12; the rest had vanished. Wolves, probably. Lassoed, the unresisting reindeer were crammed into a

By JAMES K. NESBITT

For years I had heard of the Pemberton Memorial Chapel at Royal Jubilee Hospital, but I had never seen it until some weeks ago when I attended a memorial service there for Miss Lucie Pauline Woodrow, RN, Jubilee's night supervisor from 1935 to 1947 and then director of nursing until her retirement in 1956.

JAMES THOW, chairman of the Jubilee's board of directors, Miss Lucie Woodrow, and Dr. J. L. Murray Anderson, medical superintendent—in the early 1950s.

I must say I was impressed, both with the service and the beautiful little building itself, set in the midst of the hustle and bustle of the ever-growing hospital complex. It is a chapel that would grace an English countryside; indeed, it occurred to me, when I first glimpsed it, that it must have been removed from an ancient village in, say, Somerset.

Then the thought passed my mind that there must be dozens of historic spots in Greater Victoria unknown to the vast majority of our citizens. In this class I place the lovely Veteran's cemetery in Esquimalt, more than a century old, where Governor Frederick Seymour lies buried. He died in 1869 aboard HMS Sparrowhawk, while cruising northern waters.

The Jubilee's chapel was presented by Mrs. Joseph Despard Pemberton and was formally dedicated a few days after Christmas of 1909. It was a big event, presided over by Bishop Perrin, assisted by clergymen of several faiths — Rev. T. W. Gladstone, Rev. F. T. Tapscott, Rev. Joseph McCoy, Rev. A. Henderson, Rev. H. A. Carson.

The Colonist noted: "Solos were effectively rendered by Mrs. Gideon Hicks, Mrs. Harry Briggs, A. T. Goward, while the orchestral organ was played by Miss Fox, the violin accompaniment by Mr. Jesse Longfield sounding well in the beautiful edifice."

Bishop Perrin's dedication was: "This sanctuary which we now dedicate to the glory of God is the offering of Theresa Jane Despard Pemberton, of Gonzales, and given by her to the authorities of the Jubilee Hospital to be used by all denominations and inmates of the hospital for the pure worship of Almighty God.

"May the clergy ministering here bear a message of comfort and hope to all those who worship in this building.

"May the services be bright, happy and uplifting, and be a blessing to all who are suffering in mind and body."

The Colonist gave a glowing account of the new acquisition to the Jubilee: "Of the chapel itself it is impossible to speak in too high terms of praise.

"A building capable of seating some 200 people, constructed of solid brick and Douglas fir, with dome-shaped roof, the interior of which is composed of ornamental rafters, it is well-lighted by mullioned windows on every side, five of which form a semi-circle above the chancel.

"Above the entrance end is the gallery where an orchestral organ has been installed, and there also are provided seats for the choir.

"This part of the structure is lighted with a rose-shaped window, the design of Mrs. Pemberton herself, the beauty of which lends symmetry to the general arrangements.

"The five windows surmounting the chancel end of the chapel it is proposed in course of time to transform into memorial windows according as some person desires to dedicate one to the chapel.

"A feature of the building is the ornamental end to the supporting beams of the dome-shaped roof. These terminate between the side windows, the finishings depicting angels painted in gold and colors.

"The beams are four in number and on the eight ends are different paintings all portraying angels in different phrases.

"Over the entrance to the chancel, in gold lettering in bas relief, is the following inscription: "Look Unto Jesus, the Healer of soul and boyd.'

MISS LUCIE WOODROW, RN.
. . . student nurses said she gave them wise guidance and leadership.

"An inscription to the following effect, also painted in letters of gold, surmounted by a group of angels, is above the entrance: 'To the Glory of God, may all those who enter this sanctuary hear the voice of Jesus, saying 'come unto Me, and I will give you rest.'

"This lettering is glazed over with plate glass, so that it is well-nigh impossible for it to wear out.

"The building is indeed decorative in all its effects, a tribute to the excessive care and the timely counsel with which Mrs. Pemberton has added to the efforts of the architect, Mr. J. C. M. Keith.

"Yet, notwithstanding the artistic efforts which have been expended, there is, withal, a simplicity which is not its least pleasing feature. Nothing of its kind has ever hitherto been erected in Victoria. When its beauties become widely known it will undoubtedly form a place of attraction, not only to the residents of the immediate vicinity of the hospital, but also all Victorians."

The Colonist found only one flaw, which has long since been righted: "In connection with the structure, there is only one drawback at present, and that is the approach to the chapel from the hospital itself.

"Entrance is gained through a bathroom. This unpleasant way of gaining access to the chapel might easily be remedied.

"At little expense, the bathroom could be moved, allowing a clear passageway from the chapel to the main hospital.

"Among those who have contributed to the chapel are Bishop Perrin, Canon Beanlands (Mrs. Pemberton's son-in-law), David Spencer, Otto Weiler, Mr. Green, Mr. Mesher, Mr. Flicks, Mr. Innes, the Women's Auxiliary, and The Colonist. Dr. and Mrs. Hasell also interested themselves very largely and helped forward the work in every way they could."

It was altogether appropriate that the memorial service for Miss Woodrow should have been held here, for she gave 21 years of life to Royal Jubilee Hospital. She left behind her lessons in hard work, loyalty, devotion to duty.

Miss Woodrow was born in Manitoba and raised on an Ontario farm, where she developed a passion for cats. While other little girls played with dolls she romped with the cats in the barn.

As a teen-ager she went to Vancouver, living in old Mount Pleasant district. She was delicate, but sheer willpower got her through nurses' training at Vancouver General Hospital, from which she graduated in 1921.

Later she was on staff at the famous Scripps Metabolic Clinic in La Jolla and for some years was surgical floor supervisor at San Diego County General Hospital.

For a year she was attached to the great Bellevue Hospital in New York city, and did social nursing in the slums of Manhattan.

In 1935 she came to Royal Jubilee, as night

MARCH PAST of the 30th Battalion at old Willows race track for inspection by Gen. Sir Sam Hughes before departure for overseas.

Victoria Gave 30th Battalion Big Sendoff

By CUTHBERT M. BROWN

Early in 1915 there were trenches well and truly dug, shored with timber in the approved manner, not only in Oak Bay (at the Willows) but in Esquimalt and at Clover Point, as men of the 30th Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force, feverishly prepared for service at the front in the 1914-1918 First World War. Every day parties of soldiers could be seen marching smartly hither and yon and practising small arms fire on the various ranges in Victoria and surrounding districts.

All was well ordered bustle and bustle at the Willows Army Camp, and the old horse—or should I say his mouth—was much younger and had, I've no doubt, more teeth and was in somewhat better shape in those days, but still produced the same brand of prognostication: "You'll be shoving off tomorrow; the day after tomorrow; next week; not for 10 days; next month; next year. And the proverbial grapevine was also flourishing, working overtime turning out the familiar line of predictions, some on the mark, some near the truth and some indeed very wide of the mark.

A soldier of the 30th Battalion was found enlapsed on the sidewalk of upper Fort Street with several civilians standing about and endeavoring to help him. This started a rumor that a party of civilians had beaten up and killed a serviceman, which proved to be without foundation, however, as no marks of violence were found, and death was attributed to natural causes.

At this time the Kaiser was eating "Special K" in Germany. This was not, however, the brand we have with us today, but a kind of rye bread (much adulterated) which he hoped the people would follow his example in eating freely.

There was an attempt to form a Home Guard Unit, but the government most sincerely regretted arms could not be supplied for this purpose as they were so desperately needed for the troops already in training.

A lengthy article appeared in the Victoria Times by J. J. M. describing a torpedo, its size and shape, that it carried a charge of guncotton, was gyroscopically controlled, driven by powerful air engines, and attained a speed of 14 knots. Germans were said to be readying zeppelins for raids on England. Some days later five people were killed and five wounded little more than a hundred miles from London.

On January 21, 1915, there was a brilliant opening of the legislature in Victoria. The Hon. F. S. Barnard was lieutenant-governor and Sir Richard McBride the premier.

The honor guard was drawn from the 30th Battalion. Very neat and smart in new uniforms and equipment, the guard was the cause of much admiration.

The day was bright, lending a happy air to the occasion, and music supplied by the military bands was much appreciated by the large crowd assembled, which, in view of the fact that the 30th would be moving soon, was greatly thrilled to have the opportunity of seeing it in such bright array.

On Jan. 24 Major General Sam Hughes (Minister of Militia) inspected the camp at the Willows, under clear skies and brilliant sunshine coupled with a frosty crispness.

Long before reviewing time the crowd began to arrive (there were close to 2,000 onlookers) who showed great enthusiasm, clapping vigorously as the men marched smartly by.

The brigade was drawn up in line facing the pavilion, and promptly at 10 o'clock Major General Hughes accompanied by his aide-de-camp Lieut. Bassett, Lieutenant-Governor Barnard, and other high ranking officers, including Sir Richard McBride, the premier, entered the reviewing stand. A fanfare of bugles and rolling of drums was sounded, and the general salute was given.

The brigade marched past in column of route, headed by Lt.-Col. Hall.

The spectators patiently waited through the inspection, which included many ceremonial manoeuvres, to see if the general would address the men, but he did not oblige, and eventually the soldiers marched off the grounds. A fine program of military music was rendered by the massed bands. The minister drove away to attend a luncheon in his honor at the Union Club.

On Jan. 30, the following terse message was received at the Willows Camp:

COL. Ogilvie,
D.O.C. Military District No. 11,
Victoria, B.C.

Hold 30th Battalion in readiness to embark at the earliest possible date

Signed: Adjutant General

Prior to the troops' departure they were inspected by Lieutenant-Governor Barnard, who made a call on Lt.-Col. Hall, congratulated him on the splendid appearance of his men, and wished officers and men "God-speed."

On Feb. 15, 1915, Victoria said goodbye to the 30th Battalion. A hearty sendoff was given to the 1,100 volunteer soldiers who left for the front on the Sunday afternoon under sunny skies.

The fact that, in accordance with instructions, nothing was published in the press respecting plans for departure of the troops, did not appear to make any difference to the size of the crowd which attended to participate in the "sendoff." Such news could not be kept secret for long, and when the battalion, headed by Lt.-Col. J. A. Hall left the barracks, the road was lined with people practically for the whole two miles from the Willows to Belleville Street. It was an impressive parade.

Leading the way was the band of the 5th Regiment; an escort from that corps; Lt.-Col. C. A. Bott, the O.C.; and officers and men of the 2nd C.M.R.; the 50th Gordon Highlanders' pipers followed; and immediately behind were officers and men of the 30th Battalion.

the multitude participating in the historic event. There were few in the crowds, that blocked all roads immediately about and for some distance away from the CPR docks during the time taken by the soldiers in embarking on the steamers Princess Adelaide and Princess Mary, who did not at least boast an acquaintance among the 1,100 khaki-clad men.

Thousands had close personal friends in the corps, and hundreds were watching sons, brothers, husbands, cousins or sweethearts march away, cheerily smiling, to lay down their lives, if need be, for their King and country.

Not often is the poise of a Victoria gathering so shaken, but on this occasion, and with sufficient reason, the people's frame of mind may be termed hysterical. There was no vociferous cheering. Groups here and there along the line shouted hurrahs and received them back with interest from the uniformed lads. Flags and bunting made the soldiers' lines gay, but among the civilians the handkerchief was more in evidence.

When the sturdy volunteers halted on Belleville Street while the arrangements were made for their accommodation on the two ships, the lines were taken by storm.

Relatives, friends and aquaintances elbowed their way in and soon the majority of the men were surrounded by little groups having a goodbye chat.

On the way to the docks the 5th Regiment Band played such popular airs as The Girl I Left Behind Me, Soldiers of the Queen, It's a Long Way to Tipperary, Don't Cry Little Girl, Don't Cry, and the 88th Fusiliers Band contributed an enlivening program of the same character; also the bagpipes kept up a continual skirl. Every once in a while there was a burst of cheering and someone in the crowd would call out: "Are we downhearted!"

And there would be an immediate and enthusiastic: "NO!"

But it was at the wharves while the troops were embarking and after they had boarded the ships and climbed the masts and funnels that the excitement began.

There was much shouting back and forth, and just at the last minute, when the boats were about to draw away the sirens of the vessels, together with the horns of hundreds of motor cars and other noise producing contrivances, assisted in the creation of pandemonium. The Princess Adelaide left first, followed shortly after by the Princess Mary, with the same hearty if clamorous sendoff.

So departed the men whose address from now on would be "Somewhere in France."

They would climb the heights of fame and walk the halls of death and destruction. Shot and shell, gas and mud would be their portion, and rats and vermin their companions.

Such names as Passchendaele, Arras, Ypres, Cambrai, Vimy Ridge, Drocourt-Quiant, Canal du Nord, would hold dread memories, but they would press on undaunted, whistling and singing snatches from The Byng Boys, Keep the Home Fires Burning, Mademoiselle from Armentiers, There's a Long, Long Trail Awinding, as they swung down the narrow, cobbled streets of Flanders.

Dick Prouse, whose little black book contains the names of some 72 survivors of the unit, was born in Nanaimo, the son of a member of the Royal Marines stationed at San Juan Island. Dick may well be termed "Mr. 30th Batalion" himself, seeing that over the years, as a labor of love, he has tended and kept green the names and deeds of the men of yesteryear. Some names that come to mind are Robert Fort and Clem Gill of Victoria, John Grassick of Nanaimo and F. S. Beaudette and Henry Brown of Nanoose Bay.

Battle honors and decorations include the V.C., won by none other than Col. Cy Peck, and 27 other medals and bars. Fifty-one were granted commissions.

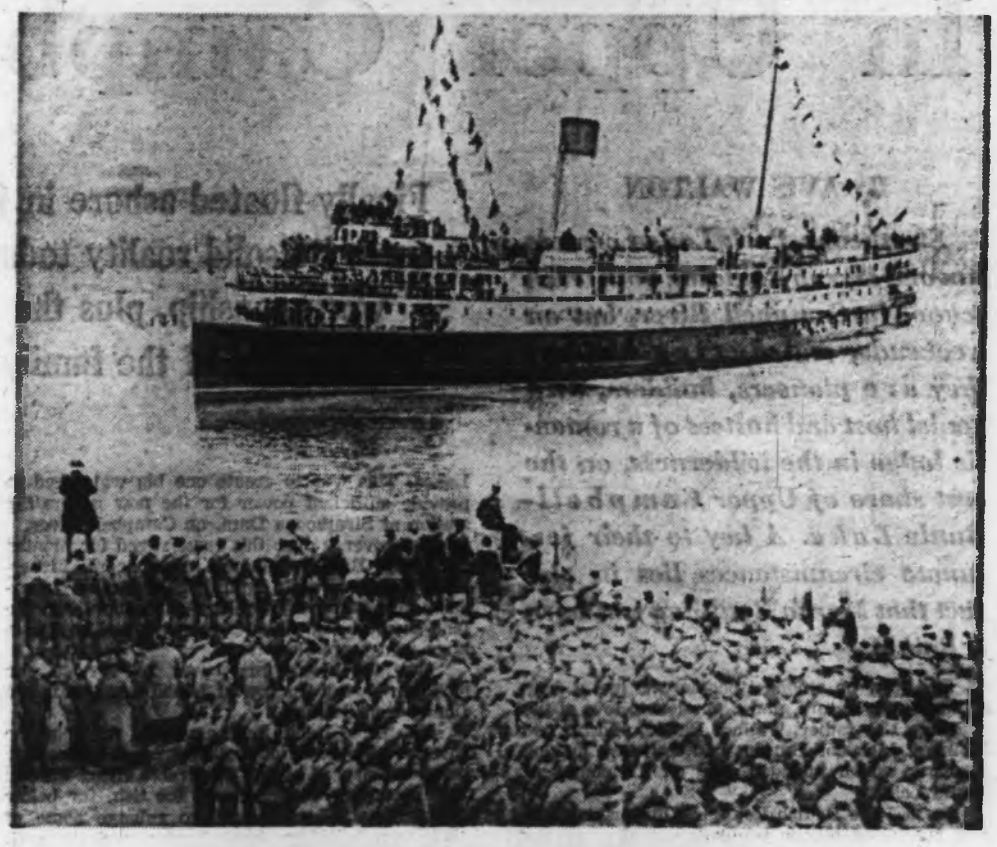

A 30th Battalion reunion and get-together will be held Feb. 14 at 2:30 p.m. in the Ingraham Hotel, 2915 Douglas Street. This will be preceded by the small ceremony of a presentation to the provincial archives of an enlarged picture showing the inspection of the 30th by General Sir Sam Hughes at the Willows Camp.

STRATHCONA PARK LODGE as it is today.

Logger's Dream Drifted In Upper Campbell Lake

Finally floated ashore in 1957, Strathcona Park Lodge owes its solid reality today, to its original magnificent workmanship, plus the tremendous determination of the family who rescued it

By AVIS WALTON

Strathcona Park Lodge owners Jim and Myrna Boulding both teach school in Campbell River, but on weekends, and during holidays they are pioneers, builders, and genial host and hostess of a romantic lodge in the wilderness, on the east shore of Upper Campbell-Buttle Lake. A key to their fortunate circumstances lies in the fact that Myrna Boulding was born a Baikie.

She grew up amongst people who had a deep sympathy for nature, and a passionate love of the outdoors Her father, Wallace Baikie, and his two brothers, Jack and Harper, had their own logging business, which included land on the shores of Buttle Lake.

In 1956 the British Columbia Power Commission purchased all the privately owned properties on the shorelines of Buttle and Upper Campbell Lakes. This was to create one big watershed to provide sufficient power for the new generating station at Strathcona Dam, on Campbell River.

Controversy over this issue raged for months in all the British Columbia newspapers. Fishermen, hunters, and naturalists protested vigorously, and with considerable justification, that the land should be unsullied by change, and kept as a huge wild recreation area.

But the need for power to service the northern part of Vancouver Island was great, and finally won the day.

The three Baikie brothers could not bear the thought of every fine building on the shoreline being submerged by the inexorable rising waters, and becoming wooden caves for fish, far below the surface. They decided to salvage some of their own buildings, bunk houses, and the cook house, at Dolly Varden Point.

They purchased Strathcona Lodge from the B.C. Power Commission, and amid considerable skepticism, rescued it from a watery grave.

Other shoreline buildings, still sound, solid and comfortable, and fit for years of life and laughter, disappeared, not to desintegrate, but to be preserved for an even longer span of existence beneath the surface, for wood lasts longer in water than in air.

Strathcona Lodge was built on the shore of Upper Campbell Lake in 1930 at a cost of $7,000 for a millionaire tailor, and his wife, from San Francisco. The Henning Bergs were of Swedish stock, blonde and vitally handsome. They holidayed at Upper Campbell and adjoining Buttle Lake for four or five summers, each May until September. Both were excellent shots and enjoyed boating, swimming, hiking, fishing and hunting, and loved the quiet wilderness life.

When Henning Berg died suddenly, his widow sold the big summer lodge to Mr. and Mrs. G. Whittaker, of Victoria, who ran it as an exclusive resort until B.C. Power Commission took it over.

It was the rugged Scandanavian charm of Strathcona Lodge that inspired the Baikie brothers to go to so much trouble to re-locate it. The architect was a Norwegian, Jack Earsland. He built log homes in Campbell River in the twenties and thirties, and rustic lodges for the CPR all over British Columbia. He designed in strong lines, for endurance and sympathy with the landscape.

On its original site, on Upper Campbell Lake, Strathcona Lodge was 54 by 32 feet. A wide porch spanned the south side, to overlook the lake.

On a recent week-end trip to Strathcona Park Lodge we happened to run into Jack Phillips, carpenter, logger and guide who helped to erect this beautiful log building, on the other side of the lake, nearly 40 years ago.

We sat by a roaring fire in the lounge in its new location, and learned many details of its construction. Jack pointed out features which made it exceptionally strong and attractive.

Cedar logs were selected from trees of a uniform size, felled in early spring during the sap-running season, to maintain a clear amber color throughout, then peeled, oiled, "V" grooved horizontally, and held together with two-foot drift bolts.

Corners were notched and interlocked, grooves were slashed in every door and window setting, braces were inserted and hidden by frames. The mellow lounge has a four-square pitched ceiling, dramatized and strengthened by open beams, criss-crossed like the lines of the Union Jack, to throw fascinating firelight shadows.

A massive wrought-iron hook to hold a lamp, centres the crosses, and goes right through the ridge pole to the roof. (This hook was made by Gus Miller, blacksmith, who used to live at the bottom of the big hill in Campbell River. The Seaside Motel has replaced his ship.)

Jack Phillips told us that a curving staircase of split half-logs graced one corner of the lounge, but did not go anywhere, it was strictly for ornamentation and draping bearskins on the hand-rail!

Jack reminisced about the original crew of workmen who created Strathcona Lodge; Jasper, Walter and Bill Sutherland, Axel Magnessen, Herbert Pidcock, Jim Calnan; Mary Sutherland, Jasper's wife, cooked for the men, who camped in tents and cabins by the lodge, as they built it.

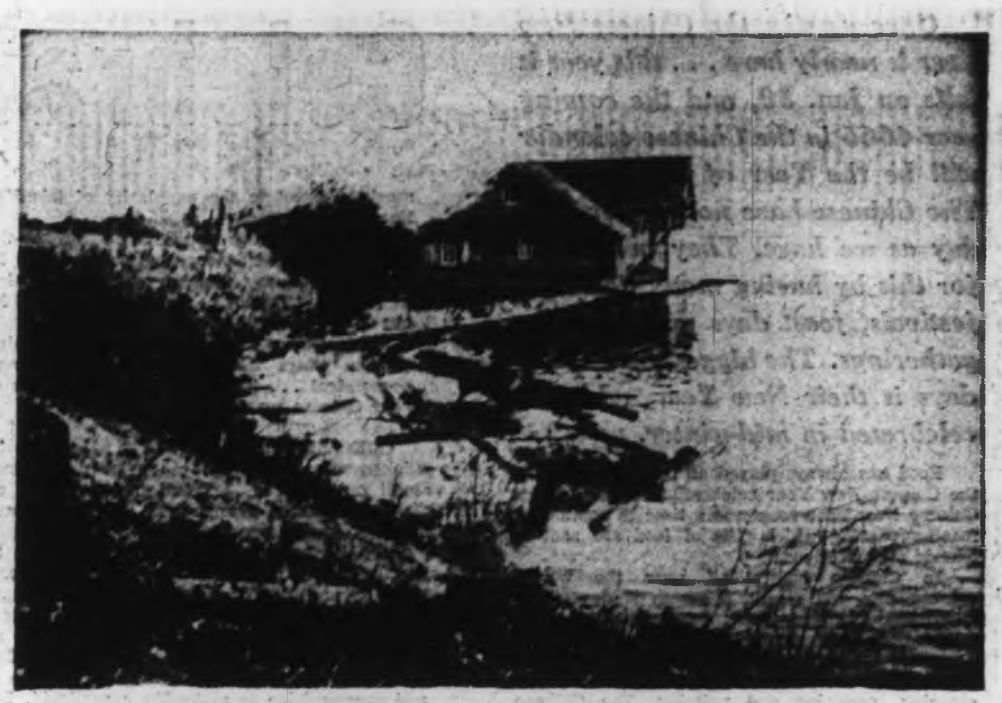

The Boudings and the Baikies took up the tale, and over coffee and cookies, described the problems of moving Strathcona Lodge from the west shore to the east, opposite the Elk River, where, finally it came to rest, it was re-named Strathcona Park Lodge.

A major problem was that any salvaged buildings would have to float about in and on the lake, for over a year, while the waters rose, before they could be re-located on shore.

To this end, the Baikies showed enormous cedar logs beneath Strathcona Lodge. This created a huge raft which floated the structure off its severed foundations, as the level of the lake rose.

For nearly 13 months the lodge lurched about the lake, partially submerged, in a drunken and abandoned fashion.

About this time Wallace Baikie bought out the shares of his brothers, and sold the structure to his daughter and son-in-law, Myrna and Jim Boulding. When the shoreline finally settled and the lake reached its new height, the entire Baikie family, and in-laws, plus a crew of enthusiastic woodsmen from Denman Island got busy with big cats and winches to haul the Lodge out of the water, and up the hill, on the east shore of Upper Campbell-Buttle Lake.

The log raft became a wooden sled. With ropes, cables, and winches, they inched the Lodge higher and higher, anchoring winches to sturdy tree stumps. When they ran out of stumps they stopped, a hundred yards above the water line. The building sagged at an angle of about 40 degrees, with her ridge-pole awry. She was a tired rhomboid, but she held together! She stank with slime and algae. Jim and Myrna and the Baikies hosed out the building with fire hoses. They scrubbed!

They jacked the building up, pushed it into a better position to take full advantage of the lake and mountain panoramic view. They spent months building a lower storey, on the down slope, below the original floor, extended each side of the Lodge, added a reception hall, a larger kitchen coffee shop, and extra bedrooms.

They polished the logs with linseed oil, elbow grease and love.

Jim built a new fireplace, with rounded stones, in the lounge and a split rock one in recreation room below.

Jim devised huge log chesterfields. Myrna draped them with bear skins and deer hides. He made end tables from wild crab-apple wood and beautiful burls, and hollowed logs by hand, to create unique chairs for the coffee shop.

Bunk houses, floated from Dolly Varden Point to the Lodge site, were remodeled into guest cabins, scattered on the hillside, overlooking the water and the docks.

Prior to the flooding of the lake, the Baikies owned a summer home at Dolly Varden Point. It was built on skids, so as to be readily moved from logging area to another. For years it served as a cook house for the Baikie Bros. Logging Company. They set it adrift in 1956, and landed it at Cedar Creek, in 1957. (Now it is owned by Harper Baikie.)

While the original fireplace in Strathcona Park Lodge had to be torn out before the building could be moved, the fireplace in the house at Dolly Vardes Point, during transportation was held in place by heavy beams across the floor, heavily bolted down through to a large metal plate beneath the hearth.

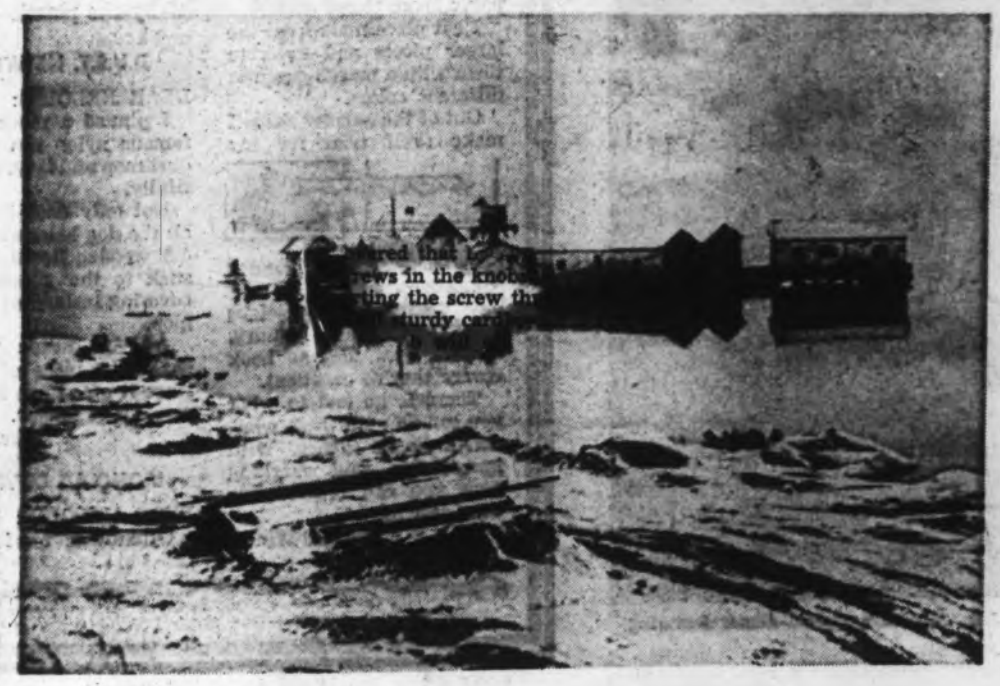

Strathcona Park Lodge today is mellow and comfortable.

Set on a gravel road, it is easy to reach by car. You can launch your own boat, or rent one from the Lodge owners, to enjoy splendid cutthroat trout fishing in one of the most glorious lake and mountain settings in the world.

It is an inspiring setting for hunting with a camera, for the land is still largely wilderness nearby, and the animals are tame.

It is enticing to hunters with guns, in season.

Currently the Boudings are exploring trails on the mountains above them, with a view to opening ski cabins in the future. This is a delightful place for a family holiday, and an ideal spot for the Boulding children to stretch and to grow, mentally and physically, to work and to play, as a part of the team of Baikies and Boudings. They are powerful men and strong women who generation after generation have pitted their wits and creative energies against the ever-watchful wilderness; with superb results!

Celebrate Chinese N

With Orien

Once again the Chinese New Year is nearly here . . . this year it falls on Jan. 30, and the coming year 4666 in the Chinese calendar will be the Year of the Monkey. The Chinese have no regular Sunday as we have. They make up for this by having many holidays, festivals, feast days and family gatherings. The biggest of all feast days is their New Year, which is celebrated in mid-winter.

Food has always played an important part in the Chinese New Year celebration and the entire Chinese New Year season is a time of continuous feasting, during which gifts of food are sent to friends and relatives.

In Chinese homes all over the world, not one day, but almost a month is devoted to welcoming the New Year. Preparations for the celebrations begin weeks before the old year ends . . . every house must be spic and span with each member of the family participating in house cleaning, repairing and painting. The Chinese have a Kitchen God, whose picture is pasted on the chimney. A week before the old year ends the god ascends to heaven where he reports on the good and evil conduct of each family member. In some areas people offer the god sweet foods so he may speak only only sweet words.

Not only the Chinese love Chinese food . . . Chinese restaurants across the land cater to people of every race, and the many canned and frozen Chinese food sold in our super markets attest to the popularity of this Far Eastern cuisine.

The Orientals love well flavored food and their cooking has tremendous appeal to the broad food tastes and culinary interest of the most of us. Just for fun, why not celebrate the Chinese New Year with a Chinese meal?

The Chinese have a way of preparing chicken wings that is both interesting and economical . . . it could be the main dish of your Chinese meal . . .

CHINESE CHICKEN WINGS . . . serves 4. 12 chicken wings, 3 Tbsp. butter or margarine, 1 small onion sliced, 1 small can (about 1 cup) pineapple chunks, orange juice, ¼ cup soy sauce, 2 Tbsp. brown sugar, 1 Tbsp. vinegar, 1 tsp. ginger, ½ tsp. each salt, mace and Tabasco (use less Tabasco if you like milder flavor), ¼ tsp. dry mustard and 1½ Tbsp. cornstarch. Fold tips of wings under to form a triangle. Melt butter in large skillet; add wings and onion. Cook until wings are nicely brown on both sides. Drain pineapple, reserve chunks. Measure syrup and add orange juice to make 1¼ cups liquid. Blend in soy sauce, sugar, vinegar, salt, mace, Tabasco and mustard. Pour over chicken.

Cover and simmer about 30 minutes or until wings are tender, basting top pieces with liquid once or twice. Remove wings to large platter. Thicken sauce by adding a little cold water to the cornstarch and blend in some of the hot liquid. Add to liquid in skillet with the pineapple chunks, stir and bring to a boil. Serve with hot rice.

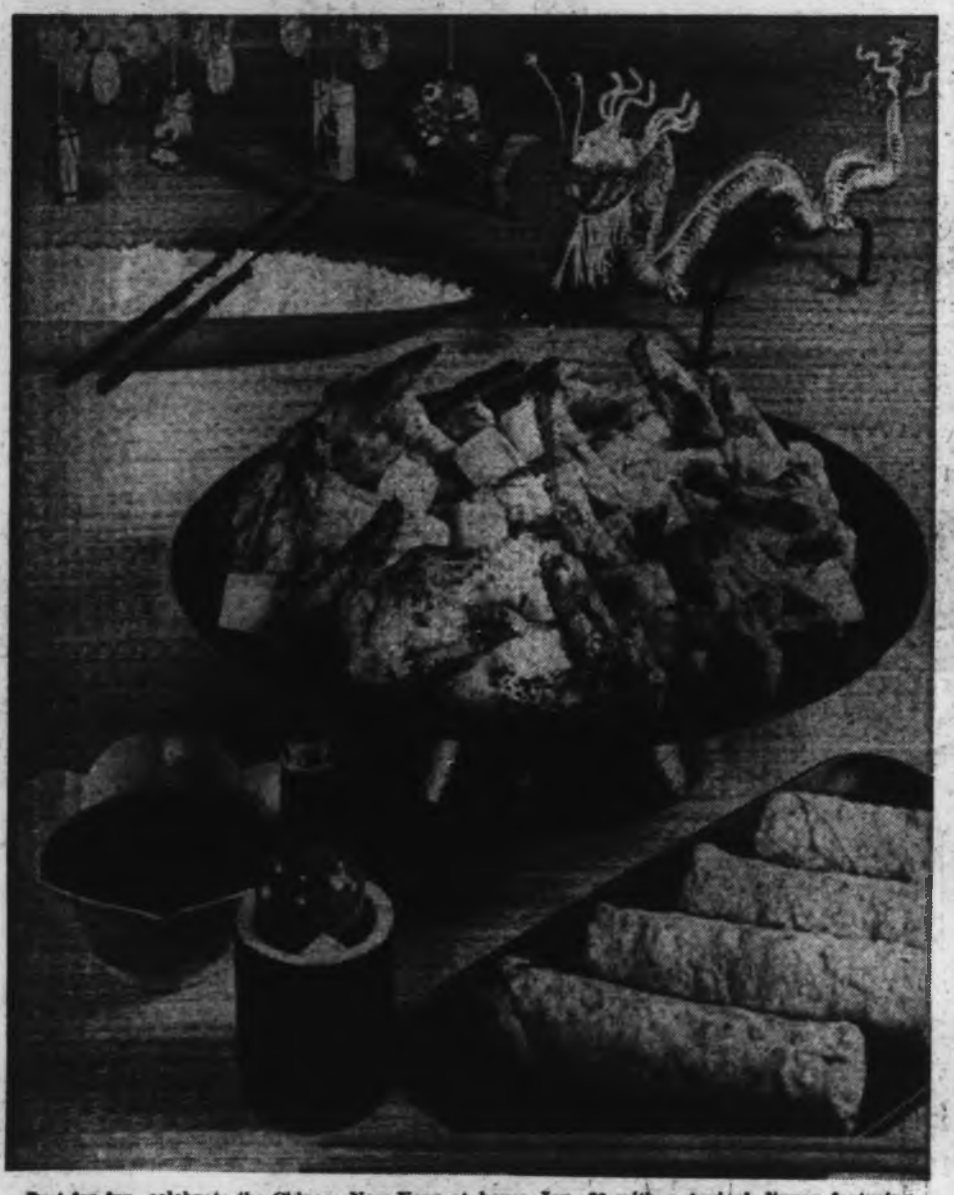

Crab Foo Young is another flavorful Chinese dish . . . this is a sort of Chinese pancake using eggs, canned crab meat, bean sprouts and scallions . . . served with a sweet-sour sauce. This recipe too serves 4.

CRAB FOO YOUNG . . . ½ tsp. Tabasco, 6 eggs, 1 cup drained cooked bean sprouts, 1 can (7 ozs.) crab meat coarsely flaked, 4 scallions or green onions thinly sliced and 2 Tbsp. salad oil, divided.

Add Tabasco to eggs and beat lightly with a fork. Stir in bean sprouts, crab and scallions. Melt 2 tsp. of oil in skillet, add about ¼ of batter and cook until lightly browned, turn and brown the other side. Continue making pancakes, keeping hot until all 4 pancakes are cooked. Stack on serving platter and top with warm Sweet and Sour Sauce.

SWEET AND SOUR SAUCE . . . 2 tsp. sugar, 1½ tsp. cornstarch, 2 tsp. vinegar, 1 Tbsp. soy sauce, ⅛ tsp. Tabasco and ¾ cup cold water.

Combine sugar, cornstarch, vinegar, soy sauce and Tabasco in saucepan. Stir in water. Cook over low heat stirring until thickened. Serve in pure Oriental style with cooked rice and fragrant, freshly brewed tea.

Just for fun, celebrate the Chinese New Year at home Jan. 30 with a typical dinner featuring sweet-sour chicken wings.

The Chinese pay great attention to the aesthetic qualities of food . . . nothing is done haphazardly . . . the relation of one food to another in regard to color, shape and texture is considered. Even the cutting up of the food is done thoughtfully.

The rice bowl is always present at the Chinese dinner table, every dish is built around it, so let's take a quick simple rice cooking lesson. . . . Take 1 cup uncooked long grain rice, 2 cups cold water and ½ tsp. salt. Combine in a saucepan with a tight lid. Set over high heat and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and cook until all the liquid is absorbed. If you have the urge to stir, use a fork and lift the rice lightly. When done the rice should be separate and fluffy. This quantity will produce 3 cups cooked rice.

Tea must accompany every Chinese meal . . . every self-respecting Chinese restaurant puts the tea pot on the table before you order your meal. If you serve a Chinese meal do try real Chinese tea . . . there are a number of varieties. The three most popular blends are Jasmine; Tea of the Sixth Happiness and Woo Lung. As in any tea making be sure to rinse the tea pot with boiling water to heat the pot before making the tea.

A Chinese friend with the incongruous name of Robert E. Lee, satisfied my curiosity about the wee saucer of hot mustard and plum sauce which accompanies most Chinese meals. I love it but could never seem to duplicate it in my own kitchen. Thanks to my Chinese friend, here is how it is made . . .

Combine 2 tsp. vinegar with 2 tsp. dry mustard. Add a dash of salt, a whiff of garlic and ¾ cup greengage plum jam fluffed up with a fork. Add ½ tsp. soya sauce. Blend well. Serve in a small saucer . . . plum sauce on one side and hot mustard on the other. Hot mustard is just dry

CHINA IN YOUR KITCHEN . . .

Texture is important in Chinese cooking . . . vegetables are crisp cooked. For special crunchy texture use Chinese water chestnuts, crisp bean sprouts, sesame seeds and chow mein noodles.

Meat and chicken are cut into small pieces so that they will cook in minimum time.

Salt, pepper, ginger, garlic and soy sauce seem to be the chief seasoning agents. When soy sauce is used, use salt sparingly. Soy is quite salty.

Chinese type long-grain rice is used exclusively by all Chinese.

Other ingredients used in Chinese cooking include . . . bamboo shoots, Chinese cabbage or chard, snow pea pods, mushrooms, pineapple and almonds, to name a few.

Coarse grained meats and firm vegetables as carrots, celery and some cabbage are sliced diagonally.

Straight slicing is used with tenderer meats and with such vegetables as scallions, parsley and mushrooms.

Meat can be more finely and easily cut if slightly frozen before being used. Some recipes call for paper-thin slicing.

Chinese cooking is fun.

Dog collars come in various colors and sizes to fit any suitcase.

Jerry Hecht

Jerry, the best answer I have found is to take any old nut (and for goodness' sake don't take me), such as a walnut or pecan, and break it in half.

Remove the meat (that's the part you eat) and use the broken side of the nut, which will be white, and rub the spot.

I have found this removes practically any mark on furniture no matter what it is made out of. Heloise

A PERFECT FINISH

DEAR HELOISE:

While antiquing bureau pulls or chest knobs, I discovered that by leaving the screws in the knobs and inserting the screw through a small sturdy cardboard box, the knob will stand up by itself.

This way I can paint the knobs without holding them.

I can put my free hand in the box to hold it steady and turn the knobs as necessary without getting paint on my hand.

Moreover, they dry beautifully because they can remain upright.

CLEAN UP ON THIS!

DEAR HELOISE:

If you will keep a plunger spray bottle filled with turpentine in your garage you will eventually find that you're going to use it for a thousand things:

When you've painted around the house and have paint on your clothes and hands.

When you've worked on the car and have grease on your hands.

When you've repaired the lawn mower and have grass stains on your best pair of white socks or your best T-shirt . . . all you have to do is squirt some turpentine on it, rub a little bit, and wash as usual.

It's a good cleaner. I wouldn't do without a bottle of turpentine in my garage.

If the legs of your chairs are larger, you may have to use a nickel.

NEVER TO SAIL AGAIN, RMS Queen Mary is to become a hotel-convention complex at Long Beach, Calif.

TRAVELLERS in a HURRY SPELLED DOOM FOR RMS QUEEN MARY

By T. W. PATERSON

Vessels of all shapes and sizes, from tiny Atlantic-defying cockle to mighty dreadnought, have won international notice and affection over the ages, but only one has reigned as true monarch of the seas: RMS Queen Mary.

Now she rests at her last berth, in the alien Pacific waters of Long Beach, Calif. As a jet-age world, which seemed to have forsaken all sentiment for ruthless economy, watched in tearful nostalgia, the aging queen completed her final voyage. When the last papers were signed, amid the skirling of bagpipes and cheering thousands, Royal Mail Ship Queen Mary was reduced to the status of "a building."

But even as a hotel-maritime museum-convention centre, she will reign supreme in the hearts of all who have experienced the vanishing age of luxury liner.

By the mid-1920s, Cunard directors had realized two new, larger liners were needed to retain the company's domination of the Atlantic passenger trade. The three leading Cunarders were showing signs of age; Mauretania had finally relinquished the coveted "blue riband of the Atlantic" to spanking-new challengers from Germany and Italy.

As plans progressed, it became apparent that a single "super-ship" was the answer: Queen Mary.

Then followed four busy years of planning, testing and redesigning before the contract was signed with Messrs. John Brown and Company, the famous Clydebank builders. Dec. 1, 1930, the task of building the world's finest ocean monarch was begun.

It all had to be done slowly and surely; nothing could be left to chance, so those four years before the contract was placed were occupied with making thousands of designs, thousands of blueprints, and hundreds of model experiments to produce something not exactly out of the ordinary, but which would have strength to withstand even the most abnormal stress of wind and wave; a liner that must be free from the bogey of fire, and well protected against the dangers of collision by the possession of liberal bulkheads, double bottoms, etc., which will render her practically unsinkable.

In short, the designers were asked first and foremost to produce a super-ship, and then, when all this was attained, to fit into her all those luxuries and refinements that the great travelling public not only expected but demanded.

John Brown and Company went to work with a will on "Job 534." After more than 7,000 experiments with scale models in testing tanks, all was ready to begin.

From that day — late in 1930 — onwards, she began to arise from her keel-plates; a mass of curved vertical girders, the naked steel skeleton of a ship; every section dead true, every rib in its allotted position, with hundreds of puny human-beings crawling over her, moulding her to their will; on all sides the flash of a thousand riveters' forges, the staccato roar of hundreds of pneumatic riveters driving home some of the 10,000,000 rivets used in the ship—rivets which if placed end-to-end would extend a distance of nearly 300 miles.

Then came the plating. Thousands of plates of high-tensile steel, ranging from eight feet in length to 30 feet, and weighing from two hundredweight to more than three tons, had to be curved and cut to exact measurements, and fixed in position. About 2,000 portholes and windows had to be cut, and then, slowly but surely the 'skeleton' was covered with its steel skin, the 12 decks passed from being mere transverse girders into actual steel floors. Away aft, the stern frame and shaft brackets, weighing some 500 tons, had been transported by road from Darlington and fixed in position, and the four propellers connected to their shafts . . .

Then, on a cold December day in 1931, work stopped. The rivet guns ceased their angry chatter, the giant cranes groaned to a stop, the thousands of craftsmen (16,000 ironworkers alone!) came no more. An eerie silence descended upon the rising monster of steel; the depression had caught up with "534." For two summers and two winters, blistered by sun, rusted by rain, the cocoon waited for the spring day when it would again come to life.

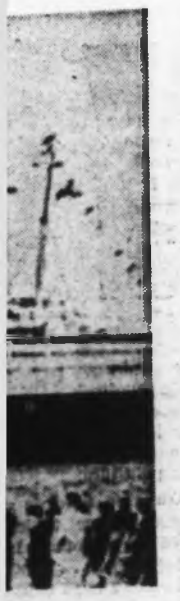

April 3, 1934, was a happy day for Cunard and John Brown Company, as the army of workmen once more swarmed over the liner. There would be no further delays. Six months later, in a cold September rain, King George VI and a cheering crowd of 200,000 watched as Her Majesty Queen Mary pressed the button to launch the mighty liner that would make her name synonymous with fast, luxurious and safe Atlantic travel.

On skids greased with 200 tons of tallow and black soap, the 40,000-ton hull, wearing its glistening white "working rig," glided smoothly, swiftly into the river. Queen Mary was born.

Then followed months of finishing. Her towering superstructure was constructed, powerful turbines and boilers installed, wiring completed, interiors decorated. It took another two years to complete the floating palace. Today her fabulous decor of hand-crafted wood veneers, paintings and carved wood and metal panelling are a source of wonder and delight to passengers raised in an age of chrome and glass.

Queen Mary was a city unto herself, carrying a population of more than 3,000 crew and passengers. And a powerful city she was, her four 35-ton propellers driven by four turbines producing 200,000 horsepower, able to push her at a staggering 30 knots.

Everything about the new queen was bigger, better. Her funnels (Mary was last of the

If her wiring were laid end-to-end, it would form an "extension cord" 4,000 miles long! Her three anchors weighed 16 tons apiece.

Even her 24 lifeboats were termed "super"; for the first time, all were motorized, the boats and engines the result of three years' research and meticulous testing for the perfect design. Their "gravity" davits were of a new design, too. Unlike conventional davits, they were planned to prevent fouling even if the ship listed heavily to either side.

And, gushed one account as she neared completion, "Those dreadful, panic-stricken rushes that in past disasters have taken place in many sinking ships, those sad cases of boats in one place being launched woefully overcrowded and courting sudden disaster, in others being lowered with but a handful of people on board, cannot take place in the Queen Mary, as the directions (prominently placed in every cabin and passage) are so understandable, the regulations so stringent and so well thought out, that it is almost impossible for uneven filling of the boats to take place, in the very remote contingency of the boats ever being used at all."

This fastidious planning extended even to the unfortunate crewman assigned to the wind-swept, icy crow's-nest. Queen Mary's was the first to have roof, walls and electric heating.

In short, Queen Mary was the last word in technology, comfort and safety; a queen in name and in fact.

March 24, 1936, Queen Mary cleared Glasgow on her maiden voyage, her 81,237-ton bulk having necessitated the construction of new, larger piers at Southampton and New York. Thirty-one years, five months later, the stately dowager completed her 1,001st—and last—Atlantic crossing. In peace and war she had steamed 3,792,277 nautical miles and carried 2,112,000 passengers, from carefree tourist to movie star, warbound GI to head of state and royalty.

In her first glorious years, Mary and the glamorous French liner Normandie battled for the Atlantic speed laurels. The duel saw old records smashed and new ones recorded, only to be broken again as the fighting ladies outsped each other by turn, Mary finally making the best-ever time of 92 hours, 42 minutes.

Then . . . it was war. Queen Mary's distinctive black hull, white superstructure, red and black funnels became gloomy battleship grey. Palatial fittings which had delighted the wealthiest, most travelled of passengers gave way to the spartan furniture of bunk and hammock as she entered her new role of troopship. Speeding alone back and forth across the Atlantic as trooper and hospital ship in turn, sometimes with an entire division—15,000 men—aboard, or Prime Minister Winston Churchill and his chiefs of staff, Queen Mary chalked up the unequalled record of 800,000 fighting men. She has been credited by some historians with cutting short the Second World War by a full year!

And without ever having fired a shot at the enemy!

Not that the Germans and Japanese didn't do their part. Hitler offered the prized Iron Cross and a quarter million dollars to the U-boat commander lucky enough to line the racing liner in his periscope.

Sadly, she did not escape tragedy altogether. On the foggy afternoon of Oct. 2, 1942, she was steaming full speed along the Irish coast with more than 15,000 American troops aboard. Suddenly the lookout reported a U-boat off the port bow. Wheeling to starboard, Mary sliced into one of her escorting cruisers, HMS Curacoa, cutting her in two. Unable to stop, the slightly damaged Queen and surviving escort sped on. In five minutes, Curacoa's 338 officers and men were lost.

Repaired, Queen Mary resumed her exhausting, globe-trotting schedule, not resting even after VE and VJ days. In the first year of peace, she carried 13,000 war brides and children.

Finally, it was time to resume her true role as ocean queen. Her palatial furniture and trappings, carefully stored in England, Australia and the U.S., were brought out, dusted off and returned to their proper home. After a 12-month refit she again sped the Atlantic, her passengers once more gaily-clad tourists instead of anonymous thousands in khaki, her crew no longer on watch for lurking submarines. For the next few years she again boasted the title "world's fastest liner," unchallenged. Old competitor Normandie had been lost in the war.

The aging Queen surrendered this cherished honor forever, in 1952, when the new American liner Ss. United States joined the Atlantic scene.

At last . . . the end. Passenger liners are being pushed out by airliners. Now travellers are in a hurry. Instead of elegant three-day voyages, they prefer to reach their destinations in a matter of hours, via jet. Queen Mary and her famous sisters began losing money. In May, 1967, Cunard sadly yielded to progress, announcing she was to be sold.

But not, as it happily turned out, to a scrapyard. Eighteen companies throughout the world bid for the history-making monarch, Long Beach's offer of $3,500,000 being accepted.

In December, as hundreds of thousands, ashore, in planes and every description of boat, watched in admiration, RMS Queen Mary steamed into Long Beach, her new home port. In a brief, emotional ceremony on her main deck, crowded with the memories of 31 glory-filled years, her last master tearfully handed her title to civic dignitaries.

Then, as the band played Auld Lang Syne, her blue ensign, signifying her to be a reserve ship of the Royal Navy, was lowered for the last time. Seconds later, the Stars and Stripes waved at her mast.

The greatest career of marine history's golden age was ended.

JANIE LATIMER

THE GIRL WHO TWIRLS

By BERT BINNY

Back around the year 1951, Janie Latimer who, at that time was just five years old, developed and displayed a marked liking for martial music.

This, it would appear, had to be of the rousing El Capitan or Thunderer type rather, perhaps, than the once well-known 'walking music' brought to fame by the erstwhile radio celebrity, Hildegarde.

Janie's predilection, however, went further than mere passive admiration.

She became a participant: not as an instrumentalist but as a baton twirler.

"My cousin talked me into it," she says and her cousin, as it turned out, accomplished a very constructive piece of talking.

Janie, now a resident of Victoria, came to the west coast last fall but she had certainly made her mark in the realm of passes, struts and whirlamacues previously and elsewhere.

She embarked on a twirling career at the age of eight, 13 years ago. Then a native of Collingwood, Ontario, she was with the Collingwood Lion's Club band for two years.

"After that," she notes, "I struck out on my own."

She attended twirling camps at Erin, Ontario, there to receive the most valuable instruction and assistance from such outstanding exponents of the art as Judy Andreano and Eugene Shay. Another eminent twirler who provided much early help was Miss Marilyn Pearen of Ontario.

Janie performed in Toronto and Windsor and at many other large centres and festivities in Ontario and, across the line, in Michigan.

Her accomplishments in twirling turned out to be of material assistance in another field as well.

In actual, large competition Janie was always a finalist, as little as half a point separating her from the ultimate winner. But she also appeared in a variety of Queen competitions where the ability to entertain counts to a significant extent.

In 1965 she placed second in the Miss Western Ontario contest, but in the same year, she gained the title of Miss Sepia at Windsor International Fair, an event celebrating U.S. emancipation. She was also a finalist in the Miss Michigan world contest.

Janie was invited to compete for the Miss Tan America crown in Chicago. Also in that city once known as the Gem of the Prairies, she was invited to be a contestant in the Model of the Year competition, representing a Detroit organization rejoicing in the intriguing title of the Little Foxes and Hares.

Nor had Janie been very long in Victoria before she was onstage. She made appearances at the CPO's Mess at Naden, at the Aberdeen Private Hospital and she was a featured performer at the opening show of the Red Lion Revue which took place on Oct. 2.

She specializes in dance and speed twirling as well as strutting but her specialty — if one may be permitted the term — is working with two fire batons and a burning rope. This she did at the Red Lion and the sight of emcee David Galbraith holding one end of the rope and contending with clouds of smoke will remain with me for a long time. He looked like an incipient case of suffocation — with every justification.

On the academic side — and what form of pursuit doesn't have such a side these days? — Janie Latimer is, by virtue of successfully negotiated examinations, a registered member of the National Baton Twirling Association and the Canadian Dance Teachers' Association.

Hence she is, despite her comparative youth, a fully qualified teacher. None of her students has even placed lower than third in competition and she even provided a course by mail to an 18-girl corps of twirlers in Dundalk, Ontario.

For 1968 she is opening twirling classes at the Inn on Cook Street.

As already indicated by her invitation to compete in the Model of the Year competition at Chicago, Janie works as a fashion model, too. Her husbnad, Mike, is a welder with a city firm and was more than two years with the Marine Corps in California.

When asked why they came to Victoria, Janie, who was born and raised on an Ontario farm, said that they figured their opportunities would be greater in the west than in the east.

It is true enough that opportunity can be created but the creation requires both talent and ambition together with a great willingness to exercise the first in pursuit of the second.

And this is a score on which Janie Latimer stands at the head of the class.

GLOWING EYES

One of the commonest subjects for argument around the campfire is the question: "Why do some creature's eyes glow when darkness falls?" The light is not like the miner's headlamp that guides his steps. On the contrary, the owner of the gleam has no knowledge of it and the gleams differ greatly in color and size. The coon's light is yellow, the coyote's golden, as are some of the bears', and the wildcat's gleam is green. Even the reptiles may show an orange glow and the stork gives out a silver gleam. Creatures that hunt in the dark may be carrying a beam for their mate or their young. No other reason can be given, for the light should not reveal the hunter. The different glows are interesting, but they seem to be of no benefit to the wanderers in the dark.

Vancouver Island Game Birds

By ROBERT TAYLOR

THE GREEN-WINGED TEAL is the smallest of our waterfowl and is an early fall migrant to Vancouver Island waters. A fresh water duck, the Teal prefers inland sloughs, willow swamps, marshes and streams, but can also be found on salt water tide flats and river estuaries.

They are fast, erratic fliers and quite often travel in tight flocks with many mass twistings and turnings. Because of their size — they weigh a mere 12 ounces — they appear to be travelling at a rate far in excess of their actual speed which has been variously timed at between 55 and 65 miles an hour.

Identification is rather difficult at a distance unless the flight characteristics are noted, since both male and female green-winged teal appear as dark birds. Occasionally they will accompany a flock of mallards or pintails and then of course the comparison in size will make identification simple. They are quiet birds, the male uttering a mellow whistle and the female a crisp "quack." When flushed from ground or water they will spring vertically for a considerable height before levelling off into forward flight.

At close range the drake teal is a beautifully marked bird, having a crested russet head with an iridescent green stripe, extending back from the eye and a brown chest complimented by dark spots and a white stripe running vertically in front of each wing. The back and flank feathers are a finely vermiculated grey and the belly a buff tinged white.

The feature that will positively identify this bird in the hand is the iridescent green speculum on the inner rear portion of the upper wing, which is emphasized by a buffy white border. The female is a mottled brown in color but can also be identified by the characteristic green speculum.

The green-wing is a restless bird and offers the sportsman a challenging target.

They will decoy readily, however one must be swift with the swing of the shotgun in order to catch up with this elusive target.

As a table delicacy there is no equal to the teal. The flesh is always palatable since they subsist on 91 per cent plant food. What is lost in quantity is more than compensated for in quality and marinade teal breasts are an epicure's delight. Whether jumping in alarm from a pond, or side-slipping on decurved wings into some secluded marsh at last light, they are intriguing birds — aptly described as the "snipe of the duck family."

supervisor, holding that position during the war years, almost wearing herself out, because doctors and nurses were scarce. In 1947 she was named director of nursing. She trained hundreds of girls to be good nurses. She was a hard taskmaster, with a sharp tongue, and more than one student quit because she couldn't take Miss Woodrow's martinet discipline. Those who remained became first class nurses, and if they didn't all love "Woodie," they respected her, and were grateful for all she did for them.

No one who ever knew Miss Woodrow will ever forget her. She was sympathetic in the extreme, but because she did not want to show her sentiment, for fear she might burst into tears, she put on a hard-boiled exterior, and told people off to their faces. But, behind their backs, she never said anything mean about them.

She fought with more than one doctor, but the doctors generally admired her and leaned on her and trusted her. They knew that when she was in charge all would be well with their patients. She was a gallant figure as she walked hospital corridors through the long nights, keeping an eye on patients and nurses.

It was the greatest tribute to her that people she had barked at rarely barked back. They overlooked it, somehow sensing the innate goodness in the woman. She had a gift for bringing out the best in most people.

When she retired in 1956 the hospital heaped her with honors. The student nurses dedicated their annual Zinnia to her, with these words: "Dedication—We sincerely dedicate this annual to Miss Lucie Pauline Woodrow, who is retiring after 21 years of association with the Royal Jubilee Hospital.

"Her wise guidance and leadership will always be remembered by her students, and she will be greatly missed by all.

"The student nurses hope that this annual will serve as a small token of appreciation of the many things Miss Woodrow has done for us.

"With it are extended best wishes for the future."

In her retirement years Miss Woodrow kept busy. She was a devoted worker for the Art Gallery, where every Saturday she was a volunteer at the admittance desk. She worked on the Gallery rummage sales until her friends feared she might drop from exhaustion.

She worked in the Jubilee's thrift shop in downtown Victoria, and for the women's auxiliaries and the Hospital's Alumnae Association, which had made her an honorary life member.

Royal Jubilee's directors of nursing are listed as follows: Miss Summerfield, 1890 (for six months); Miss Mowat, 1890-92; Miss McMillan, 1892-99; Miss J. Grady, 1899-1901; Miss E. E. P. Alcorn, 1901-03; Miss M. C. MacDonald, 1903-13; Miss Tombie, 1913-14; Miss Jessie MacKenzie, 1914-27; Miss Lena Mitchell (Mrs. Weir), 1927-47; Miss Lucie Woodrow, 1947-56; Miss Mary Richmond, 1947, until a few years ago when she went to Vancouver General, to be replaced by the current director, Miss Muriel Thompson.

I enjoyed reading in the 1951 Zinnia the reminiscences of Mrs. W. H. Bullock-Webster, who, as Miss Marie DeBou was the hospital's first graduate nurse:—

"We had no electric light, and at night carried coal lanterns from ward to ward. Hours were from 7 a.m., to 7 p.m., or 10 p.m. if very busy. There were four fully trained nurses, a matron and one orderly. Ere long we had coal oil lamps in brackets along the corridors — a great improvement. Patients were then allowed to convalesce in the hospital and they would help look after the lamps. I don't know when electricity was introduced; not during my three years.

"In 1892 Victoria had a smallpox epidemic, and I even enjoyed the six weeks I spent with the poor victims. It was constant bedside-nursing young and old.

"Who says vaccination is not a preventative? I have held very sick babies in my arms at night to keep them quiet, and like all the other nurses I was immune. We were strictly quarantined, and only got out sometimes at night for a short walk, if the guard was nice, and we promised not to go far, or near anyone. Quite simple — nobody would come within a block of us or our hospital.

"I like to think of having been on the first roll, and willing to take my share of hard work, and enjoy it."

Celebrate Chinese New Year With Oriental Meal

mustard mixed with water, and a little tumeric added for color.

My friend also gave me his version of a Sweet-Sour Sauce. This recipe makes about a pint of sauce which will keep indefinitely in a covered jar in the refrigerator.

LEE'S SWEET-SOUR SAUCE ... In a saucepan mix 2-3 cup brown sugar, firmly packed, 1½ Tbsp. cornstarch, ½ tsp. salt, ½ tsp. ground ginger. Blend well then slowly add 1 cup cold water, ½ cup vinegar, 3 Tbsp. catsup and 1 Tbsp. soy sauce. Stir until nice and smooth. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until clear and slightly thick.

Chinese cuisine has a special appeal ... it is exotic, delightful, delicate but flavorful, it is appetite-satisfying but one never feels surfeited after a Chinese meal. In everyday meal planning, many housewives shy away from this type of cookery, setting it apart as something mysterious and difficult. Actually the very opposite is true for Chinese ingredients are flexible and versatile and can be adapted to almost any type of cooking.

The cooking of most Chinese dishes requires a maximum of preparation and a minimum of fuel and cooking time. Through the centuries the Chinese had to adapt to an every-present shortage of fuel.

Lee Harvey Oswald Followed Failure With Dramatic Action

Reviewed by
E. D. WARD-HARRIS

This addition to the growing number of books about the Kennedy assassination is interesting for two reasons:

- Robert Oswald, who loved his kid brother, is convinced that Lee Harvey Oswald did kill Kennedy and that the assassination was a solo effort.
- The story attempts to answer why he did it.

LEE: A PORTRAIT OF LEE HARVEY OSWALD, by his brother, Robert Oswald (with Myrick and Barbara Land); Longmans Canada; 246 pages; $7.50.

Robert starts at the beginning, where most emotional problems are rooted. His father died two months before Lee was born and Robert and his half-brother John were placed in an orphanage where they were joined by Lee when he was three.

Their mother had a succession of jobs and apartments and saw her children at weekends. Sometimes they would leave the orphanage to live with her mother, but this never worked out and they would be returned to the institution. They never knew where they were.

The two older boys, miraculously retaining their sanity, got what education they could, grew up and set out to make their own lives. Robert went into the Marine Corps.

Young Lee, left to the tender mercies of his neurotic mother, felt rejected and lost. At age 13, he started playing truant from school and spent hours every day in front of the television set. Soon, he started to live in a fantasy television world and developed a contempt for authority.

Meanwhile, Robert had left the Marines with the rank of sergeant, married and had a son, and had settled down in a comfortable home and an excellent job. He became Lee's ideal.

Lee was cursed with a mother who deluded herself with the belief that her succession of employers deliberately ignored her brilliance and frustrated her chances for recognition. This observation, following the assassination, sums her up:

"(Mother) received the news of Lee's arrest without any emotional strain at all. It seemed to me that now at last she was about to get the kind of attention she had sought all her life . . . she would never again be treated as an ordinary, obscure, unimportant woman."

Lee was also without skills and largely without education. His value on the labor market was nil. He joined the Marines and failed to match his brother's limited success.

After leaving the service, he had a succession of menial jobs. These did not pay well and they bored him.

Like his mother, he blamed everyone but himself. He felt more and more rejected with each failure.

The pattern, says Robert, was always failure followed by some dramatic action. Most of these actions were minor, but finally frustration drove him to the big gesture—his carefully planned flight to Russia and application of Soviet citizenship.

After the notoriety, which he lapped up, came the big letdown—a menial job in a Soviet factory. To Lee Harvey Oswald this, too, was a failure and rejection. So he returned to the U.S., with a Russian wife, Marina.

The pattern continued. He desperately wanted a son and Marina gave him two daughters. He could never make enough money to support his family. He could never emulate his brother's example.

His last job, a dead-end menial one in the Dallas book depository, represented hopeless failure and it was again time for a dramatic gesture. This time he was to commit an act which would put his name into the history books, and cost him his life.

Robert Oswald tells his story with quiet authority and considerable dignity. The forces that twisted Lee Harvey Oswald's mind as a child and finally drove him to murder are related undramatically and the explanation, one feels, is an act of brotherly love.

The book shows vividly the appalling result of a sick mother's influence, and it is also an indictment of a sick society in which moral values are at a discount and status is an end in itself.

LAUGH LINES

Reviewed by JOHN BARKHAM

Peter De Vries is one of perhaps two or three living writers who can make me laugh out loud at the printed word. He is America's Gag-writer Extraordinary who can play on words the way Heifetz plays on a fiddle. Being a storyteller to boot, he is able to concoct yarns in which situations are set up for laughlines he throws at you with fiendish glee. In some of his novels the situations overpower the gags, in others the reverse.

THE VALE OF LAUGHTER, by Peter De Vries; Little, Brown & Co.; 352 pages; $5.95.

The Vale of Laughter belongs to the latter category. This time De Vries has cast off all the shackles and indulged to the limit his passion for puns, his love for laughs, his yen for yocks. And by making his hero a born clown and wisecracker he's legitimized the whole operation. The result is a bonanza of buffoonery, the like of which you haven't encountered since the Age of Allen (Fred, that is).

This Joe Sandwich, who tells the story in the first person, began his kidding in short pants. His dying father was an atheist (there's usually one in a De Vries novel) who wanted to be sure his curtain-line would be memorable. The one he actually utters is a marvel of succinct ribaldry. Joe Sandwich, who's very much of a ham (yes, we all get it), hits his stride when courting his future bride. Her father, a stockbroker, asks him what the gross national product is. "Deodorants," Joe replies. And so it goes.

Somewhere along the way Joe falls victim to the verbal disease known as Paronomastic Names, i.e., names which form phrases or thoughts, examples of which are often found in the competition columns of literary magazines. De Vries gives his man enough winners to carry off prizes for the next decade. Beginning with Justin Case and Lotta Noyes, he moves on to initial versions like O.B. Still and R.U. Upjohn. Have I said enough?

By this time the reader has tumbled to the fact that the story is merely a line on which to hang jokes. Midway through the book we get into a lecture on laughter, with Joe as participant. "We'll never know," intones the lecturer, "what makes Sammy run."

"Or Saul Bellow," adds Joe, and we're off on a hilarious discussion of the anatomy of wit. Here De Vries is in his element, and he goes on for several pages dissecting the genus "Joke," with appropriate deadpan illustrations. We regretfully leave the characters as they plan to set up a discotheque for middle-aged couples to be known (you guessed it) as The Slippped Discotheque.

Will you like the book? It depends on how much of this kind of wisecracking you can take. Perhaps a whole bookful may be too much for you, especially as you have to read every word. (This fellow De Vries is a sly one who'll slip a gag past your guard when you're least expecting it.) As for me, 350 pages is not a whit (pun!) too much. With such stygian gloom in and out of print these days, it's a delight to abandon yourself to all this De Vries deviltry.

Victorian's Flower Arrangement Wins Place in Best in Show Book

One of the 79-full color plates which appear in Best of Show in Flower Arrangements, Book 7, features the arrangement by Mrs. D. Metcalfe, which took best in show in the Victoria Horticultural Society Show last year.

It was entered in the B.C. Through Time class and represents the 1920 jazz era. Base of the arrangements is a record which represents the music of the 1920s. A twisted branch represents the Charleston and other dances of the time, and a red carnation represents the colorful flambuoyant era of the 1920s.

BEST OF SHOW IN FLOWER ARRANGEMENTS, BOOK 7, compiled by Margaret Harold. Allied Publications Inc., Fort Lauderdale, Florida; $1.95; 79 full-color plates.

Only the best of the best in show flower arrangements from the important competitive shows in North America during 1967 have been included in this book, which is a treasure house of stimulating ideas for containers, accessories, uses of color and ingenious combinations of materials.

For the beginner, this book will be easy to comprehend, and if carefully studied and followed, will insure remarkable success. Row, Row, Over the Ocean

"How we rowed the Atlantic in 92 days," runs the subtitle, and you do a double-take. How's that again — "rowing across the Atlantic?" Why would anyone want to do a fool thing like that?

A FIGHTING CHANCE, by John Ridgway and Chay Blyth; J. B. Lippincott Co.; 242 pages; $4.95.

For the same reason men climb high mountains, penetrate deep jungles, stagger across great deserts—a sense of personal adventure. The two men who rowed the Atlantic in an open 20-foot dory were British paratroopers who'd once taken first place in a 70-mile canoe race—which it goes without saying, perfectly qualifies them for rowing across 3,00 miles of ocean.

Any way you look at it, what Ridgway and Blyth did constituted an astonishing feat of courage, endurance—and foolhardiness. They were not the first to row the Atlantic: a couple of Norwegian sailors did it in 1896 in the incredible time of 62 days. Moreover, another British pair were rowing the Atlantic the same time as Ridgway and Blyth, which turned the enterprise into a race. (The others were lost at sea· their overturned boat was later found in mid-ocean.)

Anyone who has ever rowed a small boat across a lake in the local park will wonder how so enormous a distance could be covered with strong arms and stout hearts alone. Don't hands get blistered? Don't arms and legs stiffen like boards? What about food, water, seasickness, storms?

The two paratroopers experienced all this and more. Telling their story in successive chapters, they bring to life the fear and exhilaration, the despair and optimism which alternately gripped them. The gales were terrifying. Their sturdy dory would be tossed about like a cork, while they stowed oars, closed the canvas covers over their heads, and prayed. Hurricane Alma hit them in mid-ocean and they gave themselves up for lost. "I dream of being at the top of one of those mountains—40 feet high and sometimes higher," recalls Ridgway.

"I look down into a black abyss, into which our little boat plunges headlong at the speed of an express train." While the two men worked frantically at the pumps the boat rode out the hurricane. (In all probability it was Alma which claimed the other crew.)

The passages describing the sea creatures the rowers saw are fascinating. Whales and sharks were frequent companions, sometimes nuzzling the boat to find out what it was. (Photographs bear this out to the hilt.)

One night Ridgway got the fright of his life while Blyth was asleep. "I looked out into the water and suddenly saw the writhing, twisting shape of a great creature. It was outlined by the phosphorescence in the sea—an enormous creature some 35 feet or more in length. It headed straight for me and disappeared right beneath us." A sea serpent? Ridgway reluctantly believes it was.

In time rowing became as natural to the pair as driving a car and bailing out as natural as watering a garden. Ships passed them, exchanged greetings, and marvelled over the two men rowing from nowhere to nowhere. Once they got into the Gulf Stream their speed increased appreciably, and the idea gradually seeped into their numbed minds that they were going to make it.

And so they did. On the 92nd day after leaving Cape Cod they landed on the Aran Isles off the Irish coast. "Row, row, across the ocean-O," and so they had, with guts, skill, and their broad shoulders in the best never-say-die tradition. Don't miss their story, you comfortable, clubchair landlubbers.—J.B.

DANGER and MYSTERY

THE EDGE OF GLASS, by Catherine Gaskin; Collins; 256 pages; $4.95.

The title for Edge of Glass is well chosen for it is a smooth sharp novel where danger and mystery lurk behind an innocent facade. Catherine Gaskin creates a mood of suspense by forcing the reader to share the emotional impact Maura Sheridan, a young model living in London, experiences when she returns to the wild beauty of her ancestral Ireland in search of a stolen priceless heirloom.

An intriguing web of mystery is woven as Maura's path crossed those of Connor Sheridan of the bankrupt Sheridan glass works and Lady Maud Sheridan, her grandmother, an aristocratic recluse. Brendan Carroll, an artistic genius with glass, and Otto Praeger, an elderly millionaire trying to buy his way into Irish country life, pull Maura's emotions almost to the breaking point.

Edge of Glass creates a subtle sinister mood without resorting to the crass violence so popular in most modern day mysteries. Her readable plausible style creates and maintains suspense from start to finish. The characterization is superb and this alone makes this novel well worth reading.—R.E.S.

And Then There Were None . . .

small, spare scow, and returned to Fitzgerald. There was no room for Billy in the scow, so he discovered an old Indian hollowed-out log canoe, and drifted downstream, his battered feet soaking in the flowing water. When the log started to leak, he stuffed the hole with the remnants of his shirt tail and glued it down with spruce-tree gum.

The winter of 1913-14 saw the shrunken herd wintering-in at Fort Smith, the RCMP station at the north end of the portage around the twin rapids.

The original destination of the herd was Hardisty Island, on the north shore of Great Slave Lake. In the summer of 1914, the rangers once more set off down the Slave River, their wobbly scow towed by the Catholic Mission's boat, a small wooden, side-wheeling steamer, which took them as far as Moose Deer Island, just off Fort Resolution. While waiting there, news came through that Europe was at war.

The six rangers quit, and thumbed their way south to join the army. That left Billy McNeill alone with four reindeer, all does. The rest, apparently, had died or disappeared. Billy, not clear on the subject, thought maybe Indians or wild dogs had something to do with their disappearance.

Laboriously, Billy sat down and wrote a report to Ottawa and asked, "What'll I do?"

One calm fall morning, months later, Billy saw a lone Indian paddling across the lake from Fort Resolution. He waved a letter. Billy fed the Indian breakfast before he opened the letter. "Lots a time. Got all day, all week, mebbe all year to read a letter. Eatin' comes first."

The letter was from the Canadian Government in Ottawa. Billy was appointed game officer, the first one in the North West Territories. He was to have a five-year contract and get two sets of uniforms a year. Billy whooped. He'd come a long way, literally and figuratively, since he shipped out from St. Anthony.

His instructions were almost unbelieveable. "Go to the Barren Lands and catch some wild caribou bulls."

Leaving the four does on the island, Billy hired the Indian paddler and his canoe, loaded a team of dogs and set off eastward for the Barren Lands to meet the migrating caribou herds.

Reaching the Barrens, he was busy setting out rope snares one morning when he found himself surrounded by a band of hostile Indians. Through his Indian helper, Billy asked the chief if he would help and drive the caribou towards his snares. Sternly, the chief refused. "If white man take bulls, we starve." Pointing his rifle in the direction Billy had come from, he said: "Go."

Billy went.

When he finally struggled back to his island camp, Billy found that two of the remaining four does had died. Now there were only two.

That winter, leaving the Indian to guard the last two does, Billy mushed his dog-team over the bare lake ice and through the snowed-in forest trails to Fort Smith to talk over the situation with the government agent. As Billy tells it: "Orders from Supreme High-Priced Help told me to face about, return to Moose Deer Island, tell the Indian to remain and care for the two reindeer. I was then to return to Fort Smith and take over the Wood Buffalo Range."

Altogether that winter, Billy travelled more than 5,000 miles by dog team. During this time, one more reindeer died at the island, leaving only one alive of the original 56.

The now solitary reindeer was a docile, friendly creature, who grew attached to the rangers, and was christened Kitty.

In June of 1916, five years from the start of the transplant exercise, a communication arrived at Fort Smith from Ottawa, advising that the reindeer experiment was now considered a failure. Billy was to proceed once more to Moose Deer Island, pick up the last reindeer and return to Fort Resolution.

Billy chartered a small steamboat, somewhat misappropriately named the Ss. Hope. Reaching the island, Kitty and the native embarked. On arrival at Resolution, the final order awaited Billy. "Kill the remaining reindeer and return to Fort Smith."

"I remember it well," said Billy. "It was July 1, Dominion Day when we put in to Fort Resolution. The whole settlement was celebratin'. So we killed Kitty on the beach and celebrated, too, with an outdoor banquet of reindeer steaks. Counting the crew of the Hope, there were seven of us. We ate the lot. I figure those reindeer steaks musta' cost the government around $236 a pound. And, y'know," ended Billy, "there was really no need for it. Caribou meat tastes better'n reindeer."

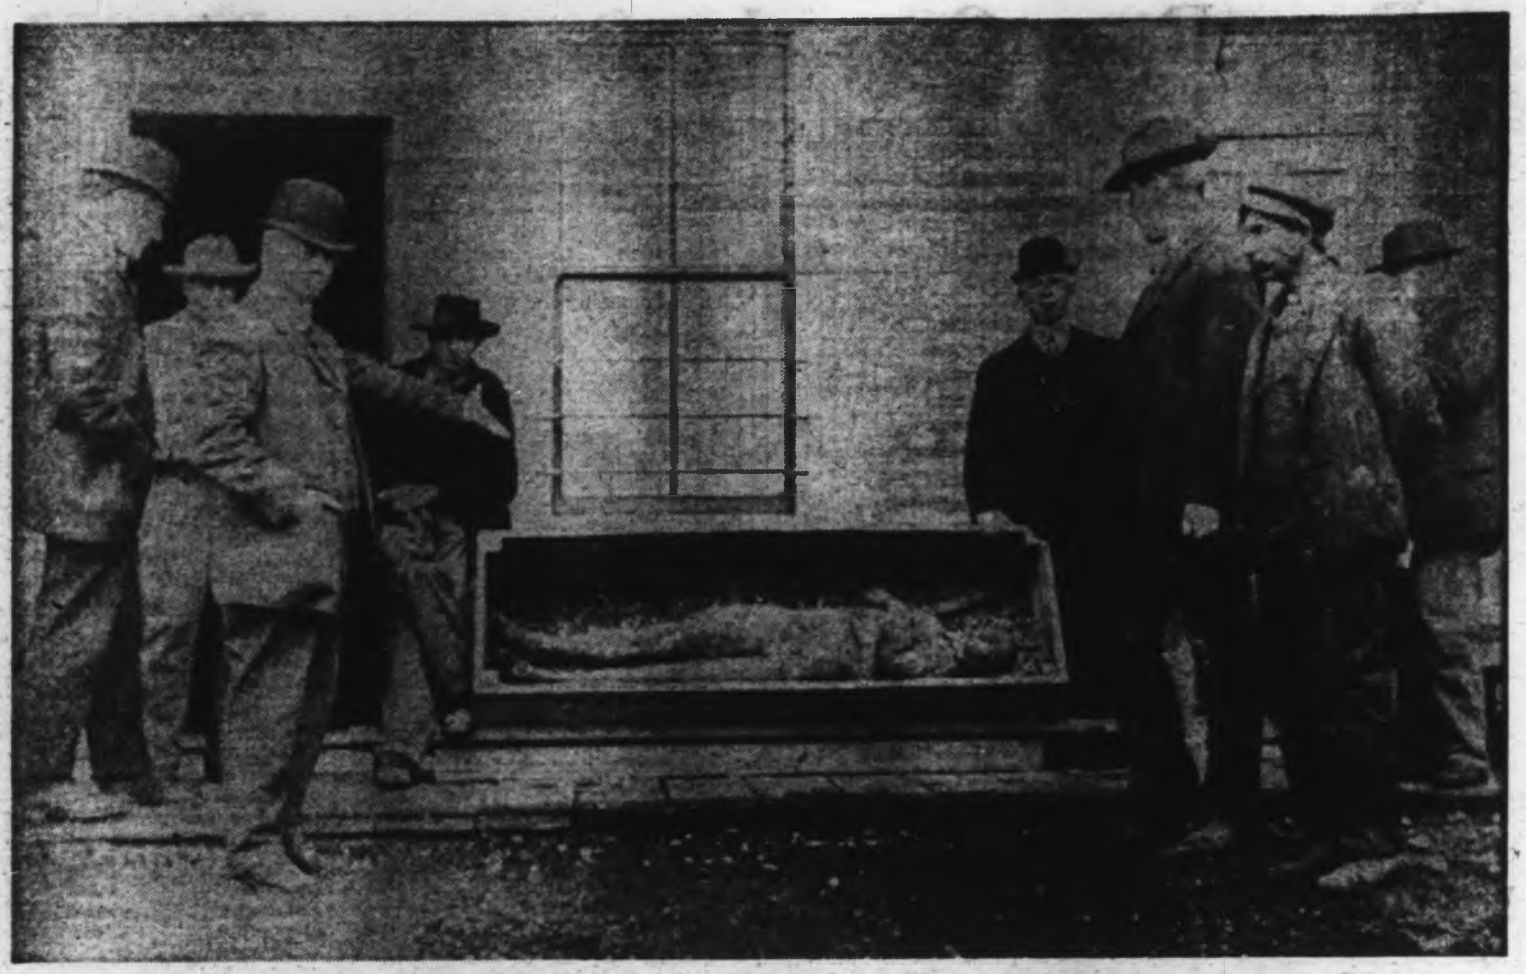

Billy McNeill stayed on in the north, and continued to work for the forestry branch of the Canadian government.

Young Billy is Old Billy now. But he is still spry, and quick on his moccasin'd feet. The last time I saw him, he was running up the narrow gangplank of the forestry's boat, the Buffalo. He turned at the top and waved once, before disappearing into the pilot's house to grip the wheel and head downstream.

The Black Bear Roams the Continent

Black bears are found over a large part of North America where forest cover is present. They live in climates as diverse as those of Florida and Alaska.

This wide distribution indicates a wide range of adaptability. This is shown by the behaviour of bears at the northern and southern extremes of their range. The bears of Florida, for example, sleep for only short periods, while those that live in the far north sleep as long as four to six months of the year.

MONSTER OF METCHOSIN

By CECIL CLARK

Had you been strolling on Fort Street one afternoon in early August, 1885, perhaps you might have noticed the tall, soldierly figure of Capt. Alistair McDougall as he stopped to study a notice at the entrance of the Beehive saloon. This temple dedicated to Bacchus was on the northeast corner of Broad and Fort, demolished shortly afterwards in favor of one dedicated to journalism—the Times building. Experience has taught me that their votaries are not unrelated.

However, back to Alistair who, as he meditatively strokes his moustache, gets the message that inside the pub is a fossilized man recently dug up on a Happy Valley farm. A peek would cost him a quarter.

Through the swinging doors he went, paid his quarter, and found himself studying the armless, legless torso of a man turned to stone. A man who, in life, must have been a veritable giant.

Sir William Osler once remarked that "a man who is his own doctor, has a fool for a patient." It could have applied in a sense to Alistair who not only took great pride in his amateur standing as an anthropologist, but in this instance prepared to back his opinion with cash.

Because right there and then he declared the figure to be an authentic and perfect example of a petrified man. What's more he wanted to acquire it. Mr. Dubois, the urbane gentleman in charge of the exhibit, promptly slipped his mental processes into high gear and mentioned the first sum that came to mind; $1,500. Alistair rushed to the Bank of British North America on lower Yates Street, and in fast time was back with the cash.

Later a few of Alistair's friends tried to intimate that he had been taken, and even Const. Harry Shepherd (who was later chief) suggested he lay a charge of fraud and get his money back. Alistair however was adamant. He knew a good thing when he saw it.

In fact he had made up his mind that it was going to the British Museum.

It was about a week later that he got word that Wymond Hamley, the local collector of Customs wished to have a chat with him. Seems that Customs officer Hunt had reported to his boss his strong suspicion that the stone figure had been imported from San Francisco on the steamer Idaho a few months back. It had been landed in a box, face down, and on cursory examination seemed to be a block of valueless stone. For this reason only nominal duty of $1 was exacted. But now, Hamley went, now that it was valuable there would be 30 per cent duty.

Which meant Alistair was stuck for five hundred bucks!

"I won't pay it!" was his hot retort. "This is a genuine antiquity dug up right here on the Island."

Next thing Alistair knew he had a summons to appear in court to face a charge under the Customs Act. Promptly he engaged Theodore Davie (brother of the then attorney general) to handle his case, and just as promptly the Customs seized the Happy Valley Giant and bunged him into a bonded warehouse.

Seems their action was warranted under a section of the Act that called for condemnation and sale of goods where a false entry had been made.

It was unfortunate that, in court, Customs man Hunt couldn't positively swear that the stone imported was the Metchosin man. However, Dr. G. M. Dawson, perhaps Canada's greatest geologist (hence Dawson Creek and Dawson City) gave the definite opinion that the stone man was a fake.

Finally, to the witness stand came Mrs. Lewis Scott, a colored housewife from Happy Valley, who told how months before she noticed a two-horse wagon take something heavy to nearby Gilbert's farm. That night, when she saw lanterns flickering in the Gilbert pasture she sneaked over to see what was happening. Some men, she said, were burying some heavy object.

It was about a week later, she went on, that Gilbert came rushing over to tell the Scott's of the strange object they had unearthed.

Then counsel took a hand, and back and forth went the arguments until the two Justices on the bench were positively bewildered. However, after a day's cogitation they came up with a decision. The Metchosin monster was a fake and should be returned to its owner. However, as there was reasonable cause for the seizure, Alistair would be stuck with the costs.

History doesn't relate what happened to the stone man, though I have heard it said that it turned up at Lillooet just after the turn of the century. Tracing this down I found that this particular "fossilized" man was manufactured (of Portland cement) in a Fairview basement over in Vancouver.

Three men were in on this deal to con the public, but unfortunately one of them jumped the gun. He whipped the stone man up to Lillooet Lake and later made the "astounding discovery" himself. Which not only miffed his partners but resulted in one of the strangest court actions ever aired on the lower mainland.

Anyway it was the last fossilized man found in B.C. Now the Sasquatch has the field.

Soviet Offer Way Out

'APOLOGY' BY U.S. CRISIS SOLUTION

On-Spot Fleet Adds Ships

From LAT, AP, UPI

An admission of guilt, sincere or not, and the willingness to give up some prisoners may be enough to free the United States from its dilemma with North Korea.

Source of this narrow beam of hope in a week of nervous gloom, caused by last Tuesday's grab of a U.S. navy spy ship and its 83-man crew in the Sea of Japan by North Koreans, was the Russian delegation visiting India.

Well-placed informants in New Delhi Saturday said the USS Pueblo and its crew would be freed if the U.S. acknowledged that it violated North Korean territorial waters — an acknowledgement that could be accompanied by a fine — and returned the survivors of last Sunday's abortive assassination attempt of South Korean President Park Chung Hee. Twenty-four of the 31 assassins were killed.

Engineer of the exchange would be the Russian delegation. Its members have been in contact with North Korea and are said to be willing to entertain a delegation from the U.S.

Soviet Premier Kosygin, speaking with India's Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, however, said the U.S. and North Korea should settle the differences themselves. He is reported to have told Mrs. Gandhi that it was possible there had been "a genuine mistake" in the incident.

HE WOULD PAY

The admission-of-guilt ploy had support in Washington. It came from Montana Senator Mike Mansfield who said that if the price for release of the Pueblo is a false admission of guilt, he would pay it rather than resort to force.

"I am satisfied that the Pueblo was in international waters, where it had a right to be. But if we could avoid a new war by a concession of this kind on the record, I would do it," said Mansfield.

CARRIER REROUTED

Two other developments in the Korean crisis were these:

● The anti-submarine aircraft carrier USS Yorkton and her protective screen of destroyers, sailing westward to the South China Sea for Vietnam duty, was rerouted to the Sea of Japan where it will join the carrier Enterprise. This will beef up the U.S. naval force in the

By
JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)— Already faced with a charge the Johnson administration is bracing for a storm of questions from the United States Congress over its handling of the Pueblo crisis.

The key question shaping up: By whose decision was the intelligence ship, with its potentially dangerous mission and highly secret equipment, stationed directly off the North Korean coast?

Administration officials say the operation was approved at high levels of the government—but the question remains whether specific moves of the ship were handled routinely by officials in the Central Intelligence Agency or some other intelligence agency or controlled from day to day by officials with broad policy responsibilities.

RUSSIA ON SPOT

Some authorities here think an initial blunder may have made the situation difficult to deal with. The defence department announced at the outset that the U.S. was asking the Soviet government to intervene with North Korea for release of the ship and its 83-man crew. This official public disclosure apparently put the Russians on the spot.

Soviet officials twice rebuffed requests by Ambassador Llewellyn E. Thompson, on Washington's instruction, for help with the North Korean government.

TOO MUCH DAMAGE

Administration officials feel however, that despite this outward pose of indifference the Russians, who can profit by American embarrassment, will try to bring the incident to a peaceful conclusion since they too operate spy ships along the shores of many countries, including the U.S.

But frustrated officials here acknowledge that so much damage has already been done that no solution now possible can

Quebec Grits' Lever?

Anti-Royal Motion Passes in Breeze

'Star' Trudeau

By RON COLLISTER, Ottawa Bureau

MONTREAL — The Quebec federal Liberals Saturday night voted 4-1 to abolish the monarchy and replace it with a president chosen every seven years.

It was a stunning development, opposed by several French-speaking ministers in the federal cabinet on the ground that it lacked urgency. (See also Page 16.)

Forestry Minister Maurice Sauve stood up and opposed it, but his protest was swamped.

Manpower Minister Jean Marchand, the Quebec federal leader, was present, but abstained in the vote.

Justice Minister Pierre-Elliot Trudeau was not present. But, later, he expressed no concern about the decision.

President of Canada

A workshop had passed the motion earlier in the day. It was expected to be defeated in the plenary session, but it sailed through after a fiery debate.

The resolution urges that the actual functions and duties of the governor general and of the monarch of Canada should be assigned to only one person who would become the president of the Republic of Canada.

In choosing him, the "principle of the linguistic alternation would be followed."

There was much speculation here about why the leaders of the Quebec party had allowed the vote to result in such a massive victory.

The answer is made that the Quebec Liberals are getting into a position to deal with English-speaking Canada in the next round of constitutional talks.

Their argument may be that: "We don't want the monarchy, but we'll go along with it as a concession to you. Now what will you do for us?"

Most of the candidates are here, but they are campaigning in the backrooms, not allowed to speak to the rally.

Trudeau is the star, dominating the whole affair. Friday, he was the most active non-candidate or candidate in the place. And Saturday he spent most of

15 Dead

Europe Swamped By Slides

GENEVA (AP) — Millions of tons of wet, heavy snow unexpectedly broke off steep slopes of Swiss mountain peaks Friday night and Saturday morning, bringing death and disaster to an area 120 miles wide in the heart of central Europe.

At least 15 Swiss died, and at least 13 others were missing after hundreds of nocturnal snow slides.

Information from the hardest-hit areas was scant and unreliable. There was fear the toll might be much higher.

With access routes blocked nearly everywhere in the mountains an estimated 15,000 to 20,000 Swiss and foreign tourists were temporarily isolated in Davos and the other major Swiss ski resorts.

Rain storms and blizzards continued throughout the mountains, already suffocating in deep snow.

Tonkin Spy Ships Crossed Viet Line

SEARCY, Ark. (AP) — U.S. destroyers attacked in 1964 by Communist patrol boats in the Gulf of Tonkin were on a spy mission at times in North Vietnam's territorial waters, Senator J. William Fulbright said here Friday night.

Fulbright said that the destroyer Maddox "had been" in North Vietnamese waters prior to the attack. He said that by this he meant that the Maddox had been within the 12-mile territorial limit claimed by the North Vietnamese and not necessarily within the three-mile limit recognized by the United States.

Fulbright said he did not argue that the ships were outside North Vietnamese waters at the time of the attack and he added, "if indeed, they were attacked."

Fulbright's senate foreign relations committee has been conducting hearings into the Gulf of Tonkin incident since last year.

It is a Senate resolution passed within a day or two of the Tonkin Gulf incident that President Johnson has cited as the proof of congressional support for his Vietnam policies.

If Cork Pops... Coming fight for Khe Sanh most crucial of war

By ROBERT D. OHMAN

KHE SANH, Vietnam (AP) — "This is the cork right here," the major said. He kicked a shell fragment in the red dust and added: "If they get past us, they can tear up the countryside way over to the coast."

And in Washington, the highest policy makers believe that the fight for Khe Sanh will be the most crucial battle of the war so far in Vietnam. The battle is expected to begin this week. (See also Page 3).

Holding the cork in place are 5,000 U.S. Marines, either within the barbed wire that encircles the Khe Sanh combat base and its air strip o along a ridgeline that points like an arrow toward the base from the northwest.

Manoeuvering against them are some 4,000 North Vietnamese regulars, forward elements of two Hanoi divisions that perhaps total up to 20,000 men. A half dozen fights developed last week in what Marine officers considered the prelude to a major enemy offensive.

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. B-52 bombers raided North Vietnamese positions near Khe Sanh Sunday after the enemy twice lightly shelled the frontier Marine base.

If the North Vietnamese could blast the Marines out of their stronghold here on a red clay bluff in the northwest corner of South Vietnam, the broad Quang Tri and Cam Lo river valleys would lie ahead of them.

A 30-mile march would take them to Quang Tri, the capital of South Vietnam's northernmost province. Ten miles farther and they would be at the South China Sea and well in the rear of the bulk of the

Chinooks Show Depth To Sideline Killarney

Harold Turner, manager of Victoria Chinooks of the Inter-City Junior Men's Basketball League, doesn't often allow himself to show any emotion after a game.

He was all smiles after Saturday's game at Central Junior High School, however, as the league champion Chinooks came up with a polished performance to win the best-of-three semi-final series against Killarney in straight games.

Chinooks raced to a 16-point lead early in the first half and were never seriously threatened as they fastened a 77-58 victory. Victoria won the first game, 71-61, in Vancouver on Thursday.

Chinooks will now meet the winner of the IGA Grocers-CYO Saints series in the best-of-five finals starting next Saturday and Sunday at Central Junior High.

CYO leads the other series, 1-0, and games are scheduled for Monday, and, if necessary Wednesday.

It was a rewarding victory for coach Moe Turner against the club which had given Chinooks the most trouble in regular season play, splitting the four games played.

Everyone of the Chinooks figured in the scoring, proving Moe's contention early in the season that he had the necessary depth this season to go all the way.

None of the Victoria players could match the 23-point performance of Killarney's Doug Dougan but four players hit double figures.

Steady Dave Wirtanen topped the Chinook scoring with 16 points while league scoring champion Ollie Moilanen contributed 15 points, Drew Schroeder added 11 and Glen Moffat had 10.

Rod Fields, who sparked Victoria with 25 points on Thursday, just missed, contributing nine points.

TRIED EVERYTHING

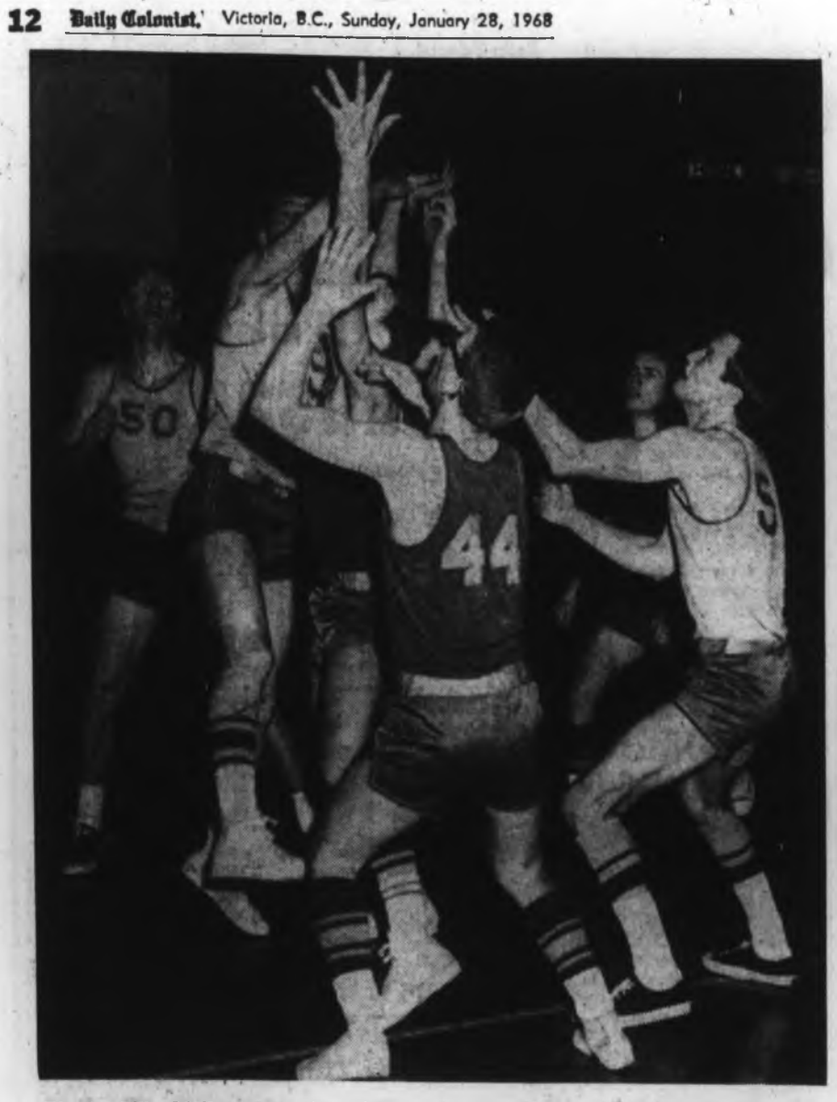

Killarney tried everything to rattle Chinooks, starting with a man-to-man defence and when Victoria decimated it, switched to their vaunted zone defence, but Chinooks broke it without much trouble for the second straight time.

Playing with poise, Victoria worked the ball incessantly, waiting for the good shot and then sinking it, more times than Killarney would like to remember.

The visitors, behind, 28-39 at the half, cut the margin to seven points midway through the second half but Chinooks closed with a flourish, hitting for eight straight points to put the game completely out of reach with a few minutes left.

McCubbin Rink Unbeaten Three Others Still Alive

NEW WESTMINSTER — Bob McCubbin of Richmond was the only undefeated rink in the Pacific Coast Curling Association men's playdowns Saturday at Royal City Curling Club in New Westminster.

McCubbin, who drew a bye in the first round of the six-rink playoff to choose the PCCA representative for the B.C. championship against the winner of the B.C. Curling Association playdowns, won the "A" event with a convincing, 12-4, victory over Gary Merrett's rink from Duncan.

Eliminated after the first day's play were former world champion Lyall Dagg and John Arnet, both of Vancouver.

McCubbin handed Dagg, who drew the other first-round bye, his first loss, 10-3, and then Jake Block from Abbotsford eliminated him in the "B" event, 9-8.

Keith Dagg's Victoria rink rebounded from an 8-9 loss to Merrett in the first round to eliminate Arnet, 8-7, in "B" competition after Block tripped the Vancouver rink, 8-7, the first loss.

Keith Dagg meets Block and McCubbin faces Merrett again in the "B" semifinals this morning. Finals are scheduled for the afternoon and should someone else besides McCubbin win the "B" event, a playoff will be held in the evening.

Next game: Today—Kamloops at New Westminster.

Victoria Cougars, who haven't scored the first goal in their last seven games, last night ran away and hid from Kamloops Rockets, 5-3, at Memorial Arena.

A driving first period, in which the Cougars shot often and well, saw the locals run up a 4-0 lead that was never threatened. In their last seven games, Cougars won two, lost four and tied one while dropping out of playoff contention. And the inability to score before they were trailing was a big factor.

Although the squad waited too long in the season to jell, Saturday's effort delighted a crowd of 1,561.

Actually the game ran against the expected format. With Rockets only able to dress 12 men, it figured to be Kamloops making the early drive and Victoria coming hard at the end.

It was a disappointing night for Randy Rota, the 42-goal scoring whiz, who went home with nothing to show for the evening but a fat lip. Somehow he got whacked in the face early in the game and was rested for a while. He never looked his usual dangerous self, although he came up with three or four good tries.

Dennis Ferrill, who was wheeling and dealing better than in recent games, opened the scoring. Leading the play, he went in the corner to dig the puck out, and deflected Barry Clarke's hard shot at 6.47. In less than four minutes, Stacy Whiting blasted a slider from the blue line that went in off defenceman Larry Morley's shoulder for the big defenceman's first score of the season.

GOW UNASSISTED

That was all the scoring until the last minute of the first period. At 19:05, Greg Gow got an unassisted goal. Half a minute later, the puck was knocked away from a Kamloops attack and Dave Williams finished off a beautiful three-way passing attack with Gow and Terry Mitchell.

In the second period, Kamloops took over the attack but heavy pressure on Murray Finlay resulted in only one goal as Ken Tarnow cashed a pass from Grant Evans at 8:42. Kamloops kept the heat on to open the third with Marv Ferg doing the damage on a pass from Tarnow. But Victoria cooled the Rockets when Larry Limacher really set up Neil Sanders on the open corner of the net. Evans' unassisted goal for Rockets at 18:16 was an anti-climax.

HONEST EFFORTS

Doug Anderson got good honest efforts from all of his lines, and the defence turned in a solid effort. Bob Webb was outstanding and partner Al McIvor also turned in a great game.

The decisive win over the Rockets was sweet reward for the hustle and shooting. In five previous games, Victoria lost five, including one here when a Rota goal at 19:59.9 beat them 5-4.

In other action, Vernon Essos scored a 5-3 win over Kelowna at Vernon.

Four New Records In Just Two Days

KIMBERLEY, South Africa (AP) — South Africa's Karen Muir broke another pair of women's swimming world records — for 100 metres and 110 yards in one minute, 6.7 seconds.

The tall 15-year-old sensation eclipsed her own world mark of 1:07.5 for 110 yards and the 100-metre standard of 1:07.1 set by Canada's Elaine Tanner at the Pan-American Games in Winnipeg last July 30.

FIRST TWO RECORDS

The distance of 100 metre is equal to 109 yards, one foot, so her time for 110 yards covers both the metric and yard records.

The night before she shattered world records for 200 metres and 220 yards backstroke with a time of 2:24.1.

STILL BARRED

Whether the leggy youngster will enter the Olympic Games in Mexico City next October will depend on whether South Africa is readmitted to the Games by the International Olympic Committee meeting this week in Grenoble, France.

South Africa was barred from the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo because of her apartheid policy in sports.

Victoria Seniors Advance

Rinks skipped by Gordie Moore and Ed Valleau from the host Victoria Curling Club advanced to the semi-finals of the "A" event of the South Vancouver Island seniors playoff Saturday and automatically claimed two of the four berths for the Island.

Moore and Valleau, who met today at 3 p.m., have won two of the four South-Island berths in the Vancouver Island championships at Alberni Valley Curling Club, Feb. 3 and 4.

Two Vancouver Island rinks will play in the Pacific Coast Curling Association championships at Harrison Hot Springs, Feb. 24 and 25. The B.C. final is at Vancouver Curling Club, Feb. 26 and 27.

Still in the running of the "B" event for the remaining two berths in the Island playoffs are Jack Moir and William Hansen on Esquimalt and Eric Smeaton and Art Anderson of the VCC.

Full-Court Press Wins for Everett

Everett Junior College built up a 44-21 halftime lead and went on to defeat University of Victoria Vikings, 79-57, Saturday in an exhibition men's basketball game at Gordon Head Campus.

One of the top junior college teams in Washington State, Everett rattled Vikings in the first half with a devistating full-court press and Vikings could only hit on 28 per cent of their field attempts.

Vikings finally started to hit in the second half but Everett was far too consistent for Victoria to make a comeback.

New Tennis Group Forms Pro League

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Formation of a professional tennis league in which Rod Laver, Ken Rosewall and Pancho Gonzales have been signed to contracts was announced Saturday.

George MacCall, a former U.S. Davis Cup team captain, told a news conference the organization was named the National Tennis League.

MacCall said five players had been signed for contracts totalling $1,000,000.

He said Laver, 29, the Australian pro standout, received a contract guaranteeing him $500,000 over a five-year period.

The others are Gonzales, 39, of Los Angeles; Andres Gimeno, 30, of Spain; and Fred Stolle, 29, and Rosewall, 33, both of Australia.

When three more players have been signed, MacCall said, a world tour will begin about April 1 and will last 40 weeks.

The first open tennis tournament, the British hardcourt championship, is scheduled to begin April 22 at Bournemouth, England.

Dave Dixon has formed a similar pro group, World Championship Tennis, in New Orleans, La., with eight players.

Island Areas Exist On Skeleton Health Care

SALTAIR — Worried parents and professional people recently discussed and criticized the shortage of doctors and psychiatrists north of the Malahat.

About 30, people met informally in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Les Knight, Saltair, a district which is not included in North Cowichan or Ladysmith.

It must depend on medical aid from the Central Vancouver Island Health unit, which has one doctor serving an area from the Malahat to Qualicum in the east, and to Tofino in the west.

There is only one psychiatrist to cover this same area, plus North Island centres as well.

Mrs. Knight said professional counselling services for parents in her area are so overloaded with work that their usefulness to an individual negligible.

The meeting was sparked by an official's comment: "The parents don't care, that's why we don't have more counselling services."

Attending the meeting, but not in an official capacity, were: Robert Strachan, NDP MLA; Dr. Charles Gregory, Victoria psychiatrist; T. B. Beames, special counsellor for two mid-Island school districts; E. G. Beck, counsellor at Ladysmith Secondary School; Charles Lonsdale, teacher at Chemainus Secondary; Rev. D. S. Lewis, Ladysmith United Church; Mrs. D. S. Lewis, occupational class teacher Chemainus Secondary; Rev. W. J. Hill, Chemainus Anglican Church, and Mrs. Elaine Kelly, president of the Chemainus and Ladysmith branch of the Mental Health Association.

Gregory

In addition, there were about 20 parents.

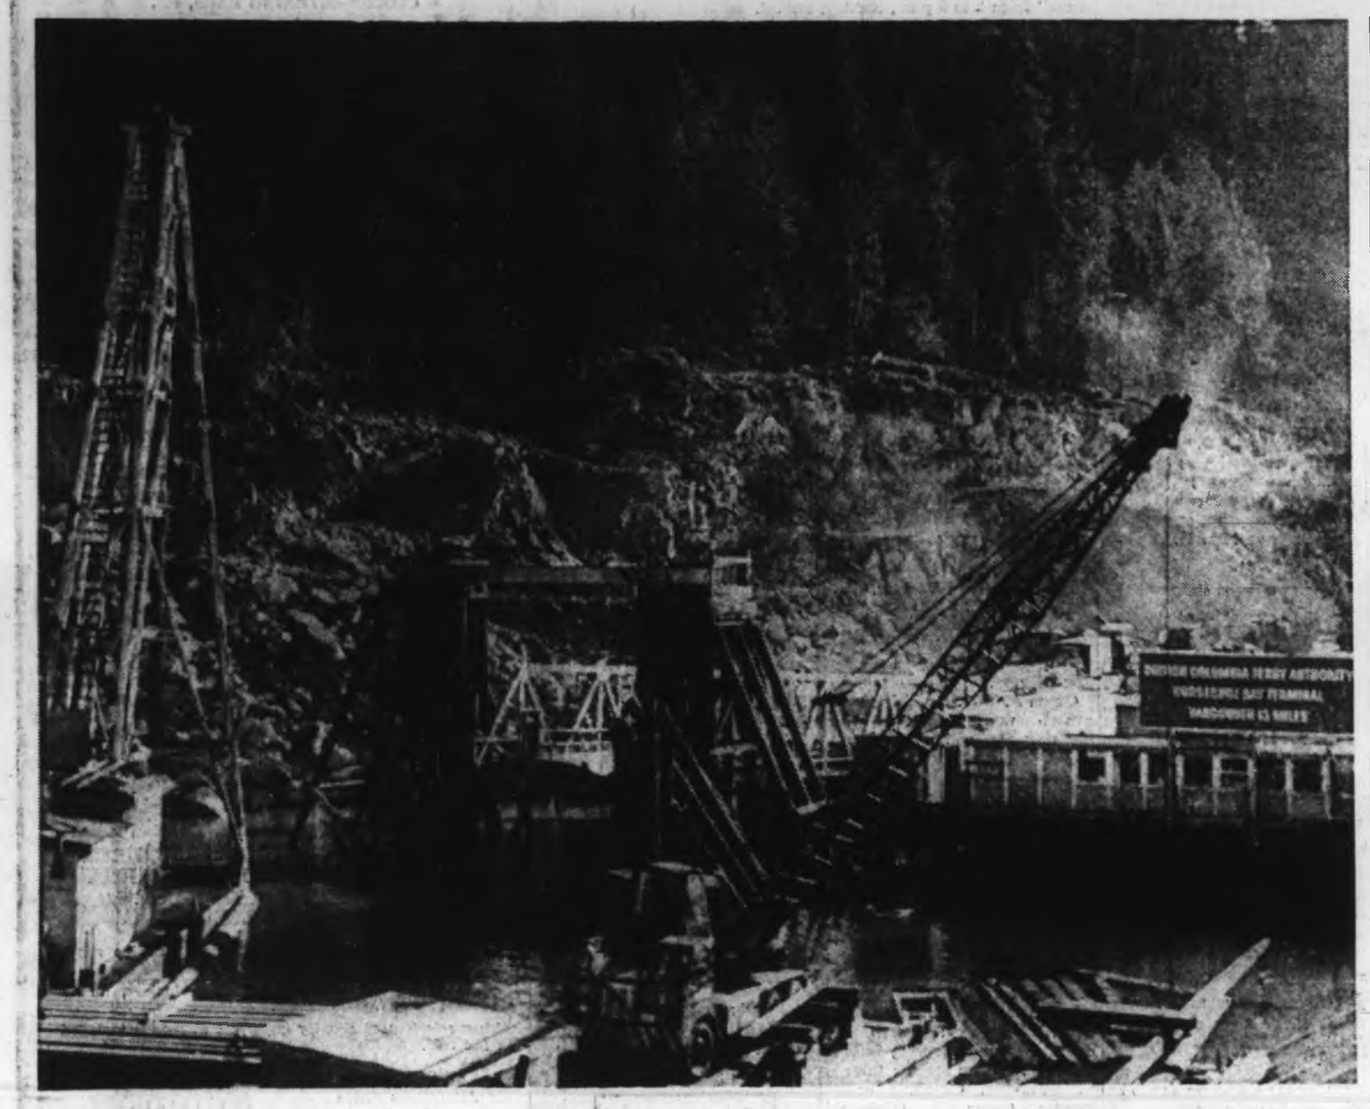

Mrs. Ann Johnson, chairman of the Ladysmith recreation commission, was also present.

Questions, answers and opinions were exchanged. Sometimes quietly, sometimes heatedly, when parents let their emotions show about the "lack of cohesion between parents and teachers developing youngsters into useful citizens."

Dr. Gregory said he hoped schools would quickly become "human resource centres," adding that a community education committee composed of educators, health workers and interested citizens might possibly bring this about sooner.

Mrs. Knight said "Let's cut the red tape and get something done." She plans to organize more meetings shortly.

Noon Crash at Campbell River

Driver Dragged By Death Car

CAMPBELL RIVER — A 21-year-old Campbell River man was dragged helplessly while his car spun out of control Saturday. He died moments later.

The man, Harry Martin Seaton, 21, was driving north on Dogwood Street shortly after noon. His car and that driven by William Simmons, 35, Campbell River, collided at the Evergreen Road intersection.

Seaton was thrown out of the car when his side door was smashed off, however he remained partly caught by the interior.

He was dragged helplessly while the car spun out of control, doing two turns before ramming into a ditch.

Three of his five passengers were hurt. Mrs. Carol Francis, Campbell River, is recovering in hospital with a broken arm.

Meanwhile, Esquimalt navy divers Saturday abandoned their search for a missing motorist in Upper Campbell Lake, 20 miles from Campbell River.

Leonard Turner, 24, Campbell River is missing in 100 feet of water after the car he was driving went out of control on a bridge on the Elk River Timber Co. logging road.

The car crashed over an embankment and came to rest for a few moments at the water's edge. A passenger, Ray Wagner, 24, Gold River, was unable to pull Turner free before the car slipped into the lake.

The accident happened in the early hours of Friday morning.

Mr. Turner has been listed as missing, presumed drowned.

The navy divers recovered the car Friday afternoon, resuming their search for Turner's body Saturday at first light.

However they could only remain 1½ hours below the surface at a time and the search was abandoned Saturday afternoon after no trace was found.

Vinegar Sours Situation

Parents Learn New Lessons

By JEAN MacGREGOR

LAKE COWICHAN — "Mommy, what's a meal worm?"

The next time Mrs. Margaret Martin's offspring asks her that question, she'll be ready with the answer.

She was one of many parents who went into classrooms to find out just what their children are learning.

It was part of Lake Cowichan Parent-Teacher Association's attempt to "bridge the gap between parents and teachers."

Parents went into classrooms to get a condensed version of the science education being offered their children.

Parents discovered today's students are closely involved in their studies, and their learning situations are first hand.

Each student has an opportunity to observe and experiment in every area he studies.

In one classroom teacher Bill Pack asked the parents, "Tell me what you find out about meal worms."

Mr. Pack did not explain anything to the parents; he just offered the services of the classroom.

Mrs. Martin said, "I found out they have six legs in front, burrow in bran and salt, dislike vinegar, and look like bald caterpillars under the microscope.

"These are only a few things I learned, and Mr. Pack didn't tell us anything."

In another room, Dan Calleberg had prepared a physics laboratory to illustrate the properties of water.

Mrs. Martin stated, "Interested individuals were not told what the properties were, but were directed through experiments, on their own, to discover these properties."

In the new science room, at Stanley Gordon Elementary School, Clay Rutherford directed experiments in which he led parents to discover what happens to gases when heated. The gas they worked with was air.

Mrs. Martin said, "It was fun to be back in school, more fun than I can remember. I was really involved, especially with the meal worms."

Cowichan Farmers Celebrate 100th

A highlight of the 100th annual meeting of the Cowichan Agricultural Society and Farmers' Institute, Saturday, was the presentation of a life membership plaque to a hard-working member.

Bill Barker, secretary of the organization for the past 22 years, will retire from his position as manager of the CAS office at the end of the month. However, he will continue as secretary.

The presentation was made by society chairman, Henry Westwick, who explained the life membership plaque had the distinction of being two firsts.

"This is the first and only life membership to be presented at our 100th meeting, and it is the first plaque to be drawn and designed by one of our own 4-H members," he said.

Six Directors

The plaque was designed by Maureen Kinney, a member of the Cowichan Jersey Club and the Cowichan Valley basting belles.

Six directors were elected, five for a three-year term, and one for a two-year unexpired term made vacant by the resignation of Hamish Mutter, after 20 years with the society, including five years as chairman.

Re-elected to office were Tom Groves, Don Morton, Stan Owens and Henry Westwick. New directors are Harold Myhre and Bill Wikkerink.

Coincided

In his directors' report, chairman Westwick stated, "This meeting ends the first century of operation of the society. Perhaps the main reason the society did not embark on many centennial projects as such was because our centennial coincided with that of our country.

"One project was definitely labelled as a centennial one. The Cowichan Agricultural Society was host to the B.C. Federation of Agriculture midsummer directors' meeting during the first week of June.

"The BCFA thanked the CAS in a unique manner for the hospitality by using a commemorative stamp on all its correspondence."

Mr. Westwick continued, "It has been the policy of the CAS that orderly planning and development of Pioneer Park-Exhibition grounds area be carried out. The society has held title to approximately three acres of Exhibition grounds since its purchase.

"Because the area was purchased mainly from public funds and because multiple ownership makes development more difficult, the directors felt the society should offer the title to its property (except the fenced-off area around the administration building) to the municipality of North Cowichan with the hope that development of the area for community use be carried out.

Milk Prices

"The municipality was happy to accept, thanked us for our community spirit and offered to pay the cost of surveys required."

Mr. Westwick also spoke on the visit to the district of John Wilson, senior dairy officer from New South Wales, Australia.

Mr. Wilson arrived last July, and he was shown various dairy farms using different housing and milking methods.

Mr. Westwick stated, "He showed a keen interest in these as well as the quality and prices of milk. He was also interested in the type and production of our cows."

Lay Complaint

The sale of a pill in the district last year was brought up by Mr. Westwick. "Last winter and spring there was a salesman in the district selling a pill as a cure and preventive of mastitis. This pill has a milk-sugar base, with an insignificant amount of other elements.

"While the pill can do no harm, it apparently cannot cure either. If anyone feels he has been defrauded in purchasing the pill, he may lay a complaint by writing a letter to the secretary of Veterinary Association, enclosing a current sample of the pill sold to him.

"The Veterinary Association will then take any legal action necessary as the sale of the pill contragenes the Veterinary Act."

Mr. Westwick also said "This year saw us drop out of the district A Farmers' Institute. It was felt by the directors that we should speak to the government in a united voice, and the B.C. Federation of Agriculture is in the best position to do this for us."

Bus Aid

CAMPBELL RIVER — The local Old Age Pensioners Association will approach Vancouver Island Coach Lines Ltd. about the introduction of some form of public transportation in the district.

Members said it is a disadvantage not being able to get around without public transport.

DIMES MARCH

In other Campbell River news, members of the local Royal Purple lodge will donate $50 to the march for dimes campaign.

The lodge plans to try and help the Campbell River Family Service provide a day care centre for children of working mothers.

Nanaimo Will Build Island Arts Centre

By ARNOLD OLSON

NANAIMO — The Nanaimo Arts Council has decided a building to house the needs of the arts in the district will be built.

Projected time of fruition is 1971, centenary of British Columbia's entry into confederation.

Chairman Ebs Schulenberg said, "We must become a pressure group."

Doug Huggins, one of the men responsible for the construction of Vernon's Powerhouse Theatre, and the manager of the Kelowna Theatre will both be sought for advice.

The Nanaimo project will be a centre of artistic activity, from whittling to touring professional companies.

The council, which will meet every fourth Thursday, hopes to attract as many groups as possible.

EXPAND

Mr. Schulenberg has suggested a survey of the activity of arts-based groups be undertaken, and both the community programs branch of the education department and the provincial government be contacted for grants.

"We must preserve what we have, and expand even more," said Mr. Schulenberg.

"Native art is badly neglected; painting, handicraft, dancing, sculpture," he added.

He urged that groups use the new museum as much as possible.

He also suggested open-air exhibitions during the summer.

"Make Nanaimo the hub of artistic activities as well as the commercial hub," he stressed.

He suggested the council be a clearing house of area activities, amalgamating the efforts of now-separated publicity officers of the many clubs.

"We should have something in the papers and on the air every day.

"The arts should be in the forefront," he said.

The council has seemed to catch his enthusiasm; it has discussed plans to have various groups combine efforts in late September for a festival of arts spanning several days, culminating with the Beaux Arts Ball, already planned for the last Saturday of September.

Jubenville Reserved

DUNCAN—Weldon Jubenville, IWA president at Duncan, said he has reservations about Monday's meeting with Labor Minister Peterson, which coast industry officials and union leaders have been ordered to attend. The meeting will discuss contract proposals, which do not come up until June.

Some labor leaders on the Mainland Friday described the meeting as unprecedented.

Eight Charges Will Be Heard

LADYSMITH—Russell Charles McGuinness, 43, of Duncan was remanded without plea until Jan. 30, on eight charges of passing worthless cheques. Police claim all offenses occurred last December, six at Ladysmith and two at Chemainus.

Reward Offered For Gun Vandal

NANAIMO—More than $1,000 damage was caused to B.C. Hydro insulators during the week by a vandal or vandals armed with a 30.06 hunting rifle.

District manager Tom Humble said a reward of $250 leading to their arrest and conviction has been posted.

Mr. Humble warned of the danger to forests, livestock and people, including the vandals, from high voltage lines hanging loose. The most recent shooting knocked out Ladysmith's power for a short while, insulators had to be replaced.

Parksville Picked For Welfare Work

PARKSVILLE — Plans have been announced for the opening of a welfare department office in Parksville.

It will be in a building to be erected on property owned by Mrs. George Abernethy on the corner of Morison Avenue and McMillan Street in the centre of the village.

PARKING AREA

The building will be two-storied, of 2,400 square feet covering almost two lots. A paved parking area will be provided at the rear.

The building will be occupied in May. The welfare department will occupy the entire top floor, and will have a staff of seven social and office workers.

This will probably be a district branch of the welfare department to serve the surrounding area.

NANAIMO — The Empire Day Society will try and lure RCN warships into harbor to boost festivities this May 24.

At its recent meeting, the group replaced Les Mottishaw (who will help head organization of Great Bathtub races) with Peter Littlewood.

Mr. Mottishaw will remain with the society as a director.

The budget will be raised $800 to $3,100, a junior chamber of commerce spokesman told the group.

A $100 prize will be awarded to the best over-all float in the Empire Day parade.

Milestone for Gold River

Indian Farmers

Social Worker Spurs Program

DUNCAN — "It looks promising, but it will not be a fast development. It will require sacrifice and hard work for the Indians to become self-sufficient."

Co-op development worker John Trew made the optimistic comment after several weeks in the Cowichan Valley.

He came here at the request of the Cowichan Indian Band and he is working with interested groups within the Cowichan Indian agency.

ASKED FOR HELP

Currently he works with the Cowichan Band's agricultural committee to explore possibilities in farming.

Mr. Trew stressed his job is not to convince Indian people of the value of certain programs. The Indians requested his assistance.

Now the Cowichan Band's farm development committee and Mr. Trew are studying the feasibility of producing corn silage, hay, strawberries and blackberries for sale.

He said "From this study it seems the most lucrative venture would be the growing of small fruit."

MORE JOBS SOON

"There are indications for a good market at Duncan and a greater number of people could be employed."

Before any project could be started here, land would have to be secured and a meeting will be held soon with Indian land holders to discuss all aspects of the proposed program and to explain the formation of a possible co-operative.

Mr. Trew said co-operation can have various forms.

It could resolve into a co-op, a company or a partnership, but the formation of a group is essential to become a legal entity to raise outside capital.

PRELIMINARY

He said that applies to various projects which could be carried out by Indian people.

Mr. Trew said "it is a training on a small scale from where people can take the next step to bigger development in business organization."

Centre's Youth Groups Merge Mutual Problems

By MARY TAYLOR

PORT ALBERNI — "This is the most exciting thing that has happened to us since we started our work with the Indian Leadership Education Program."

The speaker, Thomas Brown, with co-worker Marjorie Smith is a member of a program sponsored by the department of extension, University of British Columbia.

Mr. Brown and Miss Smith were observers at a meeting in the Port Alberni Friendship Centre, when more than 125 young people, members of groups using the centre, undertook to solve some of their mutual problems, and agreed on shared responsibilities.

The visitors took no part in the proceedings.

The young people, under the chairmanship of Chuck Watts, made their own decisions on a wide variety of subjects, from responsibility for policing dances to contributions for use of the upper hall.

To help members meet one another, a dance sponsored by all the groups will be held Feb. 17.

A committee consisting of a representative of each of six groups attending, was set up to arrange publicity, hire a band, make decorations and do all other planning.

An invitation to all senior students at the residence to attend was extended, and Mr. Andrews agreed that there would be no objection, provided good supervision was provided.

Explaining why the centre had been out of bounds except on rare occasions, Mr. Andrews said that at first, some problems of supervision and transportation had arisen.

"If our young people get into trouble, both the residence and myself come under criticism.

"You realize I must protect the youngsters. But I have no objection provided I am assured there will be no liquor and the youngsters for whom I am responsible will not be subjected to criticism," Mr. Andrews said.

"I see no reason why they should not attend at your invitation. We will have to discuss age limits."

Friendship Centre treasurer Dave Hoops brought the group up to date on the anticipated revenue from federal and provincial sources, and the projected cost of operation for the year ahead.

Some of the young people were astounded to find it will cost about $12,000 to operate the centre with a full time manager for a year.

The newly-installed heating plant must be paid up.

In addition to the manager, a salary of $30 a month is paid the secretary.

Further renovations are needed to enable the centre to provide additional services.

Equipment of all kinds, from kitchen cups to games is required.

While the young people and all other groups connected with the centre have been permitted to use it for meetings and functions without charge, groups holding dances will now pay for use of the upper hall.

After much deliberation, a percentage of profit was decided on rather than a flat fee, such as is charged to outside groups who occasionally rent the hall.

They decided this was more fair than in the past when some groups have contributed generously, while others have made no contribution at all.

Keeping in mind the purpose of the Friendship Centre, the group representatives decided that the upper hall would be the exclusive use of the group sponsoring the dance.

But the newly-redecorated lower hall, with its lounge facilities and kitchen area, will at all times remain open to all members and visitors.

The dancers will be welcome to use the kitchen.

They also decided to leave purchase of soft-drinks, gum and cigarettes to the centre, but each group would be responsible for selling these at its own dances.

This year the young groups are operating without outside help, under the guiding eye of adult Indian counsellors, two or more to each group.

John Andrews and the executive of the student council at the Indian residence were guests at the meeting, and the student council was invited to participate in the activities of the centre.

Faced with the responsibility for providing supervision and policing, the young people also became aware of such things as fire and health bylaws.

Turkey Expels Syrian Envoy

ANKARA (AP) — Turkey has ordered the Syrian military attache out of the country because he was spying for a third country, informed sources said. The sources said the attache, Col. Ibrahim Rifai, was caught with material "damaging to Turkish national security."

Hooded Gunmen Murder Five

MANILA (UPI)—Hooded gunmen killed five men and wounded two others when they opened fire with pistols, submachine guns and carbines on a crowd watching a cockfight. The shooting occurred in San Fernando, La Union Province, about 150 miles north of Manila.

Military Student Wins U.K. Award

DUNCAN — Gordon Peter Harris, Koksilah, an engineering student at the Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont., has been awarded one of 45 Canadian 1968 Athlone fellowships by the British government.

Harris, the only student selected from the Island, will be eligible to study for one or two years in Britain. The scholarships (670 have been distributed since 1951) are made on the basis that engineers return to Canada to follow their careers.

NANAIMO — The local lodge of the Croatian Society of Canada will celebrate the 37th anniversary of the lodge, and the 101st anniversary of the society in Canada with a banquet and dance on Saturday, Feb. 17, in St. Peter's Church auditorium.

PARKSVILLE — Hope for traffic lights at the intersection of the Port Alberni and Island Highways in Parksville seems brighter following a letter received by village council from the district engineer for the highways department. The letter states that it is possible that a light will be installed in 1968 if funds permit. But it is pointed out that there would have to be some changes made in parking regulations in the area.

DUNCAN — Funeral services were held Saturday for Enoch Daniel Dougan, who died suddenly at Duncan. A native of Cobble Hill, he was born in 1887 to pioneer residents, the late James and Annie Dougan. He had a market garden farm until retiring 20 years ago.

View Royal Amalgamation

Campbell's Leap Straddles Issue

By NANCY BROWN

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell jumped into the middle of the View Royal amalgamation hassle Friday, landing with one foot firmly on each side.

He said he is in favor of amalgamation of the panhandle area with Esquimalt, and at the same time indicated money will be forthcoming for a sewer survey which has been dubbed a "red herring" by amalgamation proponents.

Mr. Campbell said the sewer survey does not depend in any way on the results of the Feb. 3 amalgamation vote.

SURVEY USED

The suggestion has been made, he added, that a Monday night meeting to discuss the survey is somehow connected with the amalgamation issue.

It appears various groups are trying to use the survey to try to whip up support for or to oppose amalgamation, he said.

In dealing with all petitions and counter-petitions over the years his office has tried to provide technical information only.

'IN FAVOR'

"However," he said, "I am personally in favor of amalgamation."

Mr. Campbell indicated that money for the survey would be forthcoming through a legislative amendment — it could be handled under an amendment to the legislative enabling and validating act.

NO NIBBLING

Al Beasley, View Royal's regional representative and fire chief, said Friday he is not opposed to amalgamation but he wants to see total amalgamation of Greater Victoria, not one municipality nibbling away at adjacent provincial land.

"If this continues the remaining area of View Royal will be drastically reduced and financing made more difficult for any projects," he said.

FUNDS AVAILABLE

He said the fire protection district knows where it can get the funds for a sewer survey which will include the panhandle, by an engineering firm. This will be discussed at Monday night's meeting at 8 p.m. in the Community Hall.

Object of the survey will be to determine the proper location of sewer lines, and individual costs, so that View Royal will be ready to go ahead with laterals when the regional board puts in its trunk lines.

View Royal Fire trustee E. J. Stancil said the fire trustees are staying out of the amalgamation issue.

"We really don't have any objection, if these people want to leave the district," he said.

He does not want to see the fire trustees responsible for sewers in View Royal.

'NOT OUR BUSINESS'

"We don't feel this is our business," he said.

"However, we do agree that a survey is needed so that people can see exactly what is needed and then decide how best to get it, and the fire trustees seem to be the only group able to raise the money for this."

The trustees had expected to raise the money as an improvement district under the water act, but it now appears they would have to change and come under the municipal act.

VOTE INTENDED

"We don't know if we want to do this," he said.

The purpose of Monday night's meeting, said Mr. Stancil, had been to vote on whether or not to have the survey.

"I don't think we shall be taking a vote, Monday because I doubt if we shall have decided if we want to change our status," he said.

"Maybe we should cancel Monday's meeting until the fire trustees have a definite issue to bring up."

Contracts Discussed

The Saanich personnel committee held its first 1968 contract talks meeting Friday with the firemen's union. Municipal officials will meet the policemen's union next Wednesday and inside and outside employees toward the end of the week. No union requests have been disclosed.

Saanich Firemen Eye Resuscitator

The Saanich fire department, which operates the municipality's ambulance, is going to have a close look at a machine that can revive people whose hearts have stopped beating.

Fire Chief Joe Sutherland said Friday the heart-lung resuscitator is used on heart patients to stimulate circulation and ventilation by chest compression and oxygen supply.

It is small enough to be carried in an ambulance and can be used to save lives in the critical period while a patient is being transferred from home to hospital.

The fire chief saw the apparatus in San Francisco at the International Association of Fire Chiefs convention last summer.

The Feb. 5 demonstration will be attended by Dr. Peter Ransford, chairman of the British Columbia Medical Association's traffic and safety committee, and cardiologist Dr. George Woodwark, also of Victoria.

Baird's Rest Haven Rap Unfair, Invalid—Curtis

Ald. Robert Baird's criticisms of Rest Haven Hospital are unfair and invalid, the chairman of the Regional Board said Friday.

Reeve Hugh Curtis added:

"It is obvious Ald. Baird is not quite up to date on the procedures set down by the regional hospital district. I do not consider it fair to say Rest Haven's submissions are premature."

Ald. Baird, who is a member of the board of Royal Jubilee Hospital, this week claimed Rest Haven's request for money to begin a new hospital should not have been made until receipt of the Agnew-Peckham report on the area's long-range hospital needs.

The alderman said he did not think the Seventh Day Adventist-operated hospital was "observing protocol."

However, Reeve Curtis said Rest Haven's request for $150,000 for the purchase of land for a new hospital was "proper."

"The information they gave us is helpful in assessing the hospital problems in this district. Nevertheless, no action will be taken until we receive the Agnew-Peckham report," added the reeve.

He said Rest Haven's problems were "particularly serious" — apparently a reference to the frequent reports of the hospital's antiquated building.

The regional board's chairman said the list of improvements needed at Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's, also presented this week, was an elaboration of an earlier enunciated crash program.

"Their situations are quite different from Rest Haven," said Reeve Curtis.

Students Face Fees For Parking

By STEVE HUME

Students who drive to the University of Victoria will have to pay for the luxury after Sept. 1.

University president Dr. Malcolm Taylor announced Friday the board of governors has approved a system which will see students, faculty and staff pay an annual charge for parking their cars on campus.

Acting on recommendation of a special parking committee set up to deal with parking violation appeals, the board decided students will pay $5 annually for general lots, while faculty and senior staff will be required to pay $15 per annum for reserved areas.

The recommendation was made in an effort to offset the annual operating costs of maintaining and patrolling university parking lots, a committee spokesman said. Total operating costs for the lots last year ran to $16,500, or $7.50 per car for an approximate number of 2,200 cars.

The University of Victoria is one of only three Canadian universities which have not yet implemented a system of parking fees. At UBC, faculty and staff pay $15 per session, students in preferred lots pay fees of $10 and patrons of regular lots pay $5.

The students' Alma Mater Society discussed the implications of the parking fees at an in-camera meeting where a motion of disapproval was defeated.

President David McLean said the motion will be introduced again at the next meeting Sunday night. He said the implementation of parking fees for students constitutes an indirect increase in tuition fees.

Library Project

Ottawa Money Aids Art Dictionary

The University of Victoria's McPherson Library will produce a biographical dictionary of Canadian artists with the help of a $10,000 grant from the Canada Council.

The grant was announced today by the Canada Council as part of an award list totalling $55,570. The work is expected to be ready for publication this year.

The project is being carried out by staff members of the library's reference department, said Peter Garvie, head of the university's fine arts department. A cross-Canada advisory panel will assist.

The dictionary will list biographical data on outstanding Canadians in the creative and performing arts, as well as in literature, said Mr. Garvie.

Reference staff at the university's McPherson Library have been gathering biographical material for the past year.

The finished work will offer capsule biographies of 1,200 to 1,400 authors, artists, composers and representatives of the performing arts in Canada since the beginning of the 20th century.

The university said supplements issued annually or every two years will keep the material up to date.

TB Seal Apology:

Shocking Stocking Only a Reminder

The B.C. Tuberculosis-Christmas Seal Society said Friday it "very much regrets" any ill feeling generated in Victoria over its "shocking stocking" reminder letter.

Mildred Jeffery, public information officer for the society, said many letters and telephone calls have come in from Victoria as a result of a letter which contained this poem:

"Twas the week after Christmas, And we found it quite shocking . . . Your Christmas Seal gift was not in our stocking."

Miss Jeffery explained: "It was meant only as a reminder to those who might have forgotten us during the Christmas rush and was in no way meant to offend people who have been faithful supporters over the years.

"The letter is particularly annoying to those who have contributed and we do apologize."

She said the system of handling the society's annual campaign was changed this year to help reduce overall costs. This meant some "teething problems" which have been reviewed, and the society feels, rectified for future campaigns.
